ASSISTANCE, Capt. Buckle, left Portsmouth on Saturday afternoon for Jersey with the 12th Regiment on board, comprising 16 officers and 387 men, also 51 women and 57 children. She has been detained since Wednesday in the harbour on account of the boisterous weather.

BEACON, Com. Hand, was in the Persian Gulf by last accounts.

BLANCHE, Capt. Knowles, arrived at Jamaica from Halifax on Oct. 28.

BOADICEA, Comdre. Richards, C.B., was at Simon's Bay on Nov. 9. The Dido will meet the Commodore at Ascension on Jan. 10, and then proceed to Simon's Bay as senior officer's ship.

BRUISER was commissioned on Monday by Lieut. L. Fanshaw, as tender to the Royal Adelaide, with a complement of 38, for service on the west coast of Ireland.

CHAMPION. Capt. George R. Hope, who is to commission this ship on the 7th inst. at Sheerness, entered the Navy in 1854, and served as mate in the Euryalus, Capt. John W. Tarleton, C.B., at Portsmouth, in the Mediterranean, and with the Channel Squadron from April 1, 1860, until promoted to lieutenant, March 13, 1861. On May 3 following he was appointed to the Challenger, Capt. J. J. Kennedy, C.B., fitting for the West Indies and North America, and remained until the spring of 1862. He was appointed, April 27, 1863, to the Royal Oak, Capt. F. A. Campbell, fitting for service with the Channel Squadron, and on Oct. 26 following was transferred to the Falcon, Com. George H. Parkin, fitting for Australia. The Falcon sailed from Spithead Nov. 10 following, arrived at Madeira Dec. 2, at Sydney March 6, 1864, and left on the 12th for Auckland. She afterwards visited Wellington, Adelaide, Middleton Island, Wellington, Tauranga, &c., and finally left the station for England June 6, 1868, arriving at Spithead on Sept. 22 to pay off, after nearly five years' service in Australia. He was promoted to commander Oct. 16, 1868, and on May 24, 1871, was appointed to the Glasgow, Capt. T. M. Jones, fitting for the East Indies, and remained until appointed, Jan. 6, 1875, to the command of the Boscawen, from which he was posted Sept. 7, 1876.

CLEOPATRA, Capt. F. Durrant. While the Detached Squadron was at Vigo, the Cleopatra was despatched on a salvage expedition, a merchant vessel having gone ashore in the bay. It was found on the arrival of the Cleopatra at the scene of the accident that her offers to tow off the vessel were unavailing, as she had managed to knock too large a hole in her bottom to admit of patching up, and she was accordingly left on the rocks.

COCKATRICE, Com. H. T. Grenfell, is to be paid off at Malta, and to receive a new crew before resuming her duties in the Danube. She has been employed on the Mediterranean station ever since she left England in 1861, and her last recommission dates from Galatz, October, 1879. It was then reported of her that she would only run for two years without very extensive repairs to hull and machinery and the supply of new boilers, her present boilers having been considerably patched up.

COQUETTE, Lieut.-Com. J. Burr, will arrive at Constantinople shortly from Smyrna.

DASHER, Com. V. Anson, arrived at Jersey from Portsmouth on Nov. 23, and remains.

DEFENCE, Capt. A. Thrupp. On Thursday a court-martial, composed of Capt. W. B. Grant, Royal Adelaide, president; Capt. R. Bradshaw, C.B., Impregnable; Capt. G. D. Morant, Valorous; Capt. A. Buller, C.B.; Com. A. F. FitzGeorge, Salamis; and Mr. W. Eastlake, Deputy-Judge-Advocate of the Fleet, assembled on board the Royal Adelaide, flagship at Devonport, for the trial of Mr. Henry Edward Wildman, assistant-paymaster of the Defence, who was charged with having on Sept. 28 suppressed an Admiralty letter, dated Sept. 25, which it was his duty to have shown to the commanding officer of the ship without delay, and also with having on Oct. 11 deserted from his ship. Com. C. R. Harris, of the Defence, prosecuted. The Deputy-Judge-Advocate read the circumstantial letter, which stated that the Defence was at Rock Ferry on the morning of Sept. 28, and when the Service letters arrived they were taken into the paymaster's office. William Adams, a writer, opened a letter addressed to the commanding officer of the ship from the Commander-in-Chief at Devonport. Adams read the letter, retained the envelope, and gave the letter to the prisoner to read. He read it, and kept it back from the letters which were handed over to the commanding officer. Later in the day Adams reported to the senior assistant-paymaster that the letter had come, and had not been given to the commanding officer; but no steps were taken by Mr. Johnson, the senior assistant-paymaster, in relation thereto, and nothing further was known of the receipt of the communication. The prisoner was granted leave of absence from the 9th to the 11th, but did not return to his ship at the expiration of his leave. In the meantime a telegram had been received from the Commander-in-Chief at Devonport asking why a reply to the Admiralty letter of the 25th in regard to Assist.-Pymr. Wildman had not yet been transmitted. Mr. Wildman was then absent, but Adams, the writer, gave an account from memory of the contents of the letter. It was at once thought Mr. Wildman did not intend returning, and steps were taken accordingly, but the prisoner did subsequently come on board accompanied by his father. The prisoner handed in a written statement, in which he said: "I have pleaded guilty to both charges against me, for there is no other course open to me. But there are circumstances connected with the conduct which brought me into this painful position, which, when fully and honestly explained, will, I feel sure, give a complexion to the case very different from that which the language of the charges suggests to the mind. The charges, though separated for judicial purposes, are so intimately associated that what I have to urge in extenuation of my culpability will apply generally to both. My certificates which are before the Court will show that up to the date of my leaving the Northampton, on July 15 last, I had maintained the highest character for zeal, ability, and integrity from the paymaster and secretary under whom I served, and also from the Commander-in-Chief, Sir E. A. Inglefield. With reference to the first charge, I have to state that a few days after joining the Defence, a letter was received on board from the Commander-in-Chief at Devonport containing a very serious accusation against my character, and I feel sure the Court will understand and take into consideration my unwillingness, within a very days of my joining the ship, that my commanding officer should form a prejudical opinion of my character from a serious and erroneous accusation. Nevertheless, I see now that I gravely failed in my duty, and desire to express my sincere regret for my misconduct. My distress of mind at the occurrence so completely unhinged me that in a moment of desperation I left Liverpool without any premeditation, and in such utter wretchedness as hardly to know where I was going, and without any plan or project whatever. The accusation contained in the letter I have since been enabled to refute to the satisfaction, I feel sure, of their Lordships and everybody concerned. I would respectfully call the attention of the Court to a passage in the circumstantial letter, which states that I was brought on board the Defence by my father, and to say that I returned to the ship entirely of my own free will, and unaccompanied by anyone. I labour under great disadvantage in being tried here, inasmuch as having been for the past five and a half years on the North American and West Indies station, I am unable to produce witnesses to bear testimony as to my character and conduct in private life, but I could abundantly prove were the scene of this trial at Halifax or Bermuda, that I was on the most friendly terms with my messmates and superiors. I might also mention that during the past month my services have been sought by the Commander-in-Chief in the Mediterranean. I might venture to draw the attention of the Court to my youth, to the fact that this has been my first great mistake in life, that the best years of my life have been spent in the Service, and, in conclusion, to assure the Court that, with the bitter lesson of the past, I am in no danger of committing such folly again, but hope, if the Court deal mercifully with me, to regain the high position I occupied until only a few weeks ago, and to show by increased assiduity and careful behavour, not only my gratitude, but my real and unfeigned contrition." The President remarked that there was a discrepancy between the statement of the prisoner and the circumstantial letter as to whether he came on board or was brought on board. The prosecutor replied that he was not on board at the time the prisoner returned, but he had reason to believe that the prisoner did not return alone, and that his father came on board the next day. Certificates of character were next read, and all spoke in the highest possible terms of the ability and excellent demeanour of the prisoner. The Court, taking into consideration the exceptionally high certificates and the generally good character of the prisoner, adjudged him only to lose eighteen months' seniority and to be dismissed his ship.

Doterel. Com. Richard Evans, who will commission this ship on Tuesday, entered the Navy in 1855, and was employed as mate in the Donegal, Channel Squadron, from Jan. 4, 1860, until promoted to lieutenant, May 22, 1861. He was appointed to the Flying Fish, gun-vessel, on the 31st of the same month, and sailed for the West coast of Africa, where on June 20, 1862, he removed into the Brisk, and was paid off at Devonport, in Aug. 1863. He was appointed to the Alert, screw sloop, Oct. 6 following, and sailed for the Pacific, and returned to England, and was paid off May 30, 1868. On Dec. 9 following, he was appointed to the Cossack, fitting at Sheerness for Australia, where he remained till the close of 1871. He held command of the Martin, sloop, tender to the St. Vincent at Portsmouth, from Feb. 13, 1872, until promoted to commander, May 29 following, and on Oct. 31, 1873, was appointed 2nd captain of the Aurora, at Greenock, and remained until Dec. 1875. In June, 1877, he was appointed to recommission the Hart, gun-vessel, at Hong Kong, and returned with her to England, and was paid off early in the present year.

Dragon, Capt. Hutton, was at Zanzibar on Oct. 25, and after repair would sail for cruise on the East coast of Africa.

Dryad, Com. Hext, was at Rangoon on Nov. 5. She will probably visit Calcutta in December, and proceed thence to Trincomalee.

Eclipse, Capt. Rising, was at Rangoon on Nov. 5, and would remain there.

Egeria, Com. Charles Johnstone, sailed from Labuan for Singapore on Oct. 19.

Euphrates, Capt. Hand, arrived at Portsmouth on Sunday from Bombay, having previously landed the 48th Regiment at Queenstown for service in Ireland. In addition to the 48th, she had on board a number of invalids and time-expired men, the total being 56 officers and 920 men. She also brings 67 women and 140 children. Heavy weather was experienced by the Euphrates, especially after leaving Malta.

Euryalus, Capt. King, flagship of Rear-Admiral Jones, C.B., was at Trincomalee up to the 4th ult. (Had arrived same day from Rangoon, and would leave for Colombo and Bombay on the 9th ult.) She was at Bombay on the 23rd ult.

Fantôme, Com. Karslake, arrived at Port Royal from Montego Bay on Nov. 2, and would sail to join the flag at Bermuda about the 5th ult.

Fawn, Capt. Wharton, is to be paid off and recommissioned at Malta, for surveying service in the Red Sea.

Foxhound, Lieut.-Com. Nowell, left Singapore on May 19 for Carimata Strait, with orders to fix position of an unknown reef on which the ship Gwalia was wrecked. On the voyage back to Singapore, she fell in with the shipwrecked crew of the Dutch ship Gisbertus Hermanus, which had struck on the Rival Reef, Carimata Strait, and foundered in 20 minutes. They had been two days in the boat when picked up. On arrival at Singapore the long-expected orders for the North were received, and on June 3 she sailed for Saigon and Hong Kong. Arriving at the latter place on the 19th, and after refitting, she left for Yokohama on July 14, viâ the inland sea, calling at Nagasaki and Kobe. Her stay at Yokohama was short, as she sailed on the evening of her arrival, news having been received that the Iron Duke had gone ashore. The Foxhound proceeded to Hakodadi, and did a very pretty piece of steaming, averaging 8·5 knots for three days without forcing or using the blast. On arrival at Hakodadi (Aug. 3), found the Iron Duke and Modeste, the former having arrived from the scene of her disaster the same day. The next day were coaled and inspected by Capt. Meade, of the Modeste, who, notwithstanding the three weeks' steaming and previous coaling, made a most favourable report to the Commander-in-Chief. The same evening the ship was ordered to Chefoo, arriving there on Aug. 17. A pleasant three weeks was passed at Chefoo,—balls, theatricals, pic-nics, and other amusements affording a little relaxation after the past month's labours. On Sept. 11, at 5.30 p.m., the Vigilant (Vice-Admiral Coote) arrived at Chefoo. Five minutes after, the signal, "Prepare for sea," was seen. Our orders were to proceed to Hankow, where the Foxhound arrived, calling at Shanghai for coal and provisions, on Sept. 27, after a slight delay, owing to the coal giving out when about twenty miles off. Here, says our correspondent, we hope to spend the winter, but as we have just heard the Admiral has arrived at Shanghai, no one would be surprised if sailing orders were shortly received, and the ship sent goodness knows where.

Griffon, Com. Boardman, was at Antigua on Oct. 27, and would proceed to St. Kitts and St. Croix. A correspondent of the Western Morning News writes:—"The Griffon left English Harbour, Antigua, on the morning of Nov. 7, and arrived at St. Kitts the same evening. The following morning she embarked the President, Mr. Alexander W. Moir, C.M.G., and conveyed him to Anguilla, after which she proceeded to Sombrero. Of all the odd, wretched, rugged-looking little islands that are stuck here and there in the oceans of the world, Sombrero is the oddest I have seen. It is about a mile in length and a quarter in breadth. It is nearly wholly composed of phosphate of lime, and 430 men, inhabitants of St. Martin's, under the direction of Mr. J. Corfield, are employed quarrying and shipping this valuable commodity, in the interests, of course, of a company. It has also a fine lighthouse, which is of vast importance to ships entering and leaving the Caribbean Sea. It is a remarkable fact that there is not a woman on the island. The Griffon leaves St. Kitts on the 16th for Barbuda and Santa Cruz."

Himalaya, Capt. H. Brent, left Plymouth on Saturday, and proceeded direct for Queenstown. After disembarking the 25th Regiment, the Himalaya embarked the 64th for conveyance to Portsmouth. The Himalaya is about to be paid off, and her trip to Gibraltar and back is probably the last she will perform this commission. She was built at Mare's yard, at Blackwall, and launched in 1853, shortly after which she was bought by the Admiralty for £130,000, for the conveyance of troops to the Crimea. Her present commission dates from October, 1874, since which time she has had a tolerably extensive amount of repairs effected on board. Her machinery is now giving out, so the time has come to pay her off, after her more than six years' commission.

Invincible, Capt. Hon. E. R. Fremantle, C.B., arrived at Malta from Messina on Nov. 29.

Iris, Capt. E. H. Seymour. There is no foundation in fact for the statement which has been made that the steel despatch-vessel Iris is too weak in the hull for the vibration of her engines and screws, and that she will probably have to be brought home for the purpose of being strengthened. The Iris is strongly built, and there has never been any report from the ship indicating a doubt of the fact on the part of her officers. With respect to signs of pitting from corrosion which are said to be apparent on the steel-plating, these are understood to have been the result of a failure to remove the whole of the scale from the surface of the steel-plates below the water-line before the protective composition was first applied. Hence it has been necessary to clean the surface and recoat the plates, an operation which has been carried out at Malta.

Jumna, Capt. G. Parsons, left Malta for Portsmouth on Nov. 29. Capt. E. J. Church, who has been appointed to the command of this ship, vice Capt. G. Parsons, whose period of service has expired, entered the Navy in 1854, and served as mate in the Sanspareil, flagship, at Queenstown, of Rear-Admiral C. Talbot, from Feb. 20, 1861, until promoted to lieutenant, April 16, 1861. He was appointed to the Driver on the 7th of the following month, and sailed for the West Indies, where, on Dec. 16 of the same year, he removed into the Orlando, and returned to England, and was paid off early in 1863. On May 22 of the year last named he became flag-lieutenant to Rear-Admiral Sir S. C. Dacres, K.C.B., in the Edgar, attached to the Channel Squadron, which post he held until paid off, Dec. 14, 1865. He was additional in the Excellent, gunnery-ship at Portsmouth, from April 2, 1866, until Sept. 18, 1867, when he obtained command of the Tyrian, gunboat, in the Mediterranean, and was paid off from that vessel Sept. 30, 1868. He was advanced to the rank of commander Dec. 8, 1868, and obtained command of the Curlew, gun-vessel, at China, March 6, 1873, vice Com. D. Boyle, invalided, which he commanded until promoted to captain, Jan. 9, 1878. He subsequently studied for some time at the Royal Naval College.

Malabar, Capt. J. F. Grant, passed Gibraltar, homeward bound, on Nov. 29.

Orontes, Capt. Kinahan, having had rather a long spell of sea service, has a number of defects which require making good, and she has, consequently, been ordered to be taken in hand by the dockyard authorities without unnecessary delay. She is to leave again about the middle of next month, and will embark troops for Malta. She will be relieved of service between this port and Ireland by the Himalaya, which sails for Kingstown towards the end of this month, and will not be required to proceed from Ireland with troops beyond Gibraltar, where she will meet the Crocodile on her way to Bombay after her visit to Halifax. The Himalaya will take out for transfer to the Indian trooper a steam cutter specially built for the Indian Marine Survey Department.—Portsmouth Times.

Pelican, Com. F. R. Dicken, was off Callao on Oct. 16.

Philomel, Com. Berners, was at Aden on Nov. 19, about to go for a cruise.

Phœnix, Com. H. Grenfell, was visiting Bay Islands and Honduras coast by last accounts, and returns to Jamaica about Dec. 1.

Raleigh, Capt. Charles T. Jago, sailed for Plymouth on Nov. 9 from St. Vincent (Cape de Verdes).

Ready, Com. Edwards, was in the Persian Gulf by last accounts.

Ruby, Capt. Foot, would return to Mozambique from Madagascar by Oct. 21.

Salamis, Com. FitzGeorge, left Devonport for Vigo, to join the Channel Squadron, on the 2nd inst.

Sandfly, Sub-Lieut. Bradford. A telegram has been received from the Commodore at Adelaide, dated 30th ult., reporting arrival of the Sandfly at Sydney on the 29th ult., and confirming the report of the massacre at Solomon Islands of Lieut. Bower and five seamen. The Emerald was about to proceed to Solomon Islands.

Seagull, Com. Byles, was off Jeddah by last accounts.

Serapis, Capt. Guy O. Twiss, left Port Said for England on Nov. 27, arrived at Malta on the 1st, and was to leave for England on the 2nd inst.

Superb, Capt. T. Le H. Ward, left Plymouth on Saturday en route to the Mediterranean. During the passage from Portsmouth a full-power trial was made. The machinery worked in a very satisfactory manner. Over 6,000 indicated horse-power was developed, and no forcing or blast was required. About nine tons of coal per hour, with 57 revolutions, gave over 13 knots in smooth water. Owing to various adjustments to the working parts of the engines, effected since leaving Chatham, the vibration has been considerably reduced, and there are no defects which need detain the vessel after coaling and receiving her second-class torpedo-boat, making four steamboats on board, namely, the usual steam pinnace, two torpedo-boats (Thornycroft's), and a new type of picquet-boat, 58 ft. long, and over 82 indicated horse-power. The ship received her 12 Whitehead torpedoes from the stores at Portsmouth, and had her electric machine adjusted and tried by the officers of the dockyard. Two torpedoes were also discharged from the after-ports, making very good practice at the target.

Téméraire, Capt. the Hon. W. Carpenter, is to be paid off and recommissioned at Malta. The Téméraire was commissioned at Chatham in August, 1877, and is in sufficiently good condition to run another three years on the Mediterranean. Her commanding officer, Capt. the Hon. Walter Carpenter, will be reappointed, but several of the other officers will require reliefs. The following officers now in the Téméraire will remain in her when recommissioned:—Lieuts. D. A. Crofton, W. J. Moore, H. H. Boteler, G. H. Eden, J. Gibbings, W. G. White, and H. N. Rolfe; Sub-Lieuts. E. L. Lowdell and G. S. Walsh; Pymr. A. Whiffin; Midshipmen R. H. Anstruther, A. H. Lyons, F. M. Walker, O. F. Gillett, E. H. Thursby, A. W. Waymouth, P. C. Musgrave, F. Bowden-Smith, W. P. Lodder, T. Mure, E. S. Fitzherbert, C. P. Wilkinson, and A. F. Gurney.

Torch, Com. W. H. Selby, is to be paid off and recommissioned at Malta. She left England in February, 1871, and was recommissioned at Malta in June, 1878, is also to be again commissioned at that place, where, it will be remembered, she underwent a most thorough overhaul and repair in 1876, engines and boilers coming in for their share of attention at that time. She was launched in 1859, and has been kept going for the greater part of her life since that date, but after the intended recommission is over she will have to return to England, as she will then call for a thorough survey as to fitness for further work.

Tyne, Com. Stokes. Early in the new year the Tyne will go on another long cruise with supernumeraries and stores, her destination being the China station. There is to be another large recommissioning of ships at Hong Kong, and among those that will be given new crews is the Fly, which left England in 1874, and was recommissioned at Hong Kong on Jan. 1, 1878. There is only one officer, Lieut. C. Coke, who has served the commission in her, and it is more than probable that Com. A. St. Clair will be reappointed to the command. Another told off for paying off is the Foxhound, which was commissioned at Devonport in November, 1877. Her commanding officer, Lieut. and Com. Nowell; Lieut. Sam Rawson, borne for navigating duties; her surgeon and gunner, all commissioned in her, so that some appointments will be going here. The Vigilant is also to be paid off and recommissioned for the third time, she having left England in September, 1874, and having been repaired for a further commission in 1878. The cost of this refit at Hong Kong was considerable, as new boilers were placed on board at that time. Five of her nine officers have already completed their three years' service in this despatch-vessel, and some pleasant appointments are therefore open, including the command. The surveying-vessel Magpie, the smallest captain's command, is also to be recommissioned, and there will be a general clear-out of her present officers, and the command will not again be given to a captain. The post is to be conferred upon a lieutenant now abroad, and who has shown much aptitude for surveying work. The Tyne will return to Portsmouth with the paid-off crews of the ships named, and other supernumeraries she may pick up on the station and in the Mediterranean.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Valorous, Capt. Morant, is again required for services on the west coast of Ireland, but this time not so much for the distribution of relief as, perhaps, owing to the possibility of her services being required "for the protection of British subjects." She will act as senior officer on the coast of Galway, under the immediate orders of the Rear-Admiral commanding at Queenstown. This is not a very pleasant station for the winter season, and their Lordships will miss her services in the Channel, for when she was last detained on the Irish coast, her usefulness nearer the Home ports was fully recognised, as also was the difficulty of replacing her.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Wild Swan, Com. Dacres, was at Zanzibar on Nov. 3. She would proceed to sea for six weeks' cruise, and on her return would probably be ordered to Bombay to be docked.

Woodlark, Com. P. C. Johnstone, was in the Persian Gulf by last accounts.

Wye, Staff Com. Sarratt, arrived at Madeira from St. Vincent on Nov. 29, and would sail the same day.

OFFICE—40 CHARING CROSS, S.W.

This Asylum was opened in February, 1854, to provide a home for the widows of non-commissioned officers and privates of the Army, of not less than 50 years of age.

There are 57 widows in the Asylum.

Each widow has a furnished room, and receives seven shillings weekly, besides a monthly allowance of two shillings and sixpence for coals.

The House has just been enlarged, and is now capable of containing 70 widows, and the Committee appeal to the public for funds to enable them to admit the additional number, the present subscriptions being insufficient.

The funded income of the charity yields only £550, with an additional £50 from the Princess Mary's Fund for Nurses, to meet an estimated expenditure of £3,000 per annum.

An annual subscription of half-a-guinea, or a donation of five guineas, entitles to one vote at each election, with the right of nominating a candidate.

J. A. STEWART, Colonel, Secretary.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 4, 1880.

THE account in the Times of last Saturday of the dinner to Sir F. Roberts, at the United Service Club, on Friday, Nov. 26, contained errors and misstatements which may be passed over without comment, but there was one so gross and unjustifiable as to need correction. The reporter, or whoever furnished the leading journal with the curious production in question, absolutely made Sir F. Roberts commit the indiscretion of expressing a decided opinion in favour of the retention of Candahar, on an occasion the nature of which would not warrant any one of good-taste or judgment, in thrusting his opinions on a matter of the sort before the distinguished persons who were doing him honour. Sir F. Roberts did not utter a word on the merits of the Candahar controversy, he did not say one syllable of what is attributed to him at the dinner, and he has taken means to have it understood in the proper quarters that he did not do so. Nevertheless, it is well-known that Sir F. Roberts is one of the many high authorities who think that Candahar should be retained, and that other points, such as the Pishin Valley, ought to be annexed or indefinitely occupied. In a recent paper we announced that the Government had decided on retiring from Candahar, as soon as the troops could be moved with advantage and safety, in spite of all the opposition to the step offered by statesmen and soldiers—Indian and British—strategists and politicals; but it would be only fair to admit that eminent authorities and some good arguments are on the side of this retrograde policy. We do not purpose now to consider that policy, or to enter upon a discussion of a question which is decided,—that is, the retirement from Candahar and the Passes is settled, and is as nearly as possible an accomplished fact as a measure not yet executed can be. Time and the inexorable logic of events to come can alone determine whether that policy be sound or not, but we take it for granted that there is a general admission on one point, the undesirableness of occupying any portion beyond our present, or recent, frontier which entails expense, unless there can be shown to be absolute necessity for it, or great probability of mischief from not doing it. It is also clear, we believe, that the state of things which Lord Lytton had to deal with before the outbreak of hostilities has ceased to exist, mainly because of the action of the late Government, and that the danger which the new condition of affairs in Cabul and Candahar may have in store for us differ in magnitude and intensity from those which would have menaced us, and which were actually threatening when the Russian officers and emissaries were at the Court of Shere Ali. The difference is great, and it must not be lost sight of in appreciating the motives which induced the late Government to take the course that is now so loudly condemned, by the reversal of the principles and course of action on which it was founded, and by which it was directed and inspired.

The health of Sir N. Chamberlain is in such a state as to render it most undesirable for him to undertake the duties of Commander-in-Chief. He is old in years, and, in fact, of bodily strength, though his mind is vigorous as ever. His wounds received in gallant service, numerous and severe, tell upon him, and the climate asserts its influence over the old Indian soldier. Besides he has no children, and has no inducement to endure further toil for the sake of piling up the dollars. It may be taken as certain that he will not take up the command, and then the Authorities are in the face of a difficulty. The Times' correspondent on the spot announces that the choice, which, he says, lies between three officers, would be made in consonance with the feeling of the Indian Army if Sir D. Stewart were selected, and we do not see any very strong objections to the appointment. Sir G. Wolseley and Sir C. Ellice, who are named as the other two, can both afford to wait, and the selection of an Indian officer in succession to Sir F. Haines would recommend itself by that very circumstance. There are plenty of good chances for the present Adjutant-General and Quartermaster-General, and they have not been left much out in the cold. Should Sir Donald Stewart be appointed Commander-in-Chief, there would be nothing more obvious than the expediency of giving the vacant post in the Council, which he would vacate, to Sir F. Roberts, and there would then be two appointments open for Queen's officers at Bombay and Madras, for which there are very meritorious candidates. It is understood, however, that the state of Sir F. Roberts's health is such as to render some repose highly necessary. No wonder. A long career of hard work in India—wounds and illness—and the arduous labours of two trying campaigns, might well plead in favour of a soldier who has not been home for twelve long years, and ensure him some little—or even great—consideration. But there are also grave difficulties just now in allowing the Council to be short-handed or wanting in the elements of strength and knowledge in military matters, and these must weigh greatly on the mind of the Authorities. It is to be hoped that at all hazards, except that of permanent injury to his health, Sir F. Roberts may be enabled in a short time to run in harness again.

It is not generally known that General Sir Frederick Roberts has come home on medical certificate. The official notification of his leave of absence runs in Indian General Orders as follows:—"Royal (late Bengal) Artillery.—Major-General Sir F. S. Roberts, G.C.B., C.I.E., V.C., to port of embarkation for thirty days from date of availing himself of it, and thence to England, for twelve months from date of embarkation, on medical certificate."

Colonel A. L. Annesley, half-pay, late 11th Hussars, embarks for India immediately, to take up his new appointment as Adjutant-General of the Bombay Army, in succession to the late Brigadier-General Brooke. Colonel Annesley will be much missed at Head-quarters, where he has fully maintained the high reputation he earned for himself as a regimental commanding officer. He carries with him to India the good-wishes of the Service at large, which has benefited greatly by his labours, and which recognises in him an officer who is well qualified to inaugurate the changes which are so much needed, in order to place the Native Army of the Bombay Presidency on an efficient footing.

Colonel R. Blundell-Hollinshead-Blundell, from the Inspectorship of Yeomanry Cavalry at Aldershot, and late of the 3rd Hussars, succeeds Colonel Annesley as Assistant-Adjutant-General at Head-quarters.

The appointment of inspector of Yeomanry Cavalry at Aldershot, vacant by the transfer of Colonel Blundell-Hollinshead-Blundell to the Horse Guards' Staff, has been offered to and accepted by Colonel W. Mussenden, half-pay, late 8th Hussars. The selection of Colonel Mussenden for this desirable appointment will meet with the utmost satisfaction, for it will be regarded as an acknowledgment of the valuable services rendered by him whilst in command of the 8th Hussars, which he raised to the highest state of efficiency. Colonel Mussenden had strong claims, which we are glad to find the Horse Guards' Authorities have at length recognised.

The Military Attachéship at Paris, about to fall vacant by the return to England of Major-General J. Conolly, C.B., is to be filled by Colonel H. Brackenbury, C.B., Royal Artillery, lately employed on the Staff of Sir Garnet Wolseley at the Cape.

Second Lieutenant E. Vincent has returned from Constantinople to rejoin his regiment, the Coldstream Guards. As we lately announced, Mr. Vincent has been employed for some time past on important diplomatic duties, and he has acquitted himself in a manner highly creditable to so young an officer. The most flattering reports have been furnished to the Military Authorities with regard to services he has rendered since his departure from England last summer, as private secretary to Lord Edmund Fitzmaurice, on the Boundary Commission.

We have reason to believe that the claims of Lieutenant-General the Hon. Arthur Hardinge, C.B., will be fully considered in connection with the Bombay command when General Warre returns to England. General Hardinge proved most successful lately in his command of a division of the Bengal Army, and his reappearance in India would occasion the utmost satisfaction to both the Imperial and Local Armies, he having succeeded in gaining the confidence of all classes of officers by the conscientious desire he showed to promote the welfare of the forces under his command, European and Native.

General W. Irwin, Colonel of the 88th Regiment, attained his seventieth year yesterday, and will shortly be placed on the Retired List. General Lord Napier of Magdala, G.C.B., G.C.S.I., will be seventy on Monday next; but his lordship will not be retired, as by the terms of the Royal Warrant he is allowed to remain on the Active List, to complete his period of service as Governor of Gibraltar.

Colonel W. B. Saunders, R.H.A., embarks for India on the 5th inst. We congratulate the authorities on this energetic observance of the roster for foreign service, which for some time has fallen into disuse.

Whilst the subject of tattooing is again being discussed as a means of putting a stop to the present system of wholesale desertion and fraudulent enlistment, it will be interesting to the Army generally to know that in one regiment lately nearly the whole of the officers and men voluntarily allowed themselves to be tattooed on the left wrist with the regimental badge. Only three or four men out of some 800 objected, and these have all since deserted.

The following General Order has been issued in all military districts in the United Kingdom:—"Horse Guards, W.O., November 25, 1880.—The attention of the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief having upon several occasions been called to the fact that officers quartered in garrison towns very rarely appear in uniform, unless in the actual performance of Military duties, I have received his Royal Highness's commands to request that you will be so good as to point out to the staff and regimental officers serving in the district under your command that this custom, which has become too prevalent of late years, is not in accordance with the spirit of the Queen's Regulations and Orders for the Army, section 12, par. 7, and at the same time to enjoin upon them the propriety as well as the necessity of their wearing uniform throughout the day, except when engaged in recreations inconsistent with its use." This order will, no doubt, produce considerable discontent in the Army. Our officers, however, ought not to be ashamed of being known as such, or complain of being compelled to do that which the officers of all foreign armies feel a pride in doing. We propose to go into the subject more at length next week.

Captain C. Jones, R.A., who was gazetted to the Retired List on Friday last, with a pension of £200 per annum and the honorary rank of major, has given up the Service, in order to join the firm of Sir William Armstrong and Company at Elswick. Major Jones acted as secretary of the Experimental Committee for some years, and was succeeded in the appointment by Major Fairfax Ellis in 1878. He has been employed since June, 1879, as an instructor in Artillery at the Royal Military Academy.

The wives and children of the King's Dragoon Guards and 1st Battalion Rifle Brigade will embark for India on Tuesday next, in H.M.S. Euphrates.

The promotions in succession to Lieutenant-General T. B. F. Marriott, Royal Artillery, should be as follows, viz.:—Major-General H. L. R. Gardiner, R.A., to be lieutenant-general; Colonel G. T. Field, R.A., to be major-general; Major R. A. Manners, 1st Foot, to be lieutenant-colonel; and Captain J. E. Forster, 3rd Foot, to be major, dated the 26th ult.; but as we have pointed out lately, there has been some misconception with regard to the operation of the Warrant, and three or four runs of promotion seemed likely to be lost, unless the officers interested can bring influence to bear upon the War Office to obtain their rights.

Shorncliffe is to be again abandoned as a station for the Brigade of Guards, and the 2nd Battalion Grenadiers will leave the camp on Tuesday next for London, to take the place of the 1st Battalion Coldstreams, removed to Dublin.

Seven subalterns—six purchase and one non-purchase—were promoted on Tuesday last to companies out of the ordinary groove. The cases referred to are those of Lieutenant C. P. Cubitt, 29th Foot (promoted into 105th), date of first commission, May 20, 1868; Lieutenant F. K. Loyd, 55th Foot (promoted into 108th), date of commission, June 13, 1868; Lieutenant A. H. G. Anton, 89th Foot (promoted into 94th), date of commission, April 9, 1870; Lieutenant A. J. Tetley, 81st Foot (promoted into 47th), date of commission, October 1, 1870; Lieutenant C. N. Jones, 89th Foot (promoted into 94th), date of commission, December 7, 1870; Lieutenant H. R. A. Ellis, 89th Foot (promoted into 94th), date of commission, January 4, 1871; and Lieutenant W. S. Morrice, 81st Foot (promoted into 47th), date of commission, December 30, 1871. Against these promotions nothing can be said. Lieutenant Morrice is the only officer who can be considered to have been in any way fortunate, and he owes his promotion to the Sub-District system, as do also Lieutenants Anton, Tetley, Jones, and Ellis, Lieutenants Cubitt and Loyd have been specially selected out of their own brigades, and the fact of their having been so will be accepted by the Purchase subalterns as a healthy sign, showing as it does that the Horse Guards Authorities intend to reserve to themselves power to promote old officers, when they consider that they have stronger claims than those doing duty in the brigade in which the vacancy occurs.

At Windsor Castle, on Wednesday, Lieutenant-Colonel G. Hume, Lieutenant of the Royal Body Guard, received the honour of knighthood at the hands of her Majesty; who afterwards decorated Lieutenant R. G. Scott, of the Cape Mounted Rifles, with the Victoria Cross, in the corridor of the Castle, for conspicuous gallantry at Moirosi's mountain in South Africa, on which occasion he received ten or eleven wounds and lost his right arm.

The appointment of Colonel on the Staff commanding the Artillery in the Northern District becomes vacant, by the promotion of Colonel G. T. Field, R.A., who has held the position since October, 1877.

Lieutenant-General A. T. Phillpotts becomes a colonel-commandant in the Royal Artillery, by the death of Lieutenant-General Marriott.

The Medical Department, we are glad to learn, will fall in for its share of honours for the Afghan campaign. Brigade-Surgeon J. Hanbury, M.B., who acted as General Roberts's Principal Medical Officer in the Candahar-Cabul march, is named for the double honour of promotion to Deputy-Surgeon-General and a C.B.; and Companionships of the Bath are not unlikely to be conferred upon some of the junior officers who have been brought to notice. The medical officers had a trying duty to perform, and the exertions they made to meet the strain put upon them are highly spoken of by the several commanders, we are glad, therefore, to learn that there exists a desire to fittingly acknowledge their claims.

THE GREENWICH HOSPITAL SCHOOL.

Mrs. Brassey, wife of Mr. Brassey, M.P., Civil Lord of the Admiralty, on Thursday presented medals and certificates for navigation and nautical astronomy to the pupils in the above-named school. Previous to the presentations, Mr. and Mrs. Brassey witnessed the lads, to the number of close upon 1,000, go through their battalion drill and dumb-bell exercise. The medals and certificates were presented in the gymnasium, where there were present on the platform Capt. Burney, R.N., C.B., superintendent of the school; Admiral Sir C. Shadwell, K.C.B.; the Rev. Mr. Causton, chaplain of the Fleet; the Rev. Mr. Harbord, inspector of schools; Capt. Bedford, R.N., captain of the Royal Naval College, Greenwich; and Mr. A. Escott, head master of the school. Mr. Brassey, addressing the school at the conclusion of the presentations, said the Science and Art Department was an institution which reflected the highest credit upon the Education Department of the Government, and had contributed most materially to the promotion of the study of arts and sciences in this country. It was very gratifying that in a country which owes so much to nautical enterprise, the Department had thought fit to give special rewards for navigation and nautical astronomy, and to hold examinations. Last May there were 331 competitors in navigation, of which number only 11 were in the honours' list, the first three being from Greenwich Hospital School. In the kindred subject of nautical astronomy, of 52 candidates only four proceeded to take honours, all of whom were from the Greenwich Hospital School. Greenwich had long enjoyed the reputation of being one of the first schools in the world for instruction in navigation and nautical astronomy, and the success which had attended the efforts of the teachers on the present occasion went to prove that the education which was now being given was worthy of that reputation. On behalf of the Admiralty, and all interested in the efficiency of the Greenwich school, he tendered his grateful thanks to Mr. Escott for the pains he had bestowed on the instruction of the pupil-teachers. The company then repaired to the Alexandra dining-hall, adjoining the gymnasium, where Mrs. Brassey unveiled life-sized portraits of their Royal Highnesses the Prince and Princess of Wales, placed there mainly, it was stated, through the efforts of Sir Massey Lopes, Mr. Brassey's predecessor in office. The pictures, which are excellent specimens of art, were painted by Mr. Graves, and have been placed in the hall to commemorate the visit of the Prince and Princess of Wales in 1879, when the Princess gave the dining-hall its name.

A HEALTHY TRIM versus SUPERFLUOUS FAT.—ENO'S FRUIT SALT acts as simply, yet just as powerfully, on the animal system, as sunshine does on the vegetable world. It has a natural action on the organs of digestion, absorption, circulation, respiration, secretion, and excretion, and thus removes and hinders (by natural means) the unnatural and dangerous accumulation of Fat. It keeps the body in healthy TRIM, by preserving and restoring health. Instead of being lowering to the system, this preparation is in the highest degree invigorating. It supplies the want of ripe fruit, so essential to animal economy, and may be taken as an invigorating and cooling draught under any circumstances from infancy to old age, and may be continued for any length of time, and looked upon as being PURE FRUIT SALT, the product of ripe fruit. It is impossible to overstate its value; on that account, no household ought to be without it, for by its use many disastrous results may be entirely prevented. In the nursery, it is beyond praise.—Caution.—Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation. Sold by all chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms, use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. Sold only in boxes, 7½d. and 1s. 1½d., labelled "JAMES EPPS AND CO., Homœopathic Chemists, London." A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment), in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

SIR F. ROBERTS AT THE "SENIOR."

We think our readers will be interested in reading the best account we could obtain of what Sir F. Roberts said at the United Service Club on Friday, the 26th inst., in replying to the eulogistic speech made by H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge, who, as chairman, had proposed "Our Guest of this Evening,"—which is as follows:—He found it difficult to find words to tell those present how deeply he felt the honour conferred on him. It was a mark of approbation of which the most ambitious soldier might feel proud, to be entertained by the United Services, but when H.R.H. the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief presided, and their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales, the Duke of Connaught, and the Prince Christian honoured the entertainment with their presence, the honour was one greater than he deserved, or could adequately express his gratitude for. He would have found the difficulty of replying to H.R.H.'s speech all the greater, were it not that he felt that the honour done him was one which was reflected on her Majesty's armies lately employed in Afghanistan. Through him, their services were to-night recognised by the illustrious and distinguished company present. (Cheers.) Remembering, as he did, how gallant and well behaved those troops, which he had had the honour to command during the last two years, had been, he could not say too much in their favour. (Cheers.) The gallant General then proceeded to say that the credit of success was due to those troops; that it was owing to their great powers of endurance, high state of discipline, and to that grand esprit de corps, the life and soul of the British Army (loud and repeated cheers), that he had been enabled to carry out the duties entrusted to him by the Sovereign and the country; that the British and native soldiers had vied with each other; that throughout the campaign a perfect "camaraderie" had existed between the men, so that Highlanders and Goorkhas, Riflemen and Sikhs, had said good-bye to one another, when the time for separation arrived, with mutual feelings of regard and esteem. In proof of this, Sir F. Roberts adduced the fact that the men of the 5th Goorkhas had subscribed over £100 amongst them, so as to give a present to their comrades in arms of the 72nd Highlanders, the latter regiment returning the compliment. (Loud cheers.) He spoke of the misgivings he had experienced when first the order came in September, 1879, for the advance on Cabul, as to the temper of the Mahommedan portion of the native army, some few of whom were even recruited from Afghanistan itself. It would be, however, a matter of gratification to the company present to night to learn that the Mahommedan soldiers remained, with but few exceptions, true to their salt, many indeed had shown marked loyalty and bravery before the enemy. (Loud cheers.) He then referred to that part of his Royal Highness's speech which praised the march from Cabul to Candahar, and said that no one was more fully alive to the difficulties of that undertaking than he himself was, and yet no one felt more certain of its success. He had, moreover, strongly urged that troops should be sent from Cabul. He had realised the almost insuperable difficulties which would try to the utmost even the well known energy and determination of that distinguished officer, Major-Gen. Phayre. (Cheers.) Besides, he felt that after what had just then occurred at Candahar, it was absolutely necessary to show our strength, and strike a swift and decisive blow. Instead of an immediate evacuation of Cabul and retirement to India, in the face of defeat at Candahar, it was imperative to prove to Afghanistan, and Asia too, that an English army could march at will from one end of the country to the other. (Loud cheers.) At that time the troops had been looking forward to a well-earned rest and an early return to India, but he had felt certain that they would all cheerfully respond to any further call that might be made upon them by their Queen and country. Sir F. Roberts then spoke in warm terms of the generous assistance accorded to him by his friend Sir Donald Stewart, who had placed all the troops at Cabul at his disposal, and bid him select the regiments and batteries he wished to take to Candahar, when the orders came for the despatch thither of a force. (Cheers.) The difficulty then was not to find enough troops to go, but to decide which out of so many good corps to leave behind. (Cheers.) Eventually, he selected those regiments which had in their ranks the oldest and most seasoned soldiers. (Loud and repeated cheers.) Experience had, he said, taught him that the younger men were not so well able to stand fatigue, exposure, and privations as their older comrades (loud cheers); that the march would be a trying one, even to the strongest, and that it would be impossible to carry many sick. (Cheers.) The efficiency of the regiments when they reached Candahar justified his selection (cheers), and never was seen a grander Anglo-Indian force than that which marched from under the walls of Candahar on 1st of last September to do battle with Ayoob Khan; and with that force were commanders worthy of the men they led. (Cheers.) He then went on to attribute the success he was able to achieve to the splendid material at his disposal, and said that with such troops and such commanders failure was an impossibility,—that no General officer had ever received more valuable support, and that he was glad to be able here to let the officers of the Army know how much he was indebted to his second in command, Major-Gen. John Ross, C.B. (cheers); to those able brigadiers, Macpherson, Baker, MacGregor, and Hugh Gough; to those undeniably good commanders of regiments, and to those hard-working and intelligent officers of the Staff. (Cheers.) Before he sat down, Sir F. Roberts said how flattered he felt to have gained the approbation of his Royal Highness, the head of her Majesty's armies; and how gratified he was at the manner in which his Royal Highness's expressions had been received by the distinguished company assembled to-night, and concluded by thanking all for the honour done him,—an honour which he never could forget. (Loud cheering.)

Obituary.

Major A. Hunt, late of the Military Train and the 7th and 54th Regiments, died at Putney on the 16th ult., aged 51 years. The deceased officer served with the field train, R.A., in the Eastern campaign of 1855, and was present during the siege and fall of Sebastopol in the trenches, with the siege-train at the bombardments of June 6 and 17 (medal with clasp, Knight of the Legion of Honour, and Turkish medal).

The death is announced, at the age of 60, of Sir John Milton, C.B., late Accountant-General of the Army. He was the son of Mr. Henry Milton, of Heikfield Lodge, Middlesex; was appointed a junior clerk in the now abolished office of the Secretary at War in 1840, and was made a 1st-class clerk in the consolidated War Office in 1856. He became Assist.-Accountant-General in 1860. During his service in the War Office, he was frequently detached on important special employments; and in the Russian campaign he was on Government service both at Scutari and in the Crimea, and for his work in the East received the Crimean and Turkish war-medals. He served as secretary to several Parliamentary Committees, retired from the War Office on its reorganisation, in 1878, on a pension of £1,200 a year, and was knighted in Jan. 1879.

Com. Charles Caley, R.N., died at Askham-Bryan, York, on the 19th ult., in his 86th year. The deceased gallant officer entered the Navy, Jan. 20, 1810, on board the Sybille, Capts Clotworthy Upton, James Sanders, and Thomas Forrest, in which vessel he served, on the Newfoundland and Home stations, until Oct. 1814. He then joined the Bombay, Capt. Henry Bazeley, under whom he escorted the Queen of Sardinia and the three Princesses from Cagliari to Genoa, and afterwards visited Tripoli, Tunis, and Algiers, for the purpose of obtaining the liberation of the Christian slaves in bondage at those places. In July, 1816, he became attached to the Severn, Capt. Hon. Frederick William Aylmer, and on Aug. 27 following was wounded at the bombardment of Algiers. He next joined, in succession, the Rochfort, Capt. Sir Archibald Collingwood Dickson, lying in Portsmouth Harbour, and, in May, 1818, the Liffey, Capts. Hon. Henry Duncan and Charles Grant. While under Capt. Duncan, he conveyed Lord Beresford from Portsmouth to Lisbon; made an anti-piratical cruise round the West Indies; accompanied Sir Charles Bagot, the British Ambassador at the court of St. Petersburg, from North Yarmouth to Cronstadt; and was twice in attendance on George IV., the last time on the occasion of his visit to Ireland. With Capt. Grant, he served for upwards of a year in the East Indies, whence he came home in March, 1823, as acting-lieutenant of the Madagascar, Capt. Evan Nepean. He was confirmed on his arrival in England, Oct. 22, 1823, and in July, 1851, was placed on the Reserved List. He became retired commander, July 1, 1864, and was promoted to the List under Order in Council of 1816, Feb. 17, 1876. He had received the medal for Algiers.

Lieut. James St. Clair Bower, the commander of the schooner Sandfly, who has been so cruelly murdered, together with five seamen, served as midshipman in the Endymion, Capt. Edward Lacy, on particular service, from May 22, 1869, until Jan. 28, 1871, when he was transferred to the Hercules, with the Channel Squadron, and was promoted to sub-lieut., March 13, 1872. On Jan. 7, 1873, he was appointed to the Devastation, turret-ship; in April, 1874, removed into the Resistance, Capt. F. W. Sullivan, C.B., with the Channel Squadron; and on Feb. 15, 1875, was appointed to the Nassau, screw surveying-vessel, Lieut.-Com. F. J. Grey, on the East Coast of Africa. On April 17 following was transferred to the Shearwater, Com. W. J. L. Wharton, but was again appointed to the Nassau, July 15, 1875, as lieutenant, additional, having commission dated April 15, 1875, and continued in the same ship, under Com. R. H. Napier, at China, from Jan. 1876 until Nov. 1877, when he was transferred to the Danae, Capt. John C. Purvis, and was subsequently employed in that ship in Australia until July 1 of the present year, when he recommissioned the Sandfly at Sydney.

Paymaster-in-Chief Frederick Gransmore, who died at his residence. at Netley Court, on the 14th ult., in his 64th year, served as acting purser of the Hyacinth, sloop, Com. W. Warren, in the East Indies at the attack on the Barrier Forts, Macao, in 1840; in the Algerine, Lieut.-Com. T. H. Mason, during the attacks upon Canton, and at the capture of Chefoo and Woosung; and of the Childers, Com. G. G. Wellesley, in the Yang-tse-Kiang till the treaty of peace in 1843. On Jan. 1, 1853, he was appointed paymaster of the Saturn, Capt. Sir T. Pasley, Bart., at Pembroke; in May, 1854, to the Indefatigable, fitting for the flag, on the South-east coast of America, of Rear-Admiral W. J. H. Johnstone, and remained until 1858, when he joined the Eagle at Milford Haven as additional, and remained until June, 1861. He was paymaster of the Cambridge from March, 1863, until March, 1866, and of the Impregnable from March, 1867, until promoted paymaster-in-chief in July, 1870.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN CONSUMPTION AND DISEASES OF THE CHEST.—The Medical Profession of all countries now consider Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil as incomparably the most valuable remedy for Consumption and Diseases of the Chest. No remedy so rapidly restores the exhausted strength, improves the nutritive functions, stops emaciation, checks the perspiration, quiets the cough and expectoration, or produces a more marked and favourable influence on the local malady. Dr. Waudby, Physician to the Hereford Infirmary, writes:—"I can take Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil without any difficulty or dislike, and with as little inconvenience as water alone. Not only in my own case, but in many others, I have seen it has caused an improvement of chest symptoms and an increase of weight, so soon and so lastingly, as to be quite remarkable. I believe Dr. de Jongh's Oil to be the most valuable remedy we possess for chronic and constitutional disease." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature, and the signature of his sole consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford and Co., 77 Strand, London.

The Admiralty have issued a circular on the subject of the cessation of full pay of invalids, &c. It states that Clause 5, Article 1,286, of the Queen's Regulations, will in future apply to all persons of the ship's company, and borne on ship's books, who may be invalided, declared insane, or "discharged dead" from a home hospital or sick quarters at home, a ship on the home station, or from the head-quarters of a Marine division. The only exceptions to this regulation are to be in the cases of persons, as specified above, remaining in home hospitals or sick quarters at home under medical treatment for injuries received in the execution of duty, such persons being dealt with as directed by Articles 1,274 and 1,275 of the Queen's Regulations.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO is the purest and most fragrant Tooth Powder ever used, and contains no acid or mineral ingredients, which are so detrimental to the teeth and gums. INSTEAD OF TAKING AN ORDINARY COD LIVER OIL, and attempting to disguise its flavour by all sorts of devices and mixtures, they (Allen and Hanburys) have studied anew the processes of manufacture of Cod Liver Oil, for which they have always had a great reputation; and as a result of this study, they have produced a Cod Liver Oil which is so delicate in flavour as to be free from all the usual nauseous properties of fish oil, and has almost the delicacy of salad oil.—British Medical Journal. All who have difficulty in taking Cod Liver Oil should insist on having Allen and Hanburys' Perfected Oil. Sold only in capsuled imperial quarter-pints, 1s 4d; half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s. Trade-mark, a Plough. Of all Chemists.

With the approval of the Home Government, a concession for the construction of a line of railway from Valletta to Notabile has been granted for 99 years, by the Government of Malta to the Malta Railway Company (Limited).

The importance attached to the railway may be gathered from the fact that the construction of a tunnel under the lines of fortifications has been sanctioned by the Government, who have also assured to the Company, during the next five years, the privilege of any extensions of the line.

The railway will be constructed under the supervision of a board of engineers appointed jointly by the Malta Government and by the officer commanding the Royal Engineers at Malta, representing the Home Government.

The Directors of the Malta Railway Company (Limited) invite subscriptions for 6,000 shares of £10 each, forming the share capital of the Company, payable as follows:—£1 per share on application, £1 10s per share on allotment, £2 10s per share on January 15, 1881, £2 10s per share on March 15, 1881, £2 10s per share on May 15, 1881,—£10.

Subscribers will be allowed the privilege of paying up the whole of the instalments on allotment, in which case interest at 5 per cent. will accrue on the full amount from the date of such payment.

The Island of Malta, the well-known British possession in the Mediterranean, is one of the most densely populated portions of the world, the inhabitants numbering 1,400 per square mile, as against 432 in England and Wales, and 242 in the Isle of Man.

The city of Valletta, the capital of the island, and great Naval station, contains 60,000 inhabitants, in addition to a large Military, Naval, and other floating population.

According to official returns, the following steam and sailing vessels entered and cleared at the port of Valletta during the year 1879:—Entered—Steamers 3,014, tons 2,807,593; sailing vessels 1,868, tons 215,915. Cleared—Steamers 3,015, tons 2,809,357; sailing vessels 1,350, tons 212,758.

As most of these steamers coal at Valletta, a large traffic will arise from passengers exploring the island during their stay by means of this railway.

The line commences in the centre of the city, opposite the Grand Opera House, and passes underneath the fortifications by a tunnel 1,000 yards long. It continues six miles and five furlongs across the island, through or near the towns of Misida, Curmi, Birchicara, Balzan, Lia, Attard, Zebbug, Musta, Nasciar, terminating at the City of Notabile (or Citta Vecchia), the ancient capital of Malta, near which are the Palace and Gardens of Boschetto, and other attractions, which constitute Notabile the great pleasure-resort of the Maltese.

The railway will pass through a district containing a population of 100,000 inhabitants, to accommodate which two terminal and seven intermediate stations will be erected. It will closely resemble a Metropolitan tramway, and be worked by trains running at frequent intervals, carrying passengers at low fares.

The route has been surveyed by Mr. R. Gervase Elwes, M.Inst.C.E. (of Messrs. Wells-Owen and Elwes, the Company's Engineers), who has carefully estimated the traffic likely to accrue to the line, and, assuming the receipts per passenger carried at only three-fourths of the lowest fare authorised by the Concession, the revenne from passenger traffic would amount to … … … … …	£11,706	per annum.

Mails, parcels, &c. … … … … … … …	250	do.
From goods … … … … … … …	182	do.
Total … … … … …	£12,138
Deducting 50 per cent. for working expenses … … …	6,069
Net revenue … … … … … … … …	£6,069
Interest and sinking fund, say 5½ per cent. on £5,000 Debentures	275
Leaving … … … … …	£5,794

equal to 9½ per cent on the share capital of the Company.

A reference to the following railways of similar gauge and description to the railway undertaken by this Company from the Malta Government will serve to show its probable value and prospects:—

The Isle of Man, with a population of 55,000 inhabitants, has 43 miles of constructed railway, or a mile of line for every 1,279 inhabitants, of which 27 miles were constructed by the Isle of Man Railway Company at a cost of £242,807, or nearly £9,000 per mile. This railway pays, in addition to interest on its preference charges, £5 per cent. on the Ordinary Shares of the Company, which are selling at a premium.

The Wynberg Railway, 6 miles in length, running from Cape Town out into the suburbs, was constructed at a cost of £94,750, or £15,792 per mile, and serves about 45,000 inhabitants. This railway earned for the year 1878 a net revenue equal to £7 4s per cent on the above capital.

The Malta Railway, 6⅝ miles in length, will run across the centre of the island, and serve 100,000 inhabitants, or 15,094 per mile of line. The cost of the Railway, equipped and delivered to the Company in complete working order, will only amount to £8,830 per mile. Bearing in mind the nature and extent of the traffic to be accommodated, and that the line will probably be worked at less than 50 per cent. of the receipts, it will be seen that the undertaking can hardly fail to prove highly remunerative.

A contract has been entered into with Mr. F. A. B. Geneste, a gentleman of great experience in the construction of railways in India, at the Cape, and in various parts of Europe, who has undertaken to construct the Malta Line, with stations, telegraph, and rolling stock, to the satisfaction of the Engineers, for the sum of £58,500, and to complete and open the railway for traffic by the 31st December, 1881.

The Contractor has also undertaken to pay interest at £5 per cent. per annum on the paid-up capital of the Company during construction and until the line is completed and opened throughout for public use, and to give satisfactory guarantees for the due fulfilment of his contract.

The Malta Government have reserved the right at any time after fifteen years from the date of opening, and upon giving six months' notice, to acquire the Railway, &c., at a price equal to 17 years' purchase of the net receipts of the Company, upon an average of the three years next preceding the giving of such notice, with 10 per cent. added for compulsory purchase, with a provision that if the average market value of the capital of the Company during the said period of three years shall exceed the price to be ascertained as aforesaid, the Government shall pay a sum equal to the amount of such excess by way of addition to that price.

Applications for shares in the annexed form may be made to the Bankers, or to the Directors, at the Company's Offices, 18 St. Helen's Place, Bishopsgate Street, London, E.C., where Prospectuses, Forms of Application, Plans, and Engineer's Reports on the Railway, the Articles of Association of the Company, and all further information may be obtained.

The following Agreements entered into by the Company may be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitors:—

28th July, 1880.—Between the Government of Malta, and the Malta Railway Company, Limited—The Concession authorising the Railway.

16th November, 1880.—Between the Malta Railway Company, Limited, and F. A. B. Geneste—Contract for the construction and equipment of the Railway.

EXTRACT FROM REPORT ON THE RAILWAY BY THE COMPANY'S ENGINEER.

"The following table and actual results obtained from a similar railway constructed in the Isle of Man, are taken from the Company's Engineer's Report, to which particular attention is requested, and copies of which will be forwarded on application:—

	Island of Malta.	Isle of Man.
Area of Island, square miles	95	227
Population	135,000	55,000
Population per square mile	1,400	242
Total population per mile of railway	20,075	2,037
Population served by each mile of railway	15,094	1,527
	As estimated in Engineer's Report.	Actual Result (1878).
Single Journeys per head per annum, whole population	7·6	9·6
Ditto, population served, including season tickets	10·1	12·8
Receipts per head of total population per annum	1s 9½d	7s 3¾d
Receipts per head of population served per annum	2s 5d	9s 9d
Working Expenses	50%	48%
Cost of line per mile, including Rolling Stock	£8,830	£8,955

"It will be seen from the above table that should the receipts per head of the population served by the Malta Railway equal the revenue actually collected by the Isle of Man Railway, it would amount to no less than four times that estimated in this report.

"I should add that the traffic of the Isle of Man Railway is mainly derived from passengers, only £2,868 out of £20,105 gross receipts in 1878 having accrued from goods and minerals.

"I mention this to guard against the supposition that the favourable results of the Isle of Man Railway are due to mineral or other abnormal traffic. 93 per cent. of the passengers were third-class, and only 7 per cent. first, showing that the bulk of the traffic is derived from the labouring classes."

ELEYS' "BOXER" AMMUNITION, for Snider, Martini-Henry, and other Rifles. British Government Pattern. Merchants, Gunmakers, and others are warned against buying Inferior Cartridges of the above description, now being offered in the market at low prices. We have examined samples of these Cartridges, and find that they are of an obsolete pattern, made many years since; and that the powder in them, through long and defective storage, has become so decomposed as to render them absolutely worthless for any practical purpose.

We have also to warn merchants and others against buying Cartridges manufactured at the Royal Arsenal, which are sold to the public by serjeants and storekeepers. The traffic in these Cartridges is illegal, and all persons concerned in the buying or selling of the same are liable to prosecution, and severe punishment on conviction.

Having laid down special machinery for the manufacture of Cartridges on the "BOXER" principle, we are prepared to submit Samples, with all the latest improvements, at special prices for large quantities.

DR. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S

CHLORODYNE.

THE ORIGINAL AND ONLY GENUINE,

Which is admitted by the Profession to be the most wonderful and valuable remedy ever discovered.

CHLORODYNE is the best remedy known for Coughs, Consumption, Bronchitis, Asthma.

CHLORODYNE effectually checks and arrests those too often fatal diseases—Diphtheria, Fever, Croup, and Ague.

CHLORODYNE acts like a charm in Diarrhœa, and is the only specific in Cholera and Dysentery.

CHLORODYNE effectually cuts short all attacks of Epilepsy, Hysteria, Palpitation, and Spasms.

CHLORODYNE is the only palliative in Neuralgia, Rheumatism, Gout, Cancer, Toothache, &c.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Dec. 11, 1868.

Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a-dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

⁂ Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE of PIRACY and IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, July 13th, 1864.

Sold in Bottles at 1s 1½d, 2s 9d, and 4s 6d. None is genuine without the words, "Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE'S CHLORODYNE" on the Government stamp. Overwhelming Medical Testimony accompanies each bottle.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

Teeth from 5s; sets, 5 to 30 guineas. Only addresses, 312 Regent Street, opposite the Polytechnic; and 49 Moorgate Street. Established 1820. Consultation free.

WATCHES.—JEWELLERY.—WATCHES.

The Rev. Robt. Cass, Settle, Yorkshire, writes February 19, 1880:—"The Ladies' Gold Lever Watch received from you for 70s in size, workmanship, and beautiful appearance, resembles a watch usually sold at £10. It gives entire satisfaction."

The Rev. James Arthur Kemp, Lew Down, North Devon, also writes, March 8, 1880:—"The watch I ordered of you at 25s, for my servant, arrived quite safely, and I am exceedingly well pleased with it in every way. It is an excellent timekeeper, very neat and handsome in appearance, and in my opinion worth far more than those that cost treble the money. I do not think anybody should be without a watch, when they can obtain from you such an excellent article at so reasonable a price."

From Mr. J. J. HARRIS, Schoolmaster, 2nd-18th the Royal Irish Regiment, Aldershot, Sept. 22, 1880.

"I am very much pleased with everything I have had from your Company. The watch (25s) has proved to be an excellent one, and is a marvel of cheapness. It is fully equal to, or indeed superior to, many I have seen purchased by regimental clubs for treble the money. I am positive your Company will prove itself a boon to Army men at home and abroad, particularly the latter, who are often compelled to pay enormous prices for very inferior articles indeed. Your Company is deserving of every success, and I deem it a duty, to you and the Army, to become an amateur agent, unpaid."

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES WATCH COMPANY supply their celebrated Watches direct to wearers, at very lowest wholesale cash prices. They guarantee watches supplied by them to be most perfect timekeepers, and honestly assert their price to be under one-half those charged by watchmakers; and as a guarantee of good-faith they undertake to return the full amount paid for any Watch if not to the satisfaction of the purchaser.

The Company's chief manufacture are their celebrated Crystal Glasses, which dispense with all risk of breakage. Their LADIES' and GENTLEMEN'S SILVER WATCHES, at 25s, and their LADIES' GOLD LEVERS, at 70s, are acknowledged to be the cheapest Watches in the world.

Catalogues, containing list of testimonials, and beautifully illustrated descriptions of more expensive watches, gold and silver jewellery, electro-plate, &c. are sent gratis on application. We may safely assert that the prices in same will be a surprise to all who see them.

GENTLEMEN'S FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, heavy cased, superior movement, 25s.

LADIES' FINE SILVER, handsomely engraved, flat crystal glass, highly-finished movements, 25s.

YOUTHS' FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, highly-finished movements, 25s.

LADIES' very heavy cased GOLD LEVERS, in exquisitely chased cases, with highly-finished extra-jewelled movements, 70s.

These watches are frequently sold for treble the money.

Cheques or Post-Office Orders must be made payable to the Company's Manager,

Mr. S. HISSEY, Vyse Street, Birmingham.

On receipt of which any watch will be registered post free to any part of the United Kingdom, and for 2s 6d per watch extra to any part of the postal world.

AT THREE SHILLINGS a POUND, the FINEST TEA the WORLD PRODUCES is Recommended to the Public.

COOPER COOPER and CO. undertake to answer the oft-heard question,— Why is Tea so dear? and they say that it is simply because the public in this, as in other matters, are powerless to insist on having their share of the advantages which result from falling markets. Tea, in fact, was never so cheap to buy since it was first imported into England, as may be easily ascertained by a reference to the current market reports, and yet relatively the retail price was never so exorbitant. Now Cooper Cooper and Co. have resolved to rectify this discrepancy, and to this end they undertake to SELL the BEST TEAS that can be purchased at their respective prices at a small commission only on the actual prices paid to importers. This system of business is specially intended to bring the public into partnership, as it were, or at all events to enable them to become participators in the great margin of profit which lies between the wholesale and retail price of tea. COOPER COOPER and CO.'S prices will be found to be ninepence per pound less money than those usually charged for identical qualities.

POST-OFFICE ORDERS should be made payable at the General Post Office, and cheques crossed National Provincial Bank of England.

FAMILIES residing in the country can, by joining together to divide the expense of railway crrriage, save 9d a pound in the price of their TEA, by sending to COOPER COOPER and CO.; or Cooper Cooper and Co. will pay railway carriage on parcels of the value of £2 and upwards to any station in England, on receipt of 9d in addition to the cost of the tea.

ARUNDEL & CALEDONIAN HOTELS.

The ARUNDEL is near the New Law Courts, in the Strand, being next door to the Temple Station.

The CALEDONIAN is on the Adelphi Terrace, and close to Charing Cross.

These two old-established Family Hotels, from their especially advantageous position, both overlooking the Thames Embankment, combine light, air, and perfect quiet, although in the centre of London. They are now under one management, AND AT EITHER ESTABLISHMENT VISITORS CAN ARRANGE FOR FULL BOARD AT A FIXED CHARGE OF SEVEN SHILLINGS AND SIXPENCE PER DAY, which includes a good Bedroom, Breakfast of hot and cold meats, Luncheon, Dinner of six courses, and Tea and Coffee in the evening; also the use of large, well-appointed Sitting-rooms, including an ELEGANTLY-APPOINTED DRAWING-ROOM.

These Hotels, containing upwards of 200 Rooms, have been for many years largely patronised by Members of Parliament, the Clergy, and by Military and Naval Officers and their Families, by reason of their central, but retired localities, affording all the comforts and luxuries of high-class Hotels.

THE recent General Order on the subject of the wearing of uniform in garrison towns, has created a flutter throughout the Army. There is, however, nothing harsh, unreasonable, or even new in the General Order in question. The Queen's Regulations require that officers when with their regiments shall wear uniform, and the General Order merely calls attention, in the mildest possible language, to the fact that the Regulations have been, to a great extent, ignored. So mild, indeed, are the terms of the Order, that it expressly permits officers to wear plain clothes when engaged in recreations, inconsistent with the use of uniform. Impliedly, it allows officers to wear plain clothes at night. It is difficult to conceive what valid objection can be urged by the lovers of mufti. Indeed, civilians find it hard to understand why the wearing of uniform should be so distasteful to British officers. Foreign officers are not only required to wear uniform on all occasions, save when out of their own country, but take a pride in appearing in the garb of their profession. They have even been seen to wear uniform when out hunting or engaged in a steeplechase. British officers, at heart, are not less proud of their profession than are French and German officers. Yet they have for years maintained a constant struggle against the spasmodic efforts of the Authorities to enforce obedience to an order distinctly laid down in the Queen's Regulations. Generally, their persistency in evading orders on the subject has worn out the General, who has entertained the extraordinary idea that it is useless to issue an order if it is not to be obeyed. In the few instances in which the General has been, to a certain extent, successful, his firmness has resulted in an amount of unpopularity which few save very resolute, conscientious men can support. The late Sir Sidney Cotton, when commanding at Peshawur, was a great stickler for uniform, and whenever he detected during his rides a member of the garrison in plain clothes, was wont to send his A.D.C. on a hunt after the offender. As to himself, we verily believe that he slept in uniform. Great was the resistance to this "fad," as it was considered, of the General, and the officers of a certain Highland regiment manifested their feeling in a manner which was, at all events, amusing enough. Of course, no one, however he might endeavour to sneak about in plain clothes at other times, ventured to appear on the road devoted to the evening's ride or drive of the station, for the General was sure to be present, and equally sure to detect any disobedience of orders. The mess compound of the regiment touched, however, the road in question, and every evening when the General took his rides abroad his military soul was vexed by the sight, within, but at the very edge of the compound, of a row of chairs, each occupied by a godless Highlander, dressed in the muftiest of clothes. Why do British officers object to wearing uniform to such an extent that if they have half-an-hour's duty at 11 a.m. and another at 2 p.m., they will frequently, in the interval, change to plain clothes, only to put on uniform again two hours later? We will try and explain. The British officer is, with respect to this matter, actuated by very conflicting motives. He is proud of his profession, he does wish to be known by all as a member of it; indeed, the younger officers, in their hearts, rejoice exceedingly when obliged to appear publicly in uniform. We go so far as to assert that the large majority of young officers, and not a few of the older ones, would be secretly delighted if the order were strictly enforced, however much they might growl at it. The objection, therefore, proceeds almost entirely from fashion. The Army has never really taken root as one of the acknowledged institutions of the country, and it was the policy of the Duke of Wellington to avoid obtruding its existence on the notice of the public. Again, English gentlemen have a dislike to making themselves conspicuous. Another reason is that it has come to be thought rather the mark of a raw hand to be proud of appearing in uniform, and nobody wishes to be taken for a raw hand. We fear, however, that the chief, though the inadmissible, reason is that an officer in uniform is more noticeable than one in plain clothes, and, as many men indulge in dissipation, and frequent places which they would shrink from being known, they covet the comparative disguise afforded by mufti. The Authorities and the public can hardly be expected to admit that this is a valid argument. An officer should always respect himself and his profession, whether wearing the garb of the latter or not; and if uniform acts as a check, that is an additional reason for causing it to be worn. But, after all, the General Order under discussion does not require uniform to be worn at night. Of the frivolous objections made against wearing uniform, the chief are the two following:—1. That uniform is uncomfortable. 2. That it is expensive. As to discomfort, that objection does not apply in these days of patrol jackets, and, if necessary, it would not be difficult to make undress uniform even more comfortable than it actually is. With respect to expense, we feel certain that experience would prove that the assertion is unfounded. A patrol jacket and regimental trousers may cost more than a plain-clothes coat and trousers; but in uniform, neither waistcoat nor scarf are worn, a forage cap lasts longer than a chimney-pot hat, and military are cheaper than plain-clothes gloves. In plain clothes, too, a certain amount of variety is required, which is not the case with uniform. The constant putting-on and taking-off of uniform also wears it out almost as much as if it were kept on throughout the day. To sum up, the Queen's Regulations, rightly or wrongly, require uniform to be worn on all occasions; that order should, therefore, be either obeyed or cancelled. It should not be cancelled, for an officer ought to be proud of its being known that he belongs to the Army. If he is not, the sooner he retires the better. His own men, Naval officers, and the officers of all foreign armies wear uniform; why, then, should the British officer be the solitary exception? Fashion, however, is so strong that you may change, but cannot disobey it. Let it then be brought into fashion. Let the Prince of Wales, the Commander-in-Chief, the Horse Guards' Staffs, and the officers of the Household Troops set the example when in garrison towns. The rest of the Army would then yield without a murmur.

The difference between a paper Fleet and its effective fighting power when war breaks out, was never more clearly demonstrated than in 1877, when the great Armour-plated Russian Fleet of twenty-nine ironclads was unable to despatch a single vessel against Hobart Pasha. In that year, when the Russians were crossing the Turkish frontier, Sir Edward Reed penned a war article for a London paper, in which a forecast was made of the squadron that would proceed from Cronstadt to the Dardanelles, and probably repeat Count Orloff's famous victory at Tchesmé. Respecting the forecast. Mr. Marvin assures the readers of the Army and Navy Magazine, for this month, that of nine men-of-war named by Sir Edward Reed, the first, the Peter the Great, was at no time in 1877 or 1878 in a condition to proceed to the Mediterranean; the second and third, the Sevastopol and Petropavlovsky, were old wooden frigates, since relegated to harbour service; the fourth, the Prince Pojarsky, was being re-engined at Cronstadt, and was hors de combat throughout the war; the four next vessels, the Greig, Lazareff, Tchitchagoff, and Spiridoff, were turret-ships, with extremely limited coal-space and worn-out engines and boilers, unfitted to proceed on a distant cruise; and finally, the ninth, the floating battery Kreml, nicknamed the "Slow-coach Kreml," was a ricketty vessel, whose weak points came out conspicuously in 1880, when, while starting for the Pacific, she collided with a merchant vessel, and smashed her ram. These and other ironclads might have done a little in the way of harbour defence, behind the batteries of Cronstadt and Sveaborg, but they could not have waged warfare on the open sea. The brunt of the fighting would have fallen to the torpedo-boats, and to a hastily constructed gunboat flotilla. The real Russian Fleet, as understood by Sir E. Reed, could have done little or nothing. The moral of this Naval collapse in the Black Sea is, to professionals,—Never prophesy, unless you know; and to the public,—Put not your faith in professionals, who have an interest in what they write. Sir Edward Reed's relations with Russia previous to 1877 were such as not to leave him without bias and interest in Admiral Popoff's designs. For a country to be a strong Naval Power to-day, it is necessary that she should possess three requisites,—iron, coal, and skilled labour. The writer of the article to which we are referring goes deeply into statistical data bearing upon those points. He shows that in the glorious epochs of Peter and Catharine, Russia had a monopoly of everything needed for building wooden ships-of-war, and we wish we had space to refer to his account of the great Scotch Admirals—Greig, Elphinstone, Cruse, and Crown—who gave such lustre to Catharine's reign When the change from wood to iron took place, Russia had no coal, little or no iron, and scarcely any skilled labour worthy of the name. She was thus compelled to fall back upon England for her ships and her engines, until 1869, when the Popoff régime began at the Admiralty, and the edict went forth that the new vessels were to be built exclusively with native material, by Russians alone. The English, ever the backbone of the Russian Navy, were discharged from it en masse; and one result of the new policy was that it took eleven years to complete the Peter the Great, seven the General-Admiral, and ten the Menin and Duke of Edinburgh. The engines of the three former vessels were, however, made by Messrs. Baird, on the Neva; and the hull and engines of the Duke of Edinburgh and the hull of the Menin at the Baltic Iron Works, which are nearly English in their administration. In every case, the more delicate parts of the machinery were made in England, the iron used in their construction was chiefly English, and they have steamed ever since with English coal. The same remarks apply to most of the remaining vessels of the Russian Fleet. Of the clipper series, constructed since 1873, the Kreuzer, Djigit, Rasboinik, and Naezdnik were engined by Baird; while the Shrelok, Plastoon, Vestnik, and Opretchnik were built by the Baltic Company. The engines of two of the last-named clippers were constructed by Penn, and the engines of the remaining two by the Baltic Company, from Penn's designs.

As to Russia's torpedo-boats, half of the 120 constituting the present flotilla, were made by Baird and the Baltic Company, and the greater part of the rest abroad. In all these instances we find the material used chiefly imported from England, together with most of the finer portions of the machinery. The designs may have been prepared at the Russian Admiralty, from English Admiralty drawings—for it is amazing how rapidly our most secret designs find their way from Whitehall to Admiral Popoff's Department at St. Petersburg—and Russian labour, supplemented in special instances by English workmanship, may have created the hulls and the engines; but the iron and coal used have been English, the plant for constructing the ships English, and the practical supervision to a very large extent English also. "The two Russian factors—the indifferent mechanical labour of the workman, and the ultra-technical supervision of officials—have been precisely those which have enhanced the cost and impaired the excellence of the rest." The pro-Russian policy of Admiral Popoff, thanks largely to Sir E. Reed's support, has resulted in Russia having become effaced as a great Naval Power, if ironclads are to be considered, but rests her claim to consideration solely upon her cruisers. One can well understand how bitterly Russian naval officers must feel towards the man who has the reputation of having fooled away Russia's resources. The author of the article in our new Service Magazine does not employ invective against Popoff or Reed, but his article none the less is, by its array of facts, a damaging accusation against those twin admirers of the grotesque in naval architecture.

The French War Minister is carrying out some very sweeping reforms in the Cavalry, and has, necessarily, a great many hornets buzzing about his ears. Within a short time, he has abolished the Division of Mounted Pupils, from which non-commissioned officers for the Cavalry were drawn; he contemplates reducing the number of regimental officers, and he has transformed six regiments of cuirassiers into six regiments of carabiniers. "A Veteran," pointing to one of our French contemporaries, says he considers all these changes detestable. He asks how non-commissioned officers are to be formed without this school? He says that such schools exist in foreign countries, and that in Italy, for example, there are seven. Nearly all the non-commissioned officers at present in the Cavalry have been drawn, he says, from this school, which is now to disappear. If the War Minister has made a blunder in this matter, he, however, is not solely to be blamed, for it appears that the Cavalry Colonels were by no means satisfied with these ready-made non-commissioned officers, and declared they would much prefer forming such officers themselves. But the question is,—Will they have time to do this, with the short-service system; and in what position will they find themselves, in the event of war suddenly breaking out? In Prussia, says "A Veteran," no soldier, unless he has passed through a special school, can become a non-commissioned officer until he has served three years. This shows the care with which non-commissioned officers are selected in Germany. The French Army cannot depend on obtaining similar men, because, in spite of all the advantages voted by Parliament in 1878, no one will re-engage, and there are no experienced hands to draw from. The only way to remedy this was to establish a nursery for non-commissioned officers. This was done, but now the Cavalry nursery has been abolished. As regards the reduction of officers in the French Cavalry, it must be admitted that that branch of the Service is over-officered; and General Farre, therefore, contemplates suppressing no less than two field officers and five second captains per regiment. There is some talk of new Cavalry regiments being formed with the money which will thus be economised, because the Germans count 22 more regiments of Cavalry than the French. The cavalry, too, is out of favour just now in France. It is not republican, but aristocratic; at least, the officers are most of them men of family. One has only to glance over a French Army List, to see the number of titles and de's in the regiments of horse. "A Veteran" seems to admit that in time of peace the French Cavalry regiments are over-officered, but this would not be the case in time of war, with the reserves called up. We find, therefore, in France the Cavalry over-officered in time of peace; and the Infantry, should war break out, and companies pass from a nominal strength of 100 to 250 men under-officered. The example of Germany is again cited, but "A Veteran" points out that the German Cavalry can get on with fewer officers than the French; its officers are ably supported by the non-commissioned officers, and there is also in Germany a spirit of discipline, which, unfortunately, does not exist in France. He has other arguments to urge against the contemplated reduction. As regards the transformation of the Cuirassiers—a transformation demanded by the Cavalry itself—"A Veteran" bewails it, and asks what will become of the six remaining regiments of Cuirassiers, which will be entirely lost. They will, most probably, also disappear, and with them will vanish a host of great and spirited traditions of desperate charges. According to "A Veteran," this is not a reform, but a revolution; an act of weakness on the part of the Cavalry, which has shown itself unfaithful to its glorious past, in substituting for the sabre, its decisive arm for a supreme combat, the musket, condemned by experience. But Austria, we are told, has already suppressed her Cuirassiers, and the German Cuirassiers will also be suppressed, directly the Emperor William, who holds greatly to them, dies. "A Veteran" says that Austrian and German Cuirassiers are to be suppressed, owing to the difficulty of finding horses strong enough for them. But, he adds, Germany has 25 regiments of Lancers, while France has none; the superiority of the French Cavalry used to be that it charged home, but now the Cavalry will fire, instead of charging; there will only be left six regiments to charge as of old,—six regiments, out of 77! What a decadence! The great things accomplished by Cavalry in recent wars, and since the invention of breech-loaders, show that the rôle of Cavalry has not been done away with. That branch of the Service is as much needed as ever in military operations, although it must be handled upon different principles and with more prudence than before.

The International Squadron broke up on Sunday last, and Vice-Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour has thus been relieved of an unpleasant duty. The British ships were the first to steam away from Cattaro under a general salute, being accompanied for about three miles by ships of the Austrian and German Navies. "God Save the Queen" was played by their bands, a compliment which was answered with cheering from our ships. The French, Italian, and Russian vessels followed, and when outside Point d'Ostro, the signal was given to part company. Thus ended one of the most peculiar demonstrations ever recorded in history. That Sir Beauchamp Seymour had a difficult part to play, and that he acted admirably throughout, there can be no two opinions, and we are sure he is fully entitled to the thanks of her Majesty's Government, if nothing more.

It is reported that Captain R. E. Tracey and Commander G. L. Atkinson have been selected by Admiral G. O. Willes as his flag-lieutenants.

Rear-Admiral Gore-Jones, C.B., was in the Euryalus at Bombay on November 20, and intended to remain there for some time.

Vice-Admiral Sir Leopold M'Clintock was at Bermuda in the Northampton on November 19.

The new flagship for the China station, the Swiftsure, will be commissioned at Devonport next week, when Vice-Admiral G. O. Willes, C.B., will probably hoist his flag and strike it again, and proceed on leave of absence.

Vice-Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B., has shifted his flag from the Monarch to the Alexandra, which has been in the hands of the dockyard at Malta, and was to be ready for sea on Thursday last.

It has been ascertained at Malta that the Fawn is not fit for recommission for a full term, and she is, therefore, only to be repaired sufficiently for employment for two years on surveying service, under the command of Commander Pelham Aldrich.

In handing over the Charybdis to the Canadian Government for training purposes, the Admiralty has waived the usual claim made for docking at the Royal Yards any vessel which is not employed in the Royal Navy.

A circular letter has been addressed to the ports by the Admiralty, calling attention to the absolute necessity of a certificate of completion of sights accompanying the passing certificate of midshipmen in seamanship. In cases where any difficulty may arise in the completion of these sights by the proper date, the midshipman concerned is to be drafted to some other ship where he will have better opportunities of sight-taking.

The Channel Squadron, under the command of Vice-Admiral Hood, C.B., will leave Vigo on the 13th inst. for Lisbon, where Christmas Day will be spent.

The Admiralty, in taking the question of reliefs of ships into consideration, has come to the conclusion that it would be better in future to carry out the relief in reality rather than on paper. It was not long ago that a ship actually arrived in England and was paid off before her so-called relief had left the Channel. The ship ordered home certainly required recall, and therefore their Lordships let her leave her station without waiting for her successor, but such an economical plan does not find favour on due consideration, and is not to be made a precedent. The report that "several strong protests have been addressed to the Admiralty by admirals commanding fleets on distant stations" on this matter is not in accord with fact. As a rule, our flag officers are rather passive beings in the hands of the Board, and are always ready to do their best with such squadrons as may be provided for them, and would scarcely venture on "several strong protests" in time of peace. It is the Foreign Office which is mainly responsible for the strength of squadrons in foreign waters, and that would be the source from which any protests would be raised.

China has hitherto allowed Japan to lead the way in the Far East in the formation of an ironclad fleet, but at last the Celestial Empire thinks it well to be prepared for a hostile squadron of armoured ships. Consequently, it is intended to order in Europe an armoured ship of 6,600 tons, carrying four heavy guns, and having engines of 5,400 indicated horse-power.

Commander Darwin, of the Alexandra, has been compelled to go to hospital at Malta with a fractured knee-cap, the accident having occurred through slipping down the after-ladder to the ward-room. It is the hope of all on board that he may soon be sufficiently recovered to return to his duties, and may not be superseded, as he is very popular on board the ship.

Directions have been received at Malta Yard for all the broadside ships on the station to be fitted for the reception of Nordenfelt guns. This work will be undertaken as the ships come to the port for repairs.

The Wild Swan will arrive at Bombay early in the new year to be docked and examined, to ascertain the extent of the injuries she received by her recent grounding. That these injuries cannot be extensive is assured by the fact that she is now employed on a six weeks' cruise in the Mozambique Channel.

Admiral Sir Charles Shadwell, K.C.B., President of the Royal Naval College, has received from the Admiralty an expression of their Lordships' satisfaction at the report on the College for the year ended September 30 last.

Thus far the scheme of work at the Dockyards, as laid down for the Navy Estimates, 1881-82, is based upon the employment of the same number of men next year as this.

The carpenters of the Navy are beginning to think themselves entitled to rank as commissioned officers, and are not content with the warrant, like their brethren the gunner and boatswain. They say that they were not educated in the Service like the warrants of the seaman class, but brought a profession afloat with them. In fact, they appear to be jealous of the engineers, and want to go up the ladder with them. Of course, there is no harm in trying, but it may stop a rather foolish agitation when they know that there is not the slightest chance of the present Board listening to their claims for such a lift as they seek. The horny hand of industry desires to be clothed in white buckskin, and the brow that has sweated to be adorned by a cocked hat.

The United States of America are more active than ourselves in providing Naval coaling-stations, and while we have allowed several valuable points to slip through our fingers, they are busy founding these valuable depôts in all parts. According to the report of the Secretary of the Navy, steps have now been taken to establish coaling stations at Punta Arenas, in Costa Rica, and at Pagopago, in the Samoa Islands. The Government is also urged to foster shipbuilding, so as to enable the States to compete with England's Navy and Mercantile Marine.

Much time was spent in deciding whether the Naval Demonstration should be made, and now there seems to be an equally divided opinion between the Powers interested, as to whether the international fleet shall be dispersed. According to the Agence Russe, there is some wish to keep this movable display of power in being, until the whole of the provisions of the Treaty of Berlin have been carried into effect.

Edward H. Neat, Gerald L. Clarke, Herbert B. Hill, Albert G. Craddock, and Robert Blyth, have been successful in passing the examination for assistant-clerkships in the Royal Navy.

The large drafts that have been sent during the past week by the Assistance to join the Marine Battalion in Ireland, and by the Himalaya, to fill vacancies in ships on the East India and China stations, have almost denuded the parades of the Portsmouth and Plymouth Divisions of men. Each Division is now weaker in numbers than it has been for very many years.

By the loss of eighteen months' seniority, the Assistant-Paymaster, whose trial we reported last week, only goes down the list six places, the number of his rank coming on the list for the past two years having been but one for each quarter. Thus far, this officer is to be considered fortunate, but it is worth while to call attention to the fact that the official letter which he suppressed has been shown by him in his defence to have contained "a serious and erroneous accusation," which he has since "been enabled to refute." And that was not the only "erroneous accusation," for it was proved before the Court that the official circumstantial letter contained a false statement which weighed against the officer under trial, until he proved that the statement was not true. His certificates read to the Court all spoke in the highest possible terms of the ability and excellent demeanour of the prisoner, so he was "only" adjudged to lose eighteen months' seniority. The manner in which the character of this officer would seem to have been handled by those in authority, and the slipshod way in which the circumstantial letter was written, calls for something more than passing comment, and we hope that the Admiralty will give this case their attention. Should they not see fit to restore this officer to his former place on the list, we hope they will at least mark their displeasure at charges being framed in a careless and unjust manner.

Within the space of one week two marked men have been removed by the hand of death from the list of Paymasters of the Royal Navy,—Frederick Brady, on the 30th ult., and Arthur Jones, on the 6th inst. They were men of whom their brother-officers were justly proud, and each is mourned by a large circle of friends. The first carried out the career of a paymaster, and the latter that of a secretary. Frederick Brady was made a paymaster, in a death-vacancy, at the early age of 20, and so high was his reputation as an able officer, that he held a succession of appointments in all classes of ships, from a sloop to a three-decker, until he was placed on the Retired List as a Paymaster-in-Chief, in 1874. He was several times employed on special duties, and it is not too much to say that he won the sincere respect and regard of his several commanding officers, and the love of those who served under him. Arthur Jones was also made a paymaster in a death-vacancy at the age of 23. He obtained his first appointment as secretary to Admiral Sir Phipps Hornby in 1847, and afterwards served successively in that capacity under Admirals Henderson, the Hon. Sir Montagu Stopford, and Sir Houston Stewart. He participated in the several Naval operations in the Black Sea, from the landing of the Army in the Crimea until its re-embarkation, including the attack on the sea defences of Sebastopol, the capture of Kertch and Kimburn, and was present at the fall of Sebastopol. Subsequently he became steward of the Royal Hospital at Greenwich. Talented and energetic, with a great capacity for business, he served his flag officers with great ability and devotion; their credit and reputation were the objects which he constantly kept in view. He used his position and the regard and confidence in which he was held by the flag officers under whom he served to do kindnesses to those who required assistance, and his benevolence of disposition, his calm, manly, and pleasant manner, endeared him to those with whom he came in contact.

The Marines have reason to feel proud of Serjeant Alfred Fletcher, R.M.A., who has placed the corps at the head of the Regular Forces in the rifle practice of 1879. Serjeant Fletcher has come out as the best shot in the Army not merely with a point or two, as he was no fewer than eight points ahead of number two on the list. He thus gains the silver medal, and the Admiralty also give him a special award of £20.

Not long since we called attention to the prosecution of seamen for landing tobacco-stems, and pointed out that it was manifestly unfair to charge them for tobacco that they could not smoke, and were not allowed to land and dispose of. We then suggested that the least that could be done, if stems must be issued, was to allow the men of a mess a pound of tobacco in lieu of each pound of stems returned into store. Their Lordships have now seen the advisability of adopting a plan which will remove from the men all temptation to offend against the law, and have directed that in future all tobacco issued shall be without stems. This is fair and just and reasonable, and had it been done before would have saved many a good man from getting into trouble, for trying to obtain some small return for the refuse which the Government had sold to him as tobacco.

The French Parliament has been inquiring into the conduct of Rear-Admiral Cloué, Minister of Marine, whose political proclivities were called in question by a few Radical politicians. The Prime Minister was very happy in the defence of his colleague. He said that sailors were an exceptional race, and were not to be judged by the same standard as other men, politically speaking. They were liable, too, to express themselves in forcible language, which was not so much out of place on the quarter-deck as it would be in the Tribune. If the Rear-Admiral, under the Ministry of the Duc de Broglie, made use of slightly reactionary language at Martinique, a dangerous rising was apprehended at the moment, and after all, this language had not been followed by any acts open to objection. Had the language been less firm, in all probability more brutal measures would have been necessary. Such was the gist of the defence, and the Chamber magnanimously passed to the order of the day.

It is understood, we are informed, that the Russian Admiralty will purchase in a few days the clipper Yaroslavl, from the Moscow Committee, and send her out to the Pacific. The Yaroslavl is the latest addition to the Volunteer Fleet, and is really a very formidable cruiser. It is only a few weeks ago that she arrived at Sebastopol from her builders, the celebrated Forges et Chantiers, of La Seyne, near Toulon, by whose agency most of the Moscow cruisers have been re-engined. The Yaroslavl is constructed from designs prepared in 1878 by the Technical branch of the Moscow Committee, and is said to have cost two and a half millions of francs, exclusive of artillery. Her hull is of steel, with a double bottom and water-tight bulkheads. She is 295 feet long, 41 broad, 16 deep, and has a displacement of 3,050 tons. Her engines are of 2,900 indicated horse-power, and drive her at the rate of 16 knots an hour. Her armament consists of one 8-inch gun aft, two 6-inch guns on either port, four 9-pounders, and four Gatlings. She also carries two torpedo-cutters, and is provided with every improvement in the shape of electric lights and torpedoes. On the arrival of the vessel in the Pacific, it is understood that Admiral Lesovsky will use her as his flagship

According to a despatch from Washington, it has been decided that the first vessel of the United States Navy visiting the Fiji Islands shall obtain redress for the recent murder of an American citizen by the natives. It is added that the diplomatic correspondence shows that Great Britain does not claim authority there, except so far as to protect her own subjects. It will be remembered that England took possession of the Fiji Islands in the year 1874, when they were formally ceded to her; that a governor was appointed, under whom were a judge, magistrates, police, and other officials for the well ordering of the islands. It appears that diplomatic correspondence between England and the United States has already taken place on the subject of this murder, and that the latter are not satisfied. In what manner, therefore, it is proposed by America to obtain redress through the medium of a ship-of-war, remains to be seen. It is not probable that the British Government would so far throw over its own authority over one of its dependencies, as to allow a foreign Power to punish its inhabitants either by apprehension or by violent means. It appears, on the face of the argument, that it would be about as legal for a foreign ship-of-war to enter the Thames, land a force, and capture some offender or bombard a village, as it would be for an American ship to perpetrate a similar act in the Fiji Islands. There can be no doubt but that the United States have cause to complain if a murderer in a colony belonging to a powerful nation is not sought out and brought to justice, but the act of bringing to justice should be the act of the Government of the colony, and not that of the Power aggrieved. Many a casus belli, resulting in a long and costly war, has arisen out of a less provocation than such an aggression would be considered.

The sanitary and statistical branches of the Army Medical Department have been united, under the direction of Deputy-Surgeon-General J. Irvine, M.D., and for the present, at any rate, no new appointment will be made in succession to Deputy-Surgeon-General Tydd, deceased.

A favourite heading in newspaper "bills" is "An Officer in Trouble," or "Disgraceful Conduct of a Colonel," thus impressing the public with the idea that officers are very lawless, ill-behaved members of society. In the majority of cases, however, investigation discloses the fact that "the officer" so sensationally posted is not an officer at all, and merely assumes a military title on the strength of a short and very remote connection with some branch of the Auxiliary Forces. Possibly, indeed, he may have been got rid of years ago as an undesirable member. At all events, it more often than not happens that he has no more right to call himself colonel or captain than he has to style himself an archdeacon.

In our regimental intelligence, under the head 93rd Highlanders, will be found an account of a serious accident, happily unattended with fatal results, which recently occurred at Gibraltar. But for the gallantry and presence of mind of Second Lieutenant Aitkin, Lieutenant and Adjutant Middleton, and Lieutenant Orde, Lieutenant Campbell and Private Buchanan must have been drowned. Buchanan also, after just escaping a watery grave, showed praiseworthy devotion in accompanying Mr. Orde in the dingy to pick up Mr. Aitkin. This case is certainly worthy of the notice of the Royal Humane Society, and we should even imagine that the Albert Medal might be granted.

Over and over again have we called attention to the long interval between gazettes. There was a long one on the 30th ult., but during the preceding three weeks there had been none for the Line. The inconvenience and discontent caused by these unnecessary delays are very great. We have heard of one officer who, after his exchange was sanctioned and all formalities fulfilled, was kept waiting for upwards of three weeks before the notification of it appeared in the Gazette. The machinery in connection with the promotion, retirement, and exchange of officers must be very defective, or the subordinate officials who manage the details of it must be either very lazy or quite indifferent alike to the convenience of individual officers or the efficiency of the Army.

The promotion in the Royal Engineers has again fallen to a very low average, and subalterns of the R.E. are from two to three years behind their contemporaries in the R.A. Some assistance might be given by seconding officers who, by all rules of the Service, should be removed from the Active List. The following are a few officers who certainly ought to be seconded. Doubtless there are many more, but these are glaring instances:—Colonel Sir A. Clarke, K.C.M.G., C.B., &c., Agent-General for Australia; Lieutenant-Colonel E. R. James, special duty under Secretary of State for Ireland; Major R. M. Smith, Director of Persian Telegraphs, Teheran; Captain A. B. Haig, Equerry to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh; Captain F. I. Edwards, Assistant-Private Secretary to H.M. the Queen, &c.; Captain S. Waller, Equerry to H.R.H. Prince Leopold; Captain W. Nicholson, special duty under Secretary of State for Ireland. And on the Bengal List:—Colonel J. F. Tennant, Mint Master, Calcutta, and Major H. M. Brandreth, Principal of Thomason College. What is noticeable about these officers being still on the Active List, is that similar appointments are held by seconded officers. Thus the Mint Master at Bombay is seconded, but not the Mint Master at Calcutta; the principal of Cooper's Hill Civil Engineering College was seconded (Colonel Chesney), but the principal of the Roorkee Civil Engineering College has not been. A strict examination of the List will show Consuls and Deputies, &c., in addition to others who still block promotion, and are apparently dealt with at hazard.

Colonel Henry Brackenbury, C.B., R.A., who has been appointed to succeed Major-General Conolly, C.B., as Military Attaché at Paris on January 1, 1881, filled successively for some time the posts of Instructor of Artillery and Professor of Military History at the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich. He was present in the field throughout the Franco-German War as chief representative of the British National Society for Aid to Sick and Wounded in War, for which services he was made an officer of the Legion of Honour by special decree of the French Government, but by our English rules is not allowed to wear the decoration. In 1873-4 he served throughout the Ashantee War as Military Secretary to the General commanding. In 1875 he was employed on the Staff of a special mission, military and political, in Natal, under Sir Garnet Wolseley, and on his return was semi-officially employed under Sir Patrick MacDougall in Egypt and in Crete. In 1877 he was a member of a War Office Commission to the Exhibition at Brussels, and was otherwise officially employed in Belgium. He was also present at the French manœuvres in that year. In 1878, he was appointed Assistant-Adjutant and Quartermaster-General to the Cyprus Expeditionary Force, and subsequently became Chief Commandant of Police and Inspectors of Prisons, and a member of the Executive Council of Government of the island. He raised and organised the Cyprus Military Police. In 1879, he accompanied Sir Garnet Wolseley to South Africa as Military Secretary, and acted as Chief of the Staff to the troops in that command from September, 1879, to February, 1880, a period including the campaign against Sekukuni, in which he was actively engaged. Having been offered the post of Private Secretary to the Viceroy of India, he sailed from Natal direct to India in February last, but was thrown out of office by the resignation of Lord Lytton, with whom he returned to England in August.

We ask Mr. Childers not to dishonour one of the oldest regiments in the British Service, for he might as well take away from the 42nd their proud title of "The Black Watch," as from the 25th their cherished name of "The King's Own Borderers." One of the oldest Scotch regiments in the Army, it was raised in the City of Edinburgh, in the short space of four hours, by the Earl of Leven, and it was called "Leven's" or "The Edinburgh Regiment," until regiments were numbered. Its first battle was fought in the Pass of Killiecrankie, where its gallant conduct saved a retreat from becoming a disastrous rout. All this regiment's associations are Scotch, its surname of "Borderers" embraces the whole of the south of Scotland, and it has a Militia regiment called the "Borderers," all ready for it. Why should such an old Scotch regiment be insulted by having its name, and all, or nearly all, its badges, swept away at a single stroke? What ought to be done is this—the 73rd and 90th should be moved to York, the 21st from Ayr to Hamilton, in place of the 73rd and 90th, and the 25th should be sent to Ayr. Neither the 73rd nor the 90th is now in its own county. Therefore there would be no injustice in moving them from Lanarkshire, for by this means a great injustice and very great heart-burning would be saved to an old and distinguished regiment. Far better disband a regiment altogether than take from it its title, of which it is proud, and around which there are so many cherished associations. Enough has already been done to destroy one of the finest and strongest principles that ever moves a body of men,—namely, esprit de corps. Let old regimental titles, at least, remain. An excellent letter in the Times not long since pointed out how things peculiar to certain regiments are cherished, for they mark deeds which, though long since forgotten by the outside world, are made the subjects of fond regimental tradition. We maintain that the ruthless sweeping-away of all that is old and cherished will do no good, but, on the contrary, very great harm.

In his speech on the opening of the Natal Legislative Council, on October 20, the Governor, Sir G. Pomeroy-Colley, said, in the course of his remarks:—"From Zululand I receive favourable reports. Some disorganisation and unrest have necessarily followed on the overthrow of the barbarous rule under which that country has long suffered. But the newly-appointed chiefs are amenable to the advice of the British Resident, while the people seek rest or follow their peaceful pursuits. Many are coming into the colony to seek work, and under the able guidance of the experienced gentleman now holding the office of Resident, I trust that Zululand will prove a source of benefit and security, instead of a source of ever-present danger to Natal." And again, —"You will be asked to make provision for the repayment to her Majesty's Government of the amount advanced by that Government, for the purposes of colonial defence and other colonial services during the war. A sum of £250,000, which her Majesty's Government is prepared to receive as a final contribution on the part of Natal towards the expenses of the Zulu war, will accordingly be included in the Loan Bill above mentioned."

We are requested to state that at a general meeting of the Middlesex Magistrates held at the Sessions House, Clerkenwell Green, on the 25th ult., Major Lyon gave notice that if any soldiers in her Majesty's uniform were refused admission to any seats—reserved or otherwise—in any Music-Hall in the Metropolis, he would be obliged by their writing either to him or to General Brownrigg, at that Court, and they might rely upon every effort being used to cancel the renewal of the music licence to those halls, the proprietors or servants of which had shown such disrespect to those in the service of their country. The action taken by these magistrates is deserving of praise, and it now rests with the non-commissioned officers and men of the Army themselves to say—at any rate, in the Metropolis—whether the slights which have been put upon them shall be continued. If those who are subjected to indignity only communicate through the proper quarter, publicans and music-hall managers would soon be brought to their senses. Commanding officers might fairly take the subject up, and request those under their command to make a report to them in cases where her Majesty's uniform is treated disrespectfully. If they only would do so, and see that those who offered the insult were brought to the notice of the licensing magistrates of their districts, the complaints as to the inconsiderate treatment of soldiers in uniform would very soon cease.

General Roberts's acknowledgment of the services of Quartermaster Walsh, of the 72nd Highlanders, has gained for him the gratitude of a large body of hard-worked and most meritorious officers. There is, unfortunately, no provision made in any existing Warrant which will allow of Quartermaster Walsh receiving a substantial reward for his services; but the late Secretary of State for War intimated on several occasions in the House of Commons that it was his desire to improve, if possible, the position of the regimental Quartermaster, and his successor at the War Office will, doubtless, show a readiness to carry out the wishes of his predecessor. The Lieutenants of Orderlies in the Army Service Corps who were brought to notice for their services in Zululand, were given the honorary rank of captain. We trust that Mr. Childers will consider the case of Quartermaster Walsh, at any rate there ought to be no difficulty in granting him a similar reward to that extended to the Army Hospital Corps. The concession would cost the country nothing, yet it would be highly appreciated by the Quartermasters, and would, we believe, meet with the approval of the Service. The comfort and well-being of all ranks of a regiment depend so largely upon the Quartermaster, especially on service, that those officers who specially distinguish themselves should reap the advantages enjoyed by all classes of combatant and many departmental officers. It certainly is an anomaly that an old soldier who has earned his position entirely by merit, should be denied all chance of improving his status.

The author of In Her Majesty's Keeping certainly deserves thanks for the able manner in which he has exposed the systems prevailing in our convict establishments. He strongly advocates the classification of prisoners, whereby the only partially bad would be kept apart from the notoriously evil. It would be well if the officials of the Home Office would read this book, as after a careful study of its important points, they might see their way clear to devise a remedy for the wretched state of things said to exist in most convict establishments, and the military authorities especially might with advantage direct their attention to it on behalf of the soldier. It does seem hard, indeed, that a man who has committed some slight offence against the law should be classified, and made to work and live, with another who is but one remove from a wild beast. The late fatal affray at Dartmoor is a striking verification of the system, as exposed in the Hon. Lewis Wingfield's work. But it is less with respect to the civil population that we write, than in the hope of directing attention to the punishments of our soldiers. Supposing a soldier, ordinarily a really well-behaved man, probably wearing one or more good-conduct badges, in a moment of passion is induced by drink to strike his superior officer. He is, probably, tried by general court-martial, and sentenced to five years' penal servitude, or perhaps a longer period. Is it right that this soldier should be herded with the murdering classes, or with those who have been guilty of the worst forms of crime? There are those who still look upon soldiers as "brutal and licentious;" though happily they who so think are becoming fewer, and who consider that they have no right to be regarded as in any way worthy of respect. General officers, when ordering courts-martial to assemble, do not think, probably, of the future of the soldier, should he be convicted and sentenced to penal servitude; therefore, we would recommend these officers, and all others interested in the welfare of the rank and file of the Army, to read this book; for, though it is in the form of a novel, it contains a vast amount of information. No soldier whose crime is one of insubordination, or one of a purely military character, or, indeed, any save that of murder, should ever be imprisoned in any but a military prison. Mr. Wingfield alludes to a soldier who is a convict in Dartmoor, and this would be a case in point. We would further urge that any soldier, during his imprisonment in a military prison, showing by his conduct that he has really repented of his crime, and wishing to continue soldiering, should be released "on probation," and sent to a new regiment, where he would have an opportunity of retrieving his character.

We hear that the sanitary condition of Shoeburyness is far from satisfactory. Typhoid-fever is constantly occurring there, and is very prevalent in the neighbourhood. The water-supply should be constantly analysed, not at the well, but at the water-tanks whence it is drawn. An engine should be erected at the outfall of the main sewer, as, according to present arrangements, the sewer is only opened at low water, all the sewage being shut in for several hours daily before and after high water. We understand that, in one barrack only, there were 14 cases of typhoid-fever last year, of which three proved fatal; and last week the wife of one of the officers died of this malignant malady in the staff quarters.

The Belgian police appear to have effected a very important capture, in the person of a man who was evidently engaged, and who was probably the chief agent, in the robbery committed a couple of months ago at Courneuve, near Paris. The robbers, with a skill which for some time defied not only detection, but suspicion, managed to lay hands on no less a sum than £30,000, the property of General Schramm, the senior division General in the French Army, who was supposed to have been mortally wounded at Friedland in 1807, and with whom Napoleon I. condoled in what were thought to be his last moments. The gallant veteran, who is said to have been very little affected by the loss of his money, will, it is hoped, recover at least £20,000. How the robbery was effected is still shrouded in mystery. Some one who was well acquainted with the premises and the habits of the General must have been engaged in the affair; but who this person is, the General has no idea. He distrusts none of his servants, who have all been with him for many years.

The announcement that General Loris Melikoff has decided upon a sweeping reform of the official Press of Russian has provoked great excitement among the editors concerned. It is said that all the army and navy publications, from the Rooski Invalide to the Nicolaeff Vestnik, are to be placed on a popular basis; and if they cannot exist without application to the Minister of Finance for assistance, the Dictator intends to keep on dismissing the editors until they can. We shall see how this very heroic policy succeeds. In the meanwhile, it may be interesting to note the subsidies yearly accorded to the Service journals of Russia. The Voenni and Morskoi Sborniks, the monthly reviews, respectively, of the War Office and Ministry of Marine, receive 20,000 roubles apiece; the Rooski Invalide, the daily organ of the Etat Major, 24,000 roubles; the Cronstadt Vestnik, the organ of the Baltic Fleet, 3,000 roubles; the Nicolaeff Vestnik, the organ of the Black Sea Fleet, 2,000 roubles; and the military medical journal, 7,000 roubles. At the current rate of exchange, 10 roubles go to the pound sterling.

La France has a remarkable article against the supposed necessity of France making her influence felt abroad, both in and out of Europe:—"The influence of France," exclaims the writer, "is Napoleon I., intoxicated with victory, losing his reason, giving his brother Joseph the crown of Spain, his brother Louis that of Holland, his brother Jerome that of Westphalia, his brother-in-law Murat that of Naples, and his step-son Eugène de Beauharnais the viceroyalty of Italy. It is the Corsican Cæsar, behind his eagles, all Europe enslaved and in his preparations for the campaign of Russia, writing the following instructions, which are the height of insolence:—'No General or Prussian officer must hold a command at Berlin; no Prussian troops must be quartered there; nothing must be done there except on the order of a French General. General Durutte has been appointed Commandant of Berlin. He must hold a parade every day, and give the watchword. The few men who remain in Berlin should be employed in guarding the palaces.'" And it must be remembered that at this moment France and Prussia were allies, and Prussian soldiers were about to march on Moscow. M. Rabou points to the terrible consequences resulting from other attempts to make French influence felt by interfering with foreign Powers, where such interference was uncalled for, and nothing more or less than wanton aggression.

The way in which our soldiers are coddled in India is absurd. Colaba, the European cantonment of Bombay, is two miles from the city, and yet the guards are not allowed to march to their posts, but are conveyed to and fro in an omnibus! In old days, the soldiers would have scorned such molly-coddling; but then they were men, not weakly boys. Our soldiers do not even clean their own boots, and are not allowed to go near a cook-house. They are, however, well acquainted with the road to the canteen, and the "sammy" shops in the native bazaars. The example set by the 11th Hussars during its Indian tour might, we think, be followed with advantage by commanding officers of other regiments.

Although the Geographical Society do not intend to support the Arctic scheme of Com. Cheyne, they do not mean to let the subject of Polar exploration rest. An Arctic committee is to be appointed, the first business of which will be to collect and arrange all the information that has accumulated since the return of the expedition under Sir George Nares. On the results of this inquiry, the Society will probably take action. What that action will be remains to be seen. If the Society conclude that the time has come for a fresh effort to be made to extend our knowledge of the Arctic area, they will probably appeal to Government for funds to carry out the work. Whether another great expedition, similar to that under Sir George Nares, will again be sent out we should think is very doubtful. The Governments and Geographical Societies of other countries —Germany, Russia, Sweden and Norway, Denmark, Holland, Austria, Italy, the United States,—have come to the conclusion that the establishment of a series of permanent observing stations round the Pole is now the most effective method of extending our knowledge of the Arctic region. We do not know why our Geographical Society should hold aloof from so apparently practicable a scheme, especially as these observing stations would form excellent bases from which to push northwards as opportunity offered. We doubt if the time for great and expensive expeditions has not gone past.—Times.

A highly instructive lecture was delivered at Steinway Hall, on the evening of the 8th inst., by Com. Cheyne, R.N., F.R.G.S.; Professor Rupert Jones, F.R.S., President of the Geological Society, occupying the chair. Several members of the Arctic Committee were present to support the project of the new expedition, and a very good audience assembled to judge for themselves the merits of the scheme. Numerous illustrations of Arctic scenes, shown by means of the lime-light, greatly enhanced the pleasure afforded, as proved by the hearty approval of the audience at frequent periods. After a warm and complimentary introduction by the learned chairman, Com. Cheyne tersely explained his project, showing why, on account of the reluctance of the public to subscribe so large a sum as £30,000, the general plan had been altered so as to reduce the total expenditure to £5,000, stating that the Arctic Committee, at its ast meeting, had passed a resolution, authorising a statement to be made that only £3,000 more was required to complete the funds for carrying out the enterprise. Upon conclusion the Chairman passed a well-deserved eulogium upon the lecturer and lecture combined, the latter of which he described as being most graphically delivered, and fraught with the greatest interest and pleasure to the hearers, at the same time strongly advocating a general support of Com. Cheyne's scheme, and proposing a hearty vote of thanks to that officer, which was unanimously carried, with much applause. Major Bell, F.R.G.S., late candidate for Rochester, then proposed a vote of thanks to the Chairman, and as a member of the Arctic Committee spoke strongly in support of the national work being carried on by Com. Cheyne, mentioned the confidence of the Committee in that officer, and asked all present to assist the movement to the utmost of their power. Dr. Kinns, F.R.A.S., announced a sum of £20 as just realised by means of a concert and play performed at his college, in aid of the Arctic Fund, requesting others to follow such example. The Chairman announced that the treasurer to the Arctic Fund was ready to give £50, in addition to his former subscription, if 49 other gentlemen would subscribe a like sum. The City of London Dramatic Society announced an intention of aiding the Fund.

OUR FIELD-ARTILLERY.—I.

For the third time since the introduction of rifled guns, the British Field Artillery is to be provided with a new equipment. In 1860 we adopted the Armstrong breech-loaders, in 1870 Woolwich muzzle-loaders superseded the Armstrongs, and now, in 1880, after some minor intermediate changes, we find it necessary to furnish our gunners with new and more powerful weapons. When we see that every ten years the great expense of a new equipment has had to be incurred, it behoves us now to consider whether this continual change is in the nature of things, or whether it be not our own fault that we find ourselves constantly with an armament so inferior to those of other great Powers that further effort becomes necessary. That a new equipment is necessary now, no one can deny, the comparison between our present armament and those of the great Continental Powers being so decidedly against us. Our H.A. gun fires a 9·1-lb. shell at a velocity of 1,391 ft. per second; the corresponding guns of Austria, Germany, and France have powers as follows:—

Austrian shell		9·5 lbs. ……	muzzle velocity		1,397 f.s.
German	„	11·2 lbs. ……	„	„	1,525 f.s.
French	„	13·2 lbs. ……	„	„	1,609 f.s.

Hence we see at a glance that our gun fires a smaller shell at a lower velocity than the light guns of the other countries. There is a further disadvantage, that our shell retains its velocity less well than any of the others, with a consequent result that the inferiority in power of the Woolwich gun increases with the range. "But," it may be queried, "perhaps our equipment has greater mobility than the others?" To a certain extent, that is true, but not to a degree anything like sufficient to compensate for the deficiency in power. To wit, the Austrian gun, to which ours most nearly approximates, has an equipment behind the gun team weighing 30 cwt., whilst our equipment weighs 34 cwt., a difference 1½ cwt. greater than exists between the weights drawn by the German horse artillery and heavy field-gun teams. The inferiority becomes still more glaring when we note that 40 rounds of ammunition are carried with both guns, though the weight of an Austrian round is somewhat the greater. It may be advanced in defence that our field-wheels are 5 ft. high, whilst those of the Austrian gun are 4 ft 6 in.; and that the former, whilst necessitating greater weight, give easier draught for the same weight. Now, if we suppose that for the same draught the weights may increase proportionately with the height of the wheel (which is by no means true), a simple sum in proportion shows that our equipment is by two-thirds of a hundredweight the less mobile. Hence, instead of having greater mobility to compensate for inferiority of power, our equipment, giving it every advantage, kicks the beam on both heads, and this as compared with an equipment manufactured in Austria, a country where the mechanical arts are far less advanced than in England. Further, it must be pointed out that though we adopted Woolwich field-guns in 1870, the present Horse Artillery gun, carriage, and limber are of 1874 pattern, so that for all purposes of comparison there is no unfairness in the above, the Austrian equipment having been adopted in 1876. We, moreover, had the advantage of four years' experience in the construction of iron carriages. To find where the blame for this inferiority should fall, let us push the comparison still further. Both guns weigh 6 cwt., the Austrian ammunition weighs 4¼ cwt., ours ¼ cwt. less. The matter, therefore, stands thus:—Whilst the Austrian gun-carriage has to withstand a shock one-ninth greater than ours, whilst the useful weight, i.e., guns and ammunition, is ¼ cwt. more; the remaining material to withstand this is but 19¾ cwt., as against 24 cwt. in our equipment. Concisely, guns and ammunition excluded, our equipment is more than 20 per cent. heavier, though it has to bear less strain, either in firing or travelling. From the above it must be deduced that the greater share of the blame for the inferiority of our Horse Artillery in power and mobility lies decidedly with the Carriage Department. If our Horse Artillery armament is inferior, our heavy field batteries are in no better pass. Comparing our 16-pounder with the corresponding German gun we find that the value of the German projectile at the muzzle, measured by the amount of work stored up in it, is superior to that of the 16-pounder, and that the superiority increases with the range; whilst the weight of our equipment (42 cwt.) is 4¼ cwt. more than that of its compeer, a fact that is rendered all the more lamentable when it is found that the German gun team has behind it 33 rounds, the 16-pounder gun-team but 28. The Austrian heavy field-gun is slightly more powerful than the German, and the weight to be drawn with 34 rounds somewhat less; while the new French gun is more powerful still. Again, we can show that the Carriage Department is the greatest culprit, for though the strain on the German carriage is 50 per cent. greater, though more than half a hundredweight more ammunition is carried, the weight of accessories is by more than 1½ cwt. less. Now, though our gun is of pattern 1870, its carriage and limber is of pattern 1874, the German equipment dating from 1873. But we have no reason to go back to 1874 to condemn the Carriage Department. Its latest exploits surpass anything we could have imagined possible. It was decided to send to South Africa, during the recent troubles, our little 7-pounders, of 200 lbs. weight, mountain guns light enough to be carried on the back of a mule, and it was deemed advisable to supply field-carriages for them. Will it be believed that this little gun had a weight behind team of no less than 25 cwt.? Why, this is ½ cwt. more than the weight of the equipment of the Italian field-gun, which weighs 650 lbs., the muzzle energy of its projectile being more than twice that of the 7-pounder. There is something positively shameful in this. Can we be surprised that Major Robinson, R.A., devised for the same gun an equipment which weighed but 13 cwt., or little more than half as much as that devised by the Carriage Department, and this without the appliances at their disposal? Our surprise is great, indeed, when we find from the reports of the Director of Artillery that the Woolwich carriage required more repair than did the lighter one, constructed locally. To prevent cavilling, we will add that of the difference in weight (12 cwt.), 2 cwt. was due to difference in amount of ammunition carried. We have yet one more exploit of the Carriage Department to bring forward, and this occurs within the present year. The Gun Factory constructed a M.L. 13-pounder to supersede our light field-gun, and for this an equipment with 36 rounds was devised, the total weight being under 37 cwt. Not so bad. It is wished to try a breechloader of the same power, and the Gun Factory supplied one as powerful as the former, but half a hundredweight heavier. Now, according to all theory, the extra weight of the gun, firing similar ammunition, lessens the strain on the carriage; hence the weight of the whole equipment should not be increased by more than the extra weight of the gun. The Carriage Department must needs make some improvements, with a result that, without carrying a single extra round, the total weight approximated to 41 cwt. Here is a gun which, with its muzzle-loading brother, is designed as a light gun, and a Department provides for it an equipment which would bring the total weight beyond the powers of six horses, a weight heavier much than that drawn by any heavy field-battery gun on the Continent. What can we say of such an establishment? To put it mildly, we say it does not know its work. We challenge the Carriage Department to deny a single point herein advanced. As we know they cannot be denied, is it too much to ask the Secretary of State for War to intervene, and call on Sir William Armstrong or Sir William Whitworth to supply us with our new field carriages, instead of trusting to a department badly constituted, grossly inefficient, and, by causing constant change, excessively expensive? Finally, we cannot but condemn also the higher Ordnance Authorities who, ignorantly or wilfully, have so long allowed an inefficient Department to provide a corps, the personnel of which is magnificent, with a material inferior to that of any other great Power.

THE BRITISH MILITIA.—No. I.

Few who have made practical acquaintance with our old constitutional force, the Militia, will, we feel sure, endorse the opinion expressed in an article, entitled "The Strategy of the Future," which appeared a few weeks ago in the ponderous columns of the Saturday Review. In this pretentious article the Militia is introduced and dismissed in the following curt proposition,—"and the notorious inefficiency of our Militia." We are well aware that the Militia has been a favourite object for attack, but believe that of late many able men have come forward as its supporters, and that in proportion as the public gain a better knowledge of the force, so will its utility, aye, and efficiency, be more and more fully acknowledged, and what faults there are in its constitution and training be corrected. We propose to give a sketch of its present constitution, and of such details connected with its administration as seem pertinent to a full and correct understanding of this, the great Reserve as it ought to be, and also the nursery as we trust it will become, of our Regular Army. For the year 1880, the estimated strength of the force, including staff, was 142,586; actual strength present at training (computed by Colonel G. G. Walker, in his lecture on the Militia at the United Service Institution, May 21, 1880), about 113,000 (exclusive of staff). The total cost of training and supplying this force may be put at £11 10s. per head (including staff, pay, and maintenance). As to the appointment of officers.—Recommendations for first appointment as subaltern are made by Lords-Lieutenant of counties, or failing them, by commanding officers of corps. Above the rank of subaltern, appointments may be made by promotion of Militia officers, by transfer of officers of the Regular Army, or by the direct appointment of retired officers. Militia commissions are prepared, authenticated, and issued in the same manner as commissions of officers in the Regular Army. Militia officers are subject to military law during the non-training period, as well as during training. When the Lord-Lieutenant of a county was alone responsible, the officers of a corps were almost invariably gentlemen of local status in the county. All this is now changed, or changing, as regards the permanent officers, and men seeking a position through their commissions, or officers retired from the Army or on temporary half-pay, will fill the commissioned ranks. Now, social rank has a great influence even in the Regular Army for good, and has greater influence in the Militia. Money is also required, as the band, regimental school, and recreation-room, with various other objects which tend greatly to efficiency, require pecuniary support. It is also necessary that the officers, especially the company officers, should be known and respected by the men. We believe that it is owing to these three requirements having hitherto been fulfilled, especially the last, that the Militiaman has been found so amenable to discipline. The higher the position of the field-officers, the better the tone and the stronger the esprit de corps. Let it be granted that modern warfare requires all officers should be thoroughly efficient. Are half-pay officers, and officers retired after a length of service, likely to be so? Will they be residents in the counties to which their corps belong? Will they be willing, and able, to contribute money to regimental extras? These are questions which must be considered in reference to "officering the Militia." The Staff.—The adjutant is an officer appointed for five years; he is on full Army pay, but seconded while holding the appointment. Quartermasters are only appointed to corps of an establishment of six companies and upwards. The non-commissioned officers of the staff are either,—(a), transfers completing Army service; (b), pensioners, who have been discharged from the Army on completion of 21 years' service; (c), Militiamen, who have completed five trainings, and are in possession of a certificate of qualification; (d), drummers or buglers serving on the staff, who have been specially recommended. As regards the adjutant, we are strongly against the field of selection being narrowed; and in favour of giving the officer commanding the corps some voice. Quartermasters should be appointed to all corps. Company serjeants on the staff should be retired, without exception, at the age of 50. Even at 45 they are getting too old to perform the ordinary duties of a drill-serjeant with energy and efficiency. Militiamen are enlisted for a term of six years; may be re-enlisted at the expiration of, or within 12 months after the termination of, an engagement for four years. There are minor regulations regarding enlistment of discharged soldiers, and re-enlistment. Promotion to the non-commissioned ranks is, in principle, the same as in the Regular Army. The qualifications for Militiamen are as under:—Minimum, growing lads—age, 16 to 18; height, 5 ft. 2 in.; chest-measurement at discretion of medical examiner. Men—age, 18 to 35; height, 5 ft. 3 in.; chest, 32 in. We consider that 32 in. is the lowest chest-measurement that should be sanctioned, whether for growing lad or adult. Discharged soldiers can be enlisted for the Militia up to the age of 45, on being certified to be medically fit for six years' service. Militiamen are allowed to purchase their discharge at any time, providing their application be received one month before the date fixed for the commencement of preliminary drill or training, at the following rates:—Not re-engaged, £1; re-engaged, £1 10s. A Militia Reserve-man £1 in addition to either of the above. Discharge on payment is granted at exceptionally low rates.—It would seem advisable, except under very special circumstances, that a recruit should serve for one training before granting him his discharge by purchase at such a low rate. As an alternative to purchase, (or combined with it,) discharges might be made contingent on Militiamen rejoining the colours, in case their corps should be embodied. There could thus be formed a small reserve of partially trained Militiamen, ready to replace those Militia Reserve-men who are drafted to the Regular Forces on the Reserves being called out. The Militia Reserve consists of Militiamen who, in consideration of increased bounty, contract a supplementary engagement to enter on Army service when summoned. The quota of men to be enrolled in the Militia Reserve is one-fourth of the establishment of each regiment. Increased qualifications are required, both as regards standard and physique, and a previous service of two trainings, or two years in the Regular Forces. The Reserve coincides in duration with the current Militia engagement. The ground being cleared by this brief sketch of the composition of the Force, we shall deal with the mode of Recruiting in our next number.

THE ARMY MEDICAL DEPARTMENT.

"Surgeon-Major" writes:—"No one can deny that the present Director-General of the Army Medical Department has placed it on a sound footing in the main relatively to the forces of which it has the care. But looking within, things are less satisfactory. Surgeon-majors are very dull indeed over their prospects, nor is it surprising, for what are they? Answer, just these,—that they will be promoted to the next rank of brigade-surgeon after 28 years' service, or thereabouts,—a grade, be it observed, defined as executive,—and they may hope, bar accidents, to become deputy-surgeons-general after a service of 35 years. Now, as a medical officer on entering the Service is at least 21, on completing this service he would be at the ripe age of 56; but by present rules, he would be compulsorily retired a year before if still in the executive ranks! This cannot be considered an enlivening prospect for these officers; neither can the Service profit. A cry has gone up for young Generals. Do we not also want young principal medical officers with troops in the field,—men who are not too old to rough it, but have still some of their pristine energy left? Then why not apply the rule of five years' tenure to administrative appointments in the Department, just as has been done with regimental commands, majorities, staff appointments, &c. This would quicken promotion considerably, and brighten the prospects of many."

ROYAL ARTILLERY.

The remains of Col. J. H. Peile, who died in London a few days since, were buried with military honours by the troops at Woolwich on the 2nd inst. The coffin, having been brought down to the Park guard-room, was temporarily lodged under a canopy of flags, and then transferred to a gun-carriage for conveyance to Charlton Cemetery. Two batteries of Royal Artillery led the way, with arms reversed, followed by the full band. Next the coffin marched the deceased officer's charger, and beside it, as pall-bearers, were Cols. March, R.E., Sterling, R.A., Markham, Woolsly, R.A., FitzHugh, R.A., and Spurway, R.A. The troops who followed consisted of the 16th Lancers, the Royal Horse Artillery and field batteries, Army Service Corps, and others, the whole being in command of Col. Rowley, R.A. The road to the cemetery was kept by vedettes of the Royal Horse Artillery. On the arrival of the corpse at the burial-ground it was received by the Rev. H. W. Wheeler, chaplain to the Forces, who performed the funeral service.

Brevet Major G. Swinley (late Bengal), commanding No. 2 Derajet Mountain Battery, has been granted leave from India to England for two years, on private affairs.

The members of the East India United Service Club entertained Gen. Sir Frederick Roberts, G.C.B., V.C., C.S.I., and his Staff at dinner at their club-house, St. James's Square, on Tuesday evening. About 120 members sat down to dinner. More were desirous of joining the party, but were prevented, owing to want of room. Gen. Roberts and the following members of his Staff, Gens. J. Hills, V.C., C.B., and H. T. Macpherson, V.C., C.B., Cols. E. F. Chapman, R.A., and Baker, C.B., Majors Kennedy and Pretyman, R.A., arrived early. Both the present and late Secretaries of State for India, the Marquis of Hartington and Viscount Cranbrook, were present, the Marquis of Hartington presiding. After the usual loyal toasts had been proposed by the noble Marquis, and cordially responded to, he gave the health of the guest of the evening, hoping that Sir Frederick might be induced to depart from his usual reticence regarding himself. Gen. Sir Frederick Roberts, in reply, extolled the services of the officers and men who had served under him, and stated his belief that the different portions of the Indian Army require, in consequence of the very mixed material, special treatment and organisation. He announced his appointment to command the Madras Army, and paid a warm tribute to the native army for its support of the European troops. Viscount Cranbrook next proposed "Her Majesty's Indian Services," to which his lordship paid a warm tribute. He laid special stress on the necessity for excluding India from the field of party politics, and thanked the chairman for the generous tribute he had paid to the services of the late Viceroy. Among the company present were also the following:—Gen. H. C. Fletcher, Col. R. H. Keatinge, V.C., C.S.I., Col. F. R. Aikman, V.C., Gen. C. M. Barrow, C.B., Gen. C. H. Blunt, C.B., Gen. C. G. H. Coote, Gen. J. E. Cracroft, Gen. J. Davidson, Gen. H. P. de Teissier, R.A., Gen. H. T. Duncan, Gen. T. A. Duke, Col. H. L. Evans, Gen. F. E. Francis, Gen. J. J. Fulton, Col. P. T. French, Gen. F. W. Graham, Col. J. A. Grant, C.B., C.S.I., F.R.S., Gen. H. C. Johnston, C.B., Gen. Sir C. P. Keys, K.C.B., Gen. H. M. Miller, Gen. R. Ranken, Gen. J. R. Sladen, R.M., Gen. E. J. Spilsbury, Gen. Sir Alexander Taylor, K.C.B., Gen. D. Thomson, Gen. J. Travers, C.B., V.C., Gen. F. C. Trevor, R.A., Gen. E. Tyrwhitt, Gen. W. J. Ward, Gen. S. C. Woodcock, Gen. T. F. Wilson, C.B., Mr. G. Banbury, Mr. J. Scarlett Campbell, Mr. F. S. Chapman, Mr. R. A. Dalyell, C.S.I., Sir Barrow Ellis, K.C.S.I., Mr. G. H. Ellis, Sir J. Fayrer, K.C.S.I., Mr. G. Lance, Mr. B. Sapte, C.B., Mr. O. Toogood, Mr. James D. Ward, Mr. W. G. Probyn, Mr. L. C. Probyn, Gen. A. D. Vanrenen, and Mr. Percy Wigram.—The Prime Warden and the rest of the wardens of the Fishmongers' Company invited more than 150 guests to dine with them at their hall on Thursday evening, to meet Major-Gen. Roberts. To "The Navy, Army, and Reserve Forces," a toast which the Prime Warden proposed in complimentary terms, making reference especially to the gallant deeds of the British troops in Afghanistan, Capt. Burstal responded on behalf the Navy, Gen. Studholme Brownrigg, C.B., for the Army, and Alderman Sir W. A. Rose for the Reserve Forces. The Prime Warden proposed "The Lord Mayor and Corporation of the City of London," coupling therewith the Chief Magistrate of the City, whose name was known in Londonderry, in Sydney, and in the Fiji Islands, as well as in London. The Lord Mayor returned thanks, and in reference to the fact that the City of London had conferred the honour of its freedom on many distinguished men, expressed his pleasure in hoping that before long the name of Sir F. Roberts would be added to the list. Responding on behalf of "The Houses of Parliament," the Recorder expressed a hope that all parties in the House of Commons would unite in seeking to secure the welfare of this great empire, especially where its peace was most disturbed. The object of Parliament should be to secure redress of grievances and repression of crime, and he hoped that at the end of the Parliamentary campaign it would be found that those objects had been thoroughly accomplished. The Prime Warden, in proposing the toast of the evening, "Lieut.-Gen. Sir Frederick Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., C.I.E.," briefly traced the military career of the officer up to his crowning effort at Candahar. He remarked that the father of the gallant General served in the first Afghan war in 1838 and 1840, was present at the taking of Ghazni, and received at the hands of the Crown the decoration of the Grand Cross of the Bath. This was a remarkable instance of the same distinction being enjoyed by the father and the son. In the course of the evening a very handsome casket was presented by the Company, with their freedom, to Gen. Roberts. This is the first testimonial presented to the General since his return to England. The casket, which was handed round during the evening for the inspection of the company, is oblong in shape, with a domed lid, and is designed in the style of the Indian renaissance. In the front, enamelled in heraldic colours, are the arms, crest, and motto of the General, with his supporters, a Highlander and a Goorkha, in repoussé gold. On the left side is a palm-branch, and the legend, "Palmam qui meruit ferat;" on the right, a cross with laurels, and the words, "Semper paratus pugnare pro patriâ," and at the base is engraved the motto of the Royal Artillery, "Quo fas et gloria ducunt." The domed lid is divided into six panels; the decorations including the General's Orders, the Victoria Cross, the Grand Cross of the Bath, and the Order of the Indian Empire, the oak the emblem of England, and the shamrock of Ireland, the country of Gen. Roberts's birth. The following is the inscription:—"Presented by the Worshipful Company of Fishmongers of the City of London, to Major-General Sir Frederick Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., C.I.E., late Commander of her Majesty's Forces in Southern Afghanistan, on his taking up his freedom, 9th December, 1880." Scrolls are entwined, engraved with the twelve chief battles and incidents in the General's career. The work has been designed by Messrs. Howell and James.

72ND HIGHLANDERS. The Civil and Military Gazette says :—"Some of the Scotch residents of Lahore have held a meeting for the purpose of giving an entertainment to the men of the 72nd and 92nd Regiments, in welcome of their return from Afghanistan, and recognition of their gallantry during the war. The meeting was merely preliminary, its work being confined, first, to discussing the project, consulting Cols. Parker and Stockwell, the commanding officers of the regiments concerned, and arranging for a general meeting, at which the details of the project should be settled. Both officers have heartily accepted the proposal; and we do not suppose that the men will entertain any insuperable objection to being fêted. The selection of a day was the main difficulty, because the time from the 10th to the 16th will be pretty well filled up with escort duty, guard duty, reviews, games, and the other incidents of the Viceroy's visit. But as Lord Ripon leaves early on the morning of the 16th, it was suggested that an hour or two might easily be found in the afternoon of that day, for the tiffin or dinner, or whatever it is to be. A site for the entertainment has been provisionally fixed upon, at apoint midway between the two camps. Excluding the invalids,—as, unfortunately must be done,—there would be about 1,200 men available for the modest treat. Though the idea was started by the Lahorites, the hope is that the entertainment will be given by the Scotchmen of the Punjab." According to the Lahore paper, "the regiment is about to be promoted from trews to kilts, in reward for its distinguished services in Afghanstan." Our contemporary says :—"We believe the honour was within the regiment's reach at least once before, but on the present occasion they do not mean to let it slip." In reply to the toast of "The Army," at the annual dinner of the Scottish Corporation on St. Andrew's Day, Gen. Sir F. Roberts said :—"Any soldier would be gratified at being called upon to return thanks for the Army this evening, not only on account of the very flattering terms in which your lordship the President has proposed the toast, but also for the evident manner in which you, gentlemen, have responded to it. To me it is an especial satisfaction, inasmuch as it affords me the opportunity I have looked for to express publicly my high appreciation of the good work performed by her Majesty's troops in Afghanistan during the last two years. Where all have done their duty so nobly, it might be invidious to single out particular regiments for special praise, but I am sure that I shall not be misunderstood by the other gallant fellows whom I had the honour to command if, at a banquet given by Scotchmen on this festival of St. Andrew, I bring to notice the gallant conduct in the field and the good behaviour in quarters of the two noble Highland regiments which were under my own immediate command. Scotland, my lord and gentlemen, may well be proud of her Majesty's 72nd (the Duke of Albany's) and the 92nd (the Gordon Highlanders). No words of mine can express the admiration I feel for those two splendid corps. By their devotion and heroism they have proved that we can look to Scotland, as in days of yore, for men for our Army both capable and willing to endure hardship and privations, and ready, when occasion requires it, to lay down their lives for their Queen and country. Were I to recount to you one-tenth of the glorious deeds which came under my own observation, I should, while gratifying myself, occupy too much of your time. Permit me, however, to say that the manner in which her Majesty's troops carried on their duties during the war fully deserved the evident reception which the toast of 'The Army' has met with from all here. We one and all rejoiced at being in a position to uphold the dignity of our Sovereign, to maintain the honour of our country, and to prove to the world that her Majesty's soldiers are as brave and as loyal as they ever have been. My lord and gentlemen, I have had the pleasure now on three successive St. Andrew's nights to dine with Scotchmen, and I hope I may often have the same pleasure. On two previous occasions I was the guest of the 72nd Highlanders, and although commissariat rum and ration beef are not so exhilarating nor so tempting as the magnificent banquet of which we have just partaken, we managed to spend very cheery evenings, and we did not fail to drink the health of our friends at home with all the national honours. As regards myself, my lord and gentlemen, I will tender you my hearty thanks for the cordial manner in which the very complimentary allusions of the chairman to my services have been received by this ancient and distinguished corporation."

93RD HIGHLANDERS. The Gibraltar Chronicle of the 30th ult. contains the particulars of a boat accident which occurred in the bay on the previous Sunday afternoon :—"After a considerable fall in the barometer, with an easterly mind, rain began to fall early in the afternoon, and was followed by a succession of violent storms. This continued far into the night, the fall of rain being registered as one and a half inches during the 24 hours. The easterly wind, increasing in violence, was blowing very hard on Monday morning, and a number of vessels took shelter in the bay, steamers riding at double anchor and long cables. On Sunday afternoon some officers were sailing in the bay in the yawl Ariel, belonging to the officers of the 93rd Highlanders, and were unable to get her back to her moorings off the New Mole before dark. Shortly after 6 o'clock an attempt was being made to tow the yacht up against a strong tide, which was settling into the bay, by means of the dingy, in which were Mr. J. Campbell, and Pte. Buchanan, 93rd Highlanders. The Ariel was at the time down the bay inside the outer line of hulks; it was quite dark, and the storm which had been gathering all day was just breaking over the rock. While the boat was already towing, a sudden puff filled the yacht's sails and surged her ahead, the strain of the tow-rope pulling the dingy's stern under, and filling her with water without a moment's warning. Its occupants were precipitated into the water, and both the yacht and boat drifted rapidly away from them. Up to this time Mr. F. Aitken, 93rd Highlanders, had been at the helm of the Ariel, but seeing what had happened, he put it hard over, so as to throw the vessel up in the wind, and without an instant's hesitation he jumped overboard as he was to the assistance of his comrade. In the meantime, Mr. A. Middleton, 93rd Highlanders, rapidly divested himself of his clothes, and seizing a life-buoy, followed with but little delay. Mr. Campbell and Buchanan had struck out for the vessel; but the tide was strong against them, and Mr. Campbell soon became exhausted. When reached by Mr. Aitken he was just sinking, and was actually seized by him under the water. By the time Mr. Middleton arrived he was himself exhausted, and, Mr. Campbell still continuing to struggle, all three were for a time in a most perilous position, the whole of them sinking beneath the water more than once, together with the buoy. Happily, Mr. R. Orde, 2nd Batn. Rifle Brigade, was also on board the Ariel, and, acting with great judgment, he let go the anchor as soon as possible, and then, seeing that alone he could be of no assistance, he swam out to the dingy, which was floating full of water some 40 yards off, and managed to push her down about the same distance to the spot where the three were struggling in the water. Mr. Campbell having been got to hold on to the gunwale of the boat, she was then hauled in to the Ariel by the tow-rope, which, luckily, had remained attached to her; and Mr. Campbell, now totally unconscious, was got on board. It was only then that Mr. Aitken was heard calling out, and it was seen that, in place of coming in with the boat, he had remained floating with the life-buoy. Steps were at once taken to rescue him, Mr. Orde and Buchanan proceeding in search of him in the dingy, partially emptied for the occasion, and he was picked up, in a very exhausted condition, about 250 yards from the yacht, after having been in the water for at least 20 minutes. After being taken on board, Mr. Campbell soon recovered consciousness, and about half an hour later the yacht was boarded by Capt. S. Buckle, colonial engineer, who had come out in search of her from the New Mole on board the steam-launch."

95th Regiment. The Pall Mall Gazette says:—"A soldier was shot last Monday night in a public-house at Cork. It is stated that a young man named Josiah Hamston, the son of a warder in the military barracks, and a soldier of the 95th Regt. were drinking together, when, in the course of a conversation, Hamston produced a revolver, and was holding the muzzle towards his companion when the revolver went off, the bullet striking the soldier in the forehead. Hamston has been arrested. The occurrence is believed to be accidental, as the two men were good friends, and the soldier, who was on leave, was at the time staying with Hamston."

The charge is very moderate. Past and present members of the corps can obtain particulars either from the regiment or from Messrs. Hill and Saunders.

Rifle Brigade. H.M.S. Himalaya, which has been detailed to bring home the 2nd Batn. from Gibraltar, left England on Thursday for the Mediterranean.

2nd West India Regiment. The death has been officially reported of Lieut. F. W. E. Maunsell, which occurred at British Honduras on Sept. 6.

Ordnance Store Department. "Bis dat qui cito dat" writes:—"You were good enough to give space in your paper to my letter concerning the Ordnance Store Department, and the slow way the vacancies are filled up. Can any one enlighten me as to the delay in posting the senior Ordnance Store officers at Aldershot, Malta, Cork, and the Cape of Good Hope? Junior officers are performing the duties, but where are the senior officers? In the rank of deputy-commissary-general, all are now comfortably at home. What inducement can there be to zeal and energy? How hopeless is the race, when the prizes are withdrawn!"

Medical Department. Brig.-Surg. R. Wolseley, M.D., Surg.-Major W. Graves, and Surg. G. F. A. Smythe sailed for India on Wednesday in H.M.S. Euphrates. Surg.-Major A. C. By direction of the Secretary of State for War, a Royal Warrant, governing appointment, promotion, and retirement of the medical officers of the Household troops, was issued on the 1st inst. The Warrant states that these officers may be borne on the establishments as regimental officers. The ranks and relative ranks shall be the same as those laid down in the Warrant of Nov. 27, 1879, for officers of the Army Medical Department below the rank of Deputy-Surgeon-General and the rates of pay shall all be the same as those prescribed by the said Warrant for officers of the Army Medical Department of similar rank, provided that a surgeon who may have completed 15 years' service before he is promoted to the rank of surgeon-major shall receive 17s. 6d. a day. The relative rank shall govern the issue of their allowances, but the allowance in lieu of quarters, fuel, and light shall, as heretofore, only be admissible in those cases in which it would be issuable to other officers of the Brigade of Guards. Medical officers may be nominated for the establishments of regiments of Household troops by the colonels of regiments from the candidates who successfully compete for the Army Medical Department under conditions previously specified, but shall not be selected for appointment until they have passed through the course prescribed for surgeons on probation. A surgeon appointed on completion of probation shall be gazetted, and his commission shall bear the date of the day of his passing from probation. A surgeon of the Army Medical Department transferred to a regiment of Household troops shall be gazetted to the regiment to which he is nominated, but his seniority in the Brigade shall reckon for promotion from the day on which he was gazetted to the regiment. The promotion of medical officers on the establishment shall be by seniority in the medical establishment of the brigades of cavalry and infantry respectively. Surgeons shall be eligible for promotion to the rank of surg.-major, and surgs.-major to the rank of brig.-surg., without reference to length of service, but only on a vacancy occurring in the senior ranks of the medical officers on the establishment of the brigades to which they belong. Medical officers on the establishment may have the option of transfer to the Army Medical Department, or may be permitted to exchange with officers of that department, provided that when exchanging to a rank above that of surg. in the Army Medical Department they shall have fulfilled the conditions as to foreign service required of medical officers of the department.

The Auxiliary Forces.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

The Honourable Artillery Company. The prizes won by members of the corps during the year were distributed on Thursday evening by the Hon. Mrs. Loyd-Lindsay. Round the sides of the large drill-hall, which was tastefully decorated, the men of the three arms of the Service represented in this corps—artillery, cavalry, and infantry—were formed in line. On a daïs were displayed the prizes, valued at £600, which made a handsome show. The 22nd annual report on the progress of musketry instruction and target practice, by the musketry-instructor, Capt. Raikes, was read by Major and Adjt. Borton, in the unavoidable absence of the former from London. It stated that this year the musketry regulations and the rules of the regimental shooting committee had been entirely revised, with a view to raise the standard of efficiency, and that the change had proved successful. In order to be classed as efficients, members were now required to fire up to 600 yards and to obtain 70 points, whereas formerly they were only required to make 40 points under 300 yards. Although the difficulty of proving efficiency had been thus increased, a much larger number had fired their second-class than ever before, and the marksmen showed an increase of 25 per cent. over the number last year. At the Army Rifle Meeting at Aldershot in August, Lieut. Munday won the Grand Military Cup, open to all ranks of the Army, Navy, Royal Marines, and Auxiliary Forces. Serjt. J. A. M'Kenzie won the championship of the North London Rifle Club, and was also chosen captain of the team which fired against Sir Henry Halford's team, of the Midland Club, at Birmingham. Pte. A. Reside was presented with the badge of gold-crossed rifles and crown for an aggregate score in three periods of classing of 179 points, as the best shot in the regiment. Lieut.-Col. Loyd-Lindsay, V.C., M.P., after the distribution of the prizes, addressed those present, and said that this regiment better deserved the name of Volunteer than any other, for it did not cost the country a penny. He regretted that the number of members of this ancient and distinguished regiment was not greater, but it lay with the members who were, through an elected council, practically the governors of the Hon. Artillery Company, to increase the muster on parade.

1st London Engineers. The Lord Mayor presented the prizes of this regiment at the Guildhall on the 3rd inst. Lieut.-Col. Drew's statement of the work of the year was in all respects good. The enrolled had increased from 448 to 513, and the efficients showed an advance of 83. During the proceedings, the prize for "best-dressed rank and file in marching order" was decided by Col. Dawson-Scott, R.E., and Major Jones, R.E.; and Corpl. Pannell was the winner. Major and Adjt. Parker, R.E., received well-deserved praise for the success which has attended his exertions, in conjunction with Serjt.-Major Johnson, R.E., in bringing the corps to its present high state of efficiency. Sapper Kirkup is the best shot.

3rd Kent Rifles. The prizes of the Greenwich Company were distributed on Monday night at Blackheath. Capt. Frigout said the company had well kept up its position, the numbers attending the camp were larger, and great progress had been made in shooting.

2nd (South) Middlesex Rifles. Lieut.-Col. Viscount Ranelagh presided at the annual presentation of prizes at the head-quarters, Walham Green, on Saturday, and, as usual, made some sound remarks respecting the work of the year. The consolidation and renumbering of all the regiments, he said, he considered a step in the right direction towards that complete organisation which had been so long required. A feature of the year's musketry practice was the field and long-range volley-firing at Caterham. The result of the field-firing (for the introduction of which into this country Lord Ranelagh credited Capt. and Adjt. James, as he believed it had only previously been attempted in India) at unknown distances, between 750 and 175 yards, gave a per-centage of hits to rounds fired of 6·47 on the small canvas dummies representing men's heads, this being considerably in excess of the average made by the troops at Aldershot with the Martini-Henry. The champion badge was awarded to Serjt. R. Pullman (G.M.), and the badge of rifle and three stars to Corporal R. Bird.

6th Middlesex (St. George's) Rifles. The prizes of this regiment were distributed on the evening of the 3rd inst., at Willis's Rooms, by Lieut.-Gen. Erskine, an officer to whom, with Gen. McMurdo, the force owes much for valuable advice and assistance in the early days. Lieut.-Col. the Hon. C. H. Lindsay gave a favourable report of the condition of the regiment as regards the enrolled strength, which is 506, but the efficients are only 447, or 10 less than in 1879.

23rd (late 46th) Middlesex Rifles. The annual prize distribution will take place at St. James's Hall, on Tuesday next. The Countess of Lytton will present the prizes, supported by Lady Roberts and Mrs. Routledge. Amongst the visitors will be the Earl of Lytton, Lord Chelmsford, Major-Gen. Sir F. Roberts, Major-Gen. J. Ross, Col. Logan, and many others.

2nd Stafford Rifles (late 1st Administrative Battalion). The annual return of the regiment shows the following results to have been obtained during the year which ended Oct. 31:—Enrolled strength, 1,091; efficients, 1,091; non-efficients, nil.; per-centage, 100; camp allowances, £722 10s.; capitation grant, £1,922; total, £2,644 10s. The battalion has its head-quarters at Stoke-on-Trent, and is commanded by Lieut.-Col. M. D. Hollins, and the adjt. is Capt. Pope, 94th Regt.

1st Surrey Artillery. On the invitation of Dean Stanley, the brigade attended Divine service in Westminster Abbey, on Sunday morning last. The brigade paraded in strong force at Wellington Barracks at 9 o'clock, under command of Lieut.-Col. Hope, V.C., and marched to the Abbey, where a special space had been reserved for it. The Duke of Teck, hon. colonel, was present.

Tower Hamlets Rifle Brigade. Capt. Ritchie, M.P., presented the prizes of this fine battalion at the Shoreditch Town Hall on Monday night. In the absence of Lieut.-Col. Mapleson, the opening statement was made by Lieut.-Col. Wigram, who said the strength had advanced from 849 to 903, and the efficients from 751 to 884. Much of the success was attributable to their adjt., Capt. Barnett, 4th Foot. M Company (Capt. Barnett's) was awarded the first prize for efficiency, having returned 112 out of 116. Colour-Serjt. Costin is the best shot in class-firing.

The Indian Army.

[The Editor will be glad to receive Contributions from time to time from Officers of Native Regiments who may desire to render this column interesting to friends in England.]

3rd Bengal Cavalry. Capt. G. T. Morris, squadron-officer, has been appointed a garrison instructor on the Staff of the Bengal Army for five years, vice Major W. Smith, R.A., whose period of Staff service has expired.

13th Bengal Cavalry. Lieut.-Col. R. C. Low, commandant, has been granted leave to England for two years, on private affairs.

3rd Bengal N.I. The Lahore paper says:—"The appointment of Col. R. Blair to the command of one of the vacant Bengal Brigades will cause, we suspect, much surprise, and some discontent among the aspirants to these prizes of the Service. Col. Blair is one of the fortunate officers, who, by electing to remain in the local service, has obtained a start of about a dozen years' promotion over his less lucky comrades of the Staff Corps. He has, we believe, taken no part in the Afghan War, and has been for some time employed in commanding at Dinapore, a post which would not necessarily test his fitness for the command of a brigade. He now supersedes Cols. Hankin and Doran, both of whom have commanded brigades in the field, the former having, since his Cavalry brigade was broken up, commanded the Peshawur brigade with great energy, ability, and success. Brigdr.-Gen. Hankin, an officer of some 13 years' longer service than Col. Blair, and far more widely known, is passed over by an untried junior in a manner which will not, we think, conduce to the popularity, or credit for discernment, of the Commander-in-Chief, whose recommendation has, in this instance, we believe, outweighed the wishes of the Government. Col. Blair has obtained credit for his efficient command of the 3rd N.I., but Col. Hankin long since received the thanks of the Governor-General in Council for his services in the organisation of the 4th Bengal Cavalry, a regiment which he has commanded for years. His conduct in command of a brigade has been approved and generally recognised; and it is difficult to understand how his claims have come to be ignored in favour of an officer so much his junior."

5th Bengal N.I. Lieut. G. P. Hatch, attached, has been appointed wing-officer on probation, vice Capt. C. H. Stoddert, promoted.

6th Bengal N.I. Major A. G. Handcock, wing-commander, employed as Assist.-Adjt.-Gen. of Division, has been granted leave to England for one year 88 days, on private affairs.

8th Bengal N.I. Lieut. W. S. Hewett (on furlough), from the 19th Bengal N.I., has been appointed wing-officer, vice Capt. A. Fishe, promoted.

31st Bengal N.I. Col. H. M. Wemyss, commandant, has been granted leave to England, on private affairs.

1st Punjab Cavalry. Major J. R. B. Atkinson, squadron-commander, has been granted leave to England for one year 75 days, on private affairs.

2nd Punjab Cavalry. Capt. L. A. Bishop, squadron-officer, has been granted leave in India for two years, on private affairs.

3rd Punjab Cavalry. Major A. Vivian, commandant, has been granted leave to England for two years, on private affairs.

5th Punjab Cavalry. Lieut. C. F. Gambier, squadron-officer and adjt., has been granted leave to England for 1 year 182 days, on medical certificate.

1st Punjab Infantry. Lieut.-Col. F. J. Kerr, C.B., commandant, has been granted leave to England for one year, on private affairs.

4th Sikh Infantry. Major B. E. Gowan, wing-commander, has been granted leave to England for one year, on private affairs.

1st Hyderabad Cavalry. Major J. G. D. Walker has been granted leave to England for two years, on private affairs.

36th Madras N.I. Lieut. H. W. E. Georges, adjt., has been granted leave to England for one year, on medical certificate.

3rd Sind Horse. Lieut. A. M. Monteath, squadron-officer, has been granted leave to England for 18 months, on medical certificate.

Poona Horse. Capt. J. W. Anderson, squadron-officer, has been granted leave to England for 18 months, on medical certificate.

3rd Bombay N.I. Col. J. Clements, commandant, has been granted leave to England for 18 months, on medical certificate.

5th Bombay N.I. We (Times of India) believe that the Home Authorities have just sanctioned the issue of medals to this regiment for the China wars of 1857-60. It is to be hoped the regiment will not be kept waiting so long for the Afghan medal.

14th Bombay N.I. Col. J. C. Hobson, second-in-command, has been selected to officiate in command of the fortress of Asirgarh, vice Col. M. Boyd, proceeded on furlough to England.

29th Bombay N.I. Surg.-Major E. Morton has been granted leave to England for 18 months, on medical certificate. The Bombay Gazette says:—"Surg.-Major Morton, whose serious illness from dysentery at Candahar we noticed some time since, has arrived at Kurrachee, 'so dreadfully brought down, even to death's door,' as the local Gazette expresses it, that he had to be carried from the station to the Indus Valley Hotel on his arrival. We hope, however, the entire change—especially to sea air—will soon restore him to his wonted state of health and the companionship of his friends. The regiment to which he belongs—the gallant 2nd Beloochees—has received its full meed of praise from Sir Frederick Roberts, and we hear that its gallant commander, Col. O. V. Tanner, has been strongly recommended for a brigade command by the Gederal. The holding of Khelat-i-Ghilzai was no mean feat of arms. Had it fallen by any attack, the advance of Roberts's 'ten thousand' might have been very seriously embarrassed by the untoward event."

INDIA.

Major Sir Robert Sandeman, K.C.S.I., Bengal S.C., is (the Irish Times says) to receive a promotion and the Order of the Bath in recognition of his Afghan services.

It has been notified that the defeat of Ayoub Khan by Gen. Sir F. Roberts on Sept. 1 will henceforth be officially described as the Battle of Candahar.

The Irish Times states that Major-Gen. Phayre, C.B., Bombay S.C., proceeds to England on being relieved in Afghanistan, but he will ultimately return to India and assume a divisional command. General Primrose is expected in London from Candahar on Wednesday next.

The names of the following medical officers having, through an oversight, been omitted from G.O.C.C. dated Oct. 14, 1879, the Commander-in-Chief, with the concurrence of the Viceroy and Governor-General in Council, is pleased to direct that, in recognition of the valuable services performed by these officers, their names be added to the list contained in par. 6 of the Order referred to:—Kuram Field Force.—Surg.-Major G. Farrell, Indian Medical Service, in medical charge, head-quarters staff; Surg-Major C. P. Costello, Indian Medical Service, base hospital, Kohat, afterwards Kuram. Southern Afghanistan Field Force.—Surg.-Major R. W. Cunningham, M.D., Indian Medical Service, base hospital and charge of Commissariat, Candahar Citadel; Surg.-Major G. Thompson, M.B., Indian Medical Service, base hospital, Quetta.

Brigdr.-Gen. F. A. E. Loch, C.B., Bombay S.C., resumed command of the Aden Brigade on Oct. 30, on the termination of his leave to England.

With the sanction of the Government of India, the following movements, in alteration and addition to the programme of relief of British and Native troops for 1880-81, are ordered:—B Baty. C Brig. R.H.A., Meerut, to stand fast; C Baty. 4th Brig. R.A., Afghanistan to Meean Meer, instead of Sitapur; 1-8th, Kurum to Murree Hills; 6-8th, Afghanistan, to stand fast; 11-9th, Afghanistan to Jutogh; 13th Hussars, Lucknow to Candahar; 100th Foot, Sealkote to Umballa; 7th Bengal Cavalry, Morar to Candahar; 8th, Mooltan to Candahar; 18th, Kurum to Nowshera; 5th N.I., Kurum to Jhansi; 9th, Afghanistan to Gorakpur; 10th, Barrackpore to Benares; 14th, Umballa to Candahar, early in 1881; 25th, Afghanistan to Ferozepore; 26th, Jhelum to Candahar, early in 1881; 33rd, Delhi to Barrackpore and (A wing) Dacca; 40th, Gorakpur and Benares to Barrackpore; 42nd, Shillong to Naga Hills; 27th Madras Inf., Morar, to stand fast till further orders.

The funeral of Sir John Milton, C.B., late Accountant-General of the Army, took place at Brompton Cemetery on the 2nd inst. It was attended by a number of his old colleagues of the War Office, viz., Mr. R. Thompson, C.B., Assistant Under-Secretary of State; Mr. White, C.B., Accountant-General; Mr. Knox, C.B., Deputy-Accountant-General; Mr. De La Bère, Assistant-Accountant-General; Mr. Nepean, Mr. Cane, Mr. L. Lukeing, Mr. Marzials, Mr. Guibara, Major Sczuizewski, and many of his old staff.

The pioneer of co-operative provision markets, "The Army and Navy," in Regent Street, is making good progress, and the management now desires to issue the remainder of £25,000 debenture capital in bonds of £25, £50, and £100. With this additional capital, the society will be enabled to complete the contemplated additions to the market; to make a saving in the cost of transport, by the purchase of their own horses and vans; and to develop the arrangements for the direct supply of fish from the coast. Particulars of the scheme will be found in our advertising columns, together with some account of the progress made by the market.

VOLUNTEERS AND SCARLET.

"Red Rifleman" writes:—"You have several times allowed me to write on this subject, with a view of disproving the notion that the authorities favour, and the Volunteers impede, uniformity. In the War-Office Committee Report, of January, 1879, it was recommended that scarlet uniforms or cloth be at once issued to the Volunteers, and a deduction of ten shillings per man be made in the Grant until the cost was repaid. The War Office did not carry this out, on the ground of economy. The Estimates for 1879-80 would have shown a very large increase by reason of the first cost of the clothing, although in subsequent years there would be reduced estimates; but in the event of a general election, both political parties can make capital out of 'large estimates.' Still, without the much-needed financial aid, 107 out of 210 Volunteer regiments wear the national colour. General officers do not encourage the change. One of these told a Volunteer regiment at Aldershot this summer that he was glad to see them keep to grey. Last Friday evening Gen. Willis told the 5th Lancashire R.V. (in green):—'Your dress, as one of the recognised dresses of the Army, is a very appropriate one for a regiment which is formed in a large city like Liverpool. I believe that in many large places like Manchester, Birmingham, and Sheffield, where there is a great deal of dust and smoke, your uniform would probably be more serviceable than scarlet, which is the national colour; but again, on the other hand, I think that the great bulk of the Volunteer Force should be clothed in scarlet.' Now, as a fact, out of the eleven Volunteer rifle battalions in these three towns, six are already in scarlet, and there is no reason why the other five should be privileged to wear a cheaper colour. I see that the Hull Battalion has this year devoted all its prize fund towards paying the tailor's bill for scarlet. The loss of shooting prizes is, of course, a serious injury to a Volunteer corps in time of profound peace, and I think General officers should show sympathy with all corps that undergo great financial difficulties to carry out the wishes of the authorities. As for the 5th Lancashire, it was currently reported five years ago, that if the War Office would give three years' credit, scarlet would be adopted. I have heard both officers and men express a desire for such a change. The Militia Rifles could be changed at the national expense by issuing scarlet frocks at once, the accoutrements could be changed afterwards. Why is this not carried out?"

MILITIA SUBALTERNS IN THE LINE.

"One of Them" writes:—"I have just read a letter in your paper by an 'Ex-Militia Subaltern,' and I hope you will grant me space to point out also the great injustice which many of us, similarly situated with 'Ex-Militia Subaltern,' have suffered. I refer principally to those who entered the Militia in 1871, with a promise of a commission in the Line after two years. This promise was made publicly in the House of Commons by Mr. Cardwell, then Secretary of State for War. In accordance with this promise, I joined the Militia early in 1871, at the age of 19. But no Line commission was given to any Militia officer until November, 1873. I was not fortunate enough to obtain a nomination for that year, so was obliged to wait until the following year, and was gazetted in December, 1874. This was after completing four annual trainings, two more than we were led to expect were required, and making a total of three years and eight months' Militia service. Thus, you see, through no fault of my own, I was more unfortunate by eleven months than 'Ex-Militia Subaltern,' who gained his commission in two years and nine months. 'Ex-Militia Subaltern' has stated that although the rank of lieutenant was given to us on joining, yet we only received ensign's pay, viz., 5s. 3d. per diem, instead of 6s. 6d. This is not all, for every sub-lieutenant who joined the Army had his commission antedated, and so superseded us. To mention an instance, in August, 1875, a large batch of gentlemen were gazetted from Sandhurst to the Line, with their commissions antedated to June, 1874. Thus, although never even so much as heard of in the regiments to which they were appointed, they superseded all those who had joined the Army subsequent to June, 1874. The superseded officers had been serving for several months (in many cases abroad), and taking their share of all duties, when they suddenly found this unexpected step taken, and themselves made junior for the rest of their service to their more fortunate brethren. I say we have been unfairly dealt with, first by being, as I was, kept nearly four instead of two years in the Militia; secondly, by being superseded eight months after we had joined by officers from Sandhurst. Will not the authorities keep us now, so that we may for the future be a little more fortunate? Will they not promise us at least that as our turn arrives in our various regiments for promotion, that we shall receive that promotion, and not be superseded on the ground of 'not sufficient service?' We ought to have nearly two years more service, as we were justly entitled to it. We are all older men than those officers who superseded us; and had we received our commissions in 1873, as we expected to do on joining the Militia, we should now be senior to, and not junior to, officers who are daily passing us in each gazette, and who are junior to us, both in age and actual service, as their commissions were antedated."

It is stated that the subject of a grant in aid of the Chunda funds of Bengal cavalry regiments engaged in the Cabul campaigns has been for some time under consideration of Government.

Lieut.-Col. J. P. Martin, Bengal S.C., one of the Military Accountants, has been permitted to retire from the Service.

The military authorities are actively employed in providing accommodation and arranging for the necessary supplies to be duly furnished."

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

PARIS.—The announcement in an evening paper that Sir Allen Young, Capt. R.N.R., is about to leave England in the Helen, on a new Antarctic expedition, may or may not be well founded. We have no information on the subject, but think that it is unlikely that Sir Allen Young will go so far. Would "Paris" like to go in the Helen?

SCIPIO AFRICANUS.—Lord Airey's representations will never meet the public eye. They are too alarming, and besides that, they confirm to the fullest extent the statements which were made respecting the want of discipline of certain portions of the drafts sent out to South Africa during the war of 1878-9.

GRIEVANCE.—We should only do you injury by publishing your letter.

R.N. SAILORS' HOME.—The report was not inserted, owing to the pressure on our space.

R.—Many thanks for interesting account of the cruise.

RETIRED COMMANDER.—We regret to say that the applications for employment are far in excess of the billets to be found.

Army and Navy Gazette.

"ONE who has Served," in a letter published in the Times on Thursday, has, in our opinion, clearly proved that the scheme proposed by Colonel Stanley's Committee is not workable. He urges that esprit de corps is to an officer or soldier what pride of family is to civilians, and that it is of great value in acting as a check on young soldiers, who, on enlisting, sever for the time all home ties. He, therefore, very justly asks,—Why abolish esprit de corps, unless some very substantial advantage is to be derived from the change? He shows, also, that the suggested nomenclature of the amalgamated regiments will be both offensive and cumbrous. Among other corps, he mentions the 92nd Gordon Highlanders, and asks what would be their feelings, with all the honours of the Candahar campaign fresh upon them, on finding themselves converted into the 1st Battalion, Gordon and Sutherland Highlanders. He then points out that the alterations contemplated would not give the Authorities a single additional man for active or ordinary foreign service. The 25 first regiments have each two battalions, but "One who has Served" shows that they enjoy no advantages, as regards the procuring of men, over the rest of the Army. As to the idea of, on declaration of war, embodying the Militia and increasing the depôt to the strength of an ordinary battalion, he shows that this system is only applicable to a European war. Before the Militia could be embodied there must be a proclamation of imminent national danger. Even then the Militia cannot be forced to transfer their services to the Line, and as regiments they cannot, without their own consent, be sent out of the Kingdom. As to the enlisting of men indifferently for the Militia and Line, during the continuance of a war, we fail to see the advantage. If a man wanted to see service, he would join the Line direct. The writer calls attention to the fact that had we adopted this plan in 1879, during the Zulu and Afghan Wars, the cost of embodying the Militia and raising a full battalion of recruits in districts whose Line battalions were in the field, would have cost more than a million a year. If, he adds, the war had been popular, perhaps 100 men per Militia battalion might have volunteered to the Line; but such an arrangement as the embodiment of the Militia for this purpose would have been somewhat extravagant, as each man would have cost about £800! If the war had been unpopular, and the public were certainly not enthusiastic about it, all this expense would probably not have yielded a single additional man. What we want, as he justly says, is not abolition of old regimental titles and distinctions, but a sound organisation, by which, out of an average of about 94,000 men at home, we shall be able to detach 10,000 or 15,000 trained and efficient men for our constantly recurring small wars. That no such system exists is, indeed, discreditable to us; but to create one is not impossible, if really practical men be called into council. Killing esprit de corps is not, however, a remedy for administrative incompetence.

We are informed that there is no ground for the suggestion that the illness of Lord Ripon was caused by exposure to the sun in tiger-shooting. The latest news from Allahabad is favourable.

Major-General Hon. D. M'D. Fraser, C.B., succeeds, we understand, to one of the two Good-Service Pensions now vacant in the Royal Artillery.

Colonel H. T. Macpherson, C.B., V.C., Bengal S.C., lately returned from Afghanistan, had the honour of dining with her Majesty at Windsor Castle on the 2nd inst., and Major-General Sir F. Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., and Lady Roberts, and Colonel T. D. Baker, C.B., on Wednesday.

Lieutenant-Colonel E. A. Anderson is allowed to retain his appointment as Instructor of Military Surveying at the Royal Military College, Sandhurst, on being placed on the Retired Half-Pay List from the 18th Royal Irish, under the terms of the Royal Warrant. Lieutenant-Colonel Clifford Parsons also retains his appointment as Professor of Military Administration and Law at the Staff College, on being placed upon half-pay from the 3rd Buffs, under the terms of the same Warrant.

Captain H. W. L. Hime, Royal Artillery, we have reason to believe, becomes Secretary to the Royal Artillery Institution at Woolwich, vice Lieutenant-Colonel M. Le F. Tayler, R.A.

The present French Minister of War is making such a noise with his Reports and Circulars, that he is in future to be called, not "Farre," but "Fanfare."

Captain F. T. C. du Vernet, 66th Regiment, who has lately taken up the appointment of Garrison Instructor at Gibraltar, will carry out, in addition to his other duties, those of Local Inspector of Army Schools at the station.

We are well pleased to hear that the German Military Commission has decided against the adoption of repeating rifles for the present. The change would have been costly to Germany, and very perplexing to other States.

The gallant Commandant Von Linsingen, C.M.G., who fell in a recent skirmish in South Africa, was descended, we believe, from the General Count von Linsingen whose name crops up so often in the wars of 1793-1800. He was highly distinguished in the previous operations, which were supposed to have given peace and security to the Cape Colonies, and was an admirable specimen of the German soldier. In the same skirmish in which he fell, his son, a lad of seventeen, lost his life, in a vain attempt to save that of his father. There is a touching resemblance in their fate and that of Piet Ujis and his boy.

By the terms of the Royal Warrant on promotion and retirement, it will be impossible for the authorities to continue Lieutenant-General John Turner, C.B., R.A., whose scientific field-days on Woolwich Common have excited so much interest, in his command after March 31 next. The names of Major-Generals Hon. E. T. Gage, C.B., R.A., and Hon. D. M'D. Fraser, C.B., R.A., are mentioned for the vacancy.

The establishment of the 21st Brigade Depôt at Shrewsbury, by the depôts of the 43rd and 53rd Regiments, leaves but one brigade depôt, that at Taunton, to be formed.

We recently called attention to the "bad form" and want of principle of a large proportion of the lads preparing for the Army. We have just learnt, on good authority, that some of the pupils at a certain well-known crammer's, in addition to every description of dissipation, were actually in the habit of pawning the crammer's sheets and towels!

Such an unusual incident as a simultaneous invitation, or command, from the Queen to the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief, the Military Secretary, and the Director-General of Military Education, to dine at Windsor Castle, has agitated the small Military quidnuncs amazingly—"to their depths," we would say—if they had any. After all, there may be "nothing in it," a mere fortuitous concurrence of atoms, beyond the desire of her Majesty to honour her faithful and distinguished servants with marks of favour which the sister-service would gladly share if they could. General Roberts has been the latest guest at Windsor Castle, and we believe all the eminent "Afghans" will be included in the list in due course. It was a great and well-merited honour, for Colonel Gough to be included in the royal command. The appreciation of the Queen is the highest social reward a soldier can aspire to, and her Majesty has recently taken every opportunity of showing it to the officers who have been engaged in India.

The conjecture we made, on good grounds, some weeks ago—that the Chilians would soon attack Lima—has been verified. They landed at Pisco on November 20, and thence began their march for the Peruvian capital, thus turning the fortifications at Callao. We may expect to hear of a sanguinary and cruel encounter, if the city does not capitulate.

One of the main arguments—more hypocritical and false than most of the others, which is saying a good deal—for the destruction of the South-African Republic of the Transvaal, was founded on the assumption that the Boers habitually ill-treated the coloured races, and were, consequently, dangerous neighbours to our peaceful people, as their Government was for ever minded to make wars of conquest and aggression. To show that our policy was different, these Cape rulers, in subservience to Colonial impulses and to Imperial designs of confederation, invaded Zululand, and attacked Sekukuni, and the Cape Government is now engaged in a destructive war with the Basutos, Pondos, Pondomese, and Tembus, as a sequel to innumerable Kafir wars, and contests with Gaikas, Galekas, and their cognates. Earl Grey, in the current number of the Nineteenth Century, argues with overwhelming force against the system of government which has rendered such injustice, bloodshed, and cruelty not only possible, but recognised as a policy. But for all that neither Whig, Tory, nor Radical will upset it. He stigmatises as "a mere delusion" the hope expressed by the late and present Ministers, that, Confederation would ensure peace, but at all events there is no chance of such a measure being carried at present, or for years to come.

As Ireland without hunting would be like the world without the sun, and as the Land Leaguers have been putting a stop to the pursuit of the fox, we hear that a movement is on foot to secure a few active, wiry, under-fed landlords, who may be expected to show good sport in the open for Mr. Parnell and his hunting friends. A few English landlords would, no doubt, volunteer their services; and Colonel C. Fraser, who has now quite recovered his recent indisposition, may be depended upon in case of need to give a great run on the Curragh.

It is not to be wondered at that Turkey objects to the status quo as regards her relations with Greece. The cost of war preparations is ruinous. Turkey has already offered a frontier, and if Greece fights she will certainly obtain less, rather than more, if she stands alone. With Christian States the preparations and threats of Greece would constitute a casus belli; but Turkey has no rights, in the eye of Europe.

The ingenious speculations of some of our contemporaries respecting the participation of Russia sub rosâ in the Kurdish invasion of Persia, have come to great grief—like the Kurds themselves. So have all the predictions of one of the inspired "evening" organs, anent the coming greatness of Sheik Obeidullah, who was to be a sort of Zenghis Khan. It would seem as if the Persians, under the influence of Austrian military teachers, have recovered some of their ancient aptitudes, and have proved themselves quite able to deal with such enemies as the Kurds. They are certainly superior to the troops which Outram disposed of so readily in the last war with Persia.

We have reason to believe that Prince Labanoff, the accomplished representative of Russia at this Court, has been instructed to further in every way consistent with the interests of his country a rapprochement between England and Russia on the Afghan, Herat, and Merv questions, and as Lord Dufferin has gone to St. Petersburg to work in a similar direction, there is some reason to hope that a solution of the difficulty of both countries may be ultimately found, to the great relief of each Government. We are not very sanguine, indeed, but we refuse to admit that some modus vivendi is possible between the Caspian, Lake Aral, the Hindoo Koosh, and the Indus. The scientific frontier and the retention of Candahar would thus for the time lose their significance; but the cost of the recent operations will not be so readily wiped off the slate.

We learn from Maritzburg that Commandant Willoughby has received authority to raise three troops of irregular cavalry, for service in Basutoland. The pay of the troopers is to be 5s. per diem, with 1s. per diem extra for bringing a horse. Rations, full equipment, uniform, and arms are to be provided.

The costs of the Basuto campaign will be a serious matter for the Cape. The estimated expenditure for the war is £60,000 a month, or £720,000 for the twelve months' campaign.

General Sir E. Green, K.C.B., Bombay Staff Corps, attains the age of seventy and will be placed on the Retired List from the 15th inst., under the terms of the Royal Warrant; Lieutenant-General R. Hamilton, C.B., Madras Staff Corps, being retired from the 18th inst. These retirements will promote Lieutenant-General R. G. Taylor, C.B., C.S.I., Bengal Staff Corps, to be General; Major-Generals J. Wilson, Madras Staff Corps, and S. H. Becher, Bengal Staff Corps, to be Lieutenant-Generals; and Colonels F. Young, Madras Staff Corps, and J. C. Haughton, C.S.I., Bengal Staff Corps, to be Major-Generals,—giving also a run of promotion to the senior majors and captains in the Army.

Under the auspices of the East India Association—an organisation established for the promotion of all public interests of India—Lieutenant-Colonel James Browne, C.S.I., R.E., late Political Officer in Southern Afghanistan, will deliver an address on "The Retention of Candahar, and the Defence of the North-West Frontier," on Wednesday afternoon, at the Westminster Palace Hotel, General Sir Alexander Taylor, K.C.B., R.E., will preside, and public discussion will be invited.

The fourteenth section of the translation of the German official account of the Franco-German War of 1870-71 is now ready, giving particulars of the measures for the investment of Paris up to the middle of December, 1870.

General Sir H. C. Daubeney, K.C.B., colonel of the 55th Regiment, will be placed on the Retired List from the 19th inst., and General J. T. Grant, C.B., colonel of the 94th Regiment, from the 26th inst., on attaining the age of 70. General Grant's will be the last retirement under the age-clause which will occur during the present year, and only one more retirement will take place before April next, viz., that of General J. T. Hill, colonel of the 75th Regiment, who becomes 70 years of age on January 10.

We publish elsewhere a revised list showing the vacancies which have occurred during the present year on the establishment of General officers, and the steps taken for filling them. From this it will be seen that there are several steps due to the senior Colonels, who are naturally anxious that the subject should be inquired into without delay, that they may be saved the disappointment which it would occasion were they to find the new rules brought in before they attained a rank to which they are certainly entitled, if the ruling of the Royal Warrant is to stand for anything.

It would be as well if some order were given as to the manner in which officers should wear the regulation haversack. Worn at the right side, it would when full impede the use of the sword-arm, and as the sash is worn on the left shoulder, the haversack looks better when carried at the left side.

Mr. James Stevens, of the Reform Club, has offered the sum of £100 to be competed for at Aldershot by regiments of Infantry to show their proficiency in throwing up an entrenchment. Considering the importance of hasty entrenchments in modern warfare, the competition ought to be a keen one. The competition will be in perpetuity, as Mr. Stevens is bequeathing a sum of money sufficient to give the prize annually. He certainly deserves the thanks of the Army and the country for having made so generous an offer.

The Navy.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 3, 1880.

In accordance with the provisions of her Majesty's Order in Council of Feb. 22, 1870, Staff Commander George Robinson has been placed on the Retired List from the 1st instant, with permission to assume the rank and title of Retired Commander from the same date.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 6, 1880.

ADMIRALTY, Dec. 8, 1880.

ARAB, which has cost £12,260 to repair and refit, will be completed at Devonport as rapidly as possible as a relief to the Wild Swan upon the East Indies station. The Arab was taken outside Plymouth Breakwater on Tuesday for a short preliminary steam trial with satisfactory results, a speed of 10·141 knots and 582·75 horse-power being recorded. A few weak bearings and defective feed will be remedied while completing for commission within the next few days.

ASSISTANCE, Capt. Buckle, after embarking 200 Marines at Portsmouth, left on Friday last week for Chatham, to take on board a number belonging to the Chatham Division, and afterwards proceeded to Ireland. These are exchanges, and are not intended to increase the strength of the Marine force in Ireland. The Assistance arrived in Plymouth Sound late on Monday evening from Chatham. On Tuesday morning she embarked 2 officers and 137 men from the Royal Marine Barracks, Stonehouse, shortly after 9 a.m., after which the Assistance left for Queenstown. She will return in a few days with the drafts relieved.

BITTERN, Com. E. P. Pusey, arrived at Malta on Nov. 23 from Corfu; her crew have been transferred to the Hibernia, preparatory to the ship being docked. When ready for sea, the Bittern will proceed to Constantinople to relieve the Torch, ordered to Malta.

CHAMPION, Capt. G. R. Hope, was commissioned on Tuesday at Sheerness with a complement of 245, to relieve the Modeste on the China station. Before leaving she will undergo extensive alteration of rig, a transposition to the Wolverene class being now considered the most efficient and safe form consistent with handiness and rapid evolution while under sail.

CYGNET, Lieut.-Com. Wilson, was to leave Malta about the middle of this week for Cyprus and the coast of Syria to relieve the Rapid, which ship is ordered to Malta, and when ready for service again will probably relieve the Iris at Corfu.

DECOY, Lieut.-Com. Von Donop, was under refit at Gibraltar on Nov. 27; date of completion uncertain.

DIDO, Capt. Compton E. Domvile, was at Accra up to Dec. 1; would shortly proceed to Loanda.

DOTEREL, Com. R. Evans, was commissioned at Chatham Dockyard on Tuesday, with a complement of 165 officers and men, all told.

EUPHRATES, Capt. Hand. During the repairs to the Euphrates at Portsmouth, a quantity of provisions were stored on deck, and in consequence of their not being equally distributed the vessel, when the water was let into the dock on Saturday, heeled over to port and carried away the shores supporting her. Fortunately, the incoming water prevented any very serious injury to the hull, a diver having reported favourably. Last year when in dock a similar occurrence happened to the same ship owing to the heavy wind.

FAWN, Capt. W. J. L. Wharton, which arrived at Malta on Nov. 24 from Constantinople, was inspected by Admiral M'Crea on the 26th, preparatory to dismantling and paying off. The Fawn is to be recommissioned for surveying service in the Red Sea. Com. Pelham Aldrich, who will shortly recommission this ship, was appointed Jan. 5, 1860, naval cadet to the Marlborough, Capt. Lord Frederick H. Kerr, flagship in the Mediterranean of Vice-Admiral Arthur Fanshawe, C.B., and Captain of the Fleet Rear-Admiral S. C. Dacres, C.B.; and served as sub-lieut. of the Scout, in the Pacific, from May 15, 1865, until promoted to lieut., Sept. 11, 1866, when he was appointed additional for disposal to the Sutlej, flagship of Rear-Admiral the Hon. Joseph Denman, in the Pacific, and on the 26th of the same month was again appointed to the Scout, and returned in her to England, and was paid off in June, 1869. On the 18th of the following December he was appointed additional of the Lord Warden, flagship of Admiral Sir Alexander Milne, K.C.B., in the Mediterranean, from which ship, on June 21, 1870, he was appointed flag-lieut. to Rear-Admiral Astley C. Key, C.B., in the Hibernia, flagship of the Admiral Superintendent and second-in-command in the Mediterranean, where he remained until the summer of 1872. On Nov. 15 of the last-named year he was appointed to the Challenger, surveying and discovery ship, from which, on Dec. 10, 1874, he was borne on the books of the Duke of Wellington for Arctic service. He served in the Alert, Capt. George S. Nares, F.R.S., from April 15, 1875, until promoted to com., Nov. 3, 1876; and on July 27, 1877, was appointed to the command of the Sylvia, surveying-vessel, on the coast of China and Japan, vice Capt. Bonham Bax, deceased, which ship he recently brought to England and paid off at Sheerness, on the 17th of last month.

FIREFLY, Lieut.-Com. Law, is proceeding to St. Helena and Ascension, and will return to Accra.

FLIRT, Com. Brackenbury, C.M.G., was proceeding to St. Helena and Ascension by last accounts, and will return to Accra.

FOAM, Lieut.-Com. Baker, is cruising on the West Coast of Africa, with Accra as head-quarters.

HIMALAYA, Capt. Brent, left Portsmouth on Tuesday for Gibraltar, where she is appointed to meet the Crocodile, to which she will trans-ship, for conveyance to Bombay, Capt. Westropp, 68th Foot, Brig.-Surg. Winschamp, 60 men of the 70th Foot, and the wives and families of the 1st Dragoon Guards and 1st Batn. Rifle Brigade, and other corps. She is expected to bring the 2nd Batn. Rifle Brigade home from Gibraltar, and will afterwards undergo a thorough refit at Devonport.

INFLEXIBLE. The trials of the turret-guns of the Inflexible have been definitely fixed for Thursday or Friday of next week, and the firing programme has been drawn up and submitted to My Lords for approval. The trials will be principally confined to the after turret, in which there are two 80-ton guns, but the single gun in the fore turret will also be used. The after turret will be formally transferred from the constructive department to the captain of the Excellent about next Tuesday, so that the officers and men of that ship, who are to work and load these monster ordnance during the trial, may go through preparatory drills.

INVINCIBLE, Capt. the Hon. E. R. Fremantle, C.B., C.M.G., was expected to return to Malta on Nov. 29, from Messina.

JUMNA, Capt. Parsons, arrived at Portsmouth on Thursday from Bombay, after a very fine passage, being one day ahead of her appointed time. She brings home the 1st Batn. 5th Regiment and sundry drafts, numbering 56 officers, 13 officers' wives, 13 children, 993 men, and 31 women and 23 children. Two deaths occurred on the voyage.

MALABAR, Capt. J. F. G. Grant, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday morning, with invalids and time-expired men from Bombay, having previously disembarked the 1st Royals at Queenstown.

MINOTAUR, Capt. H. Rawson, flagship of Vice-Admiral Hood, C.B. A letter from the Channel Squadron states that the voyage from Queenstown to Vigo was very uncomfortable, the vessels rolling in an alarming manner for the whole passage; 36 degrees to starboard and 34 to port were of common occurrence, and those huge vessels, the Minotaur and Agincourt, rolled so much that each had a cutter swept away from the davits. The drowning of Lieut. Heyland, of the Minotaur, occurred during a heavy gale. The vessel was pitching heavily, and it was decided to send in the jibboom. Whilst this was being done a seaman fell overboard. Lifebuoys and ropes were thrown to him, and he was in a fair way of being saved, when Lieut. Heyland leaped from the poop with a line, with which he swam to the sailor, who had succeeded in reaching a buoy. Lieut. Heyland was swimming back to the ship when he became insensible, it is believed, through being struck by the stern of the ship, and was drowned. The deceased officer is described as of a most genial disposition, kind-hearted, beloved by all his shipmates, and promising a bright future.—Morning Post. Another correspondent says:—"Big as the four ships of the Channel Fleet are, they pitched and rolled like so many gunboats, until the hardiest old salts found it difficult to keep their sea legs. It was impossible to attempt any drills. Meals, when they were not capsized into the lee scuppers on the way from the galley, were a farce; the cabins were in a state of wreckage, and chaos and discomfort reigned supreme. The Minotaur and Agincourt each lost a boat—rolled under water—and on the 25th as gallant and daring a deed as ever was done cost the life of Lieutenant Heyland, of the Minotaur. The sea was running tremendously high, the ships rolling 30 degrees each way. It was almost impossible to lower a boat when a man of the Minotaur fell overboard; the engines were stopped, the ship indeed was going but slowly at the time, and Lieutenant Heyland jumped overboard with a grass line and swam to the man's assistance. He succeeded in reaching him, in making the line fast to him, and the man was hauled on board and saved, but poor Heyland himself, exhausted by his efforts, sank close to the ship, within a foot or two of a ladder that had been lowered over the side. The Admiral made a general signal to the Squadron that Lieutenant Heyland had been drowned whilst gallantly assisting a man who had fallen overboard.

MODESTE, Capt. Mead, has recently been drifted down upon by a merchant vessel when lying at anchor, and has received some damage to her head-gear. No one was to blame, the accident being attributable to the strength of the tide causing the merchantman to drag her anchors. In the January Navy List, the Modeste will be shown as ordered home, as the Champion, commissioned at Sheerness on the 7th inst., will be her relief on the China station. The Modeste, which was launched at Devonport in 1873, and left England the following February, was recommissioned at Hong Kong in May, 1877, so that she has more than run her three years' commission already, and has been kept going until her machinery department requires a thorough overhaul, including the supply of new boilers.—Hampshire Telegraph.

MONARCH, Capt. Tryon, C.B., with Vice-Admiral Sir F. Beauchamp Seymour on board, arrived at Malta on Tuesday from Teodo Bay. The Helicon, from Cattaro, and the Rapid, from Corfu, have also arrived there.

NEPTUNE has been inclined at Portsmouth to ascertain her centre of gravity. The Neptune is, in her present incomplete trim, 6 in. deeper in the water than when purchased from the Brazilian Government.

ORONTES, Capt. Kinahan, has been appropriated to convey crews and troops to the Mediterranean. She will leave Portsmouth on Dec. 15, calling at Plymouth and Queenstown, and thence proceeding to Gibraltar and Malta.

OSBORNE, Com. Lord Charles Beresford, is now in the steam basin at Portsmouth, having repairs executed on board. About the end of the month she will be placed in dock for the usual overhaul. It has been decided to erect a forecastle similar to that on board the Enchantress. It will be constructed of angle iron beams decked over with fir plank, and will be as light as possible. The structure will, however, weigh something like seven tons, and will, of course, necessitate the re-adjustment of weights, to that extent to make up for the addition. The determination to erect a forecastle has arisen, not from any bad behaviour on the part of the yacht when at sea, but from a desire to promote additional comfort for the crew, and to utilise the covered space to greater advantage. It is by no means likely that the Osborne will be used to convey the Prince of Wales to Flushing, en route to Berlin, to be present at the wedding of his nephew, as has already been stated. There are no orders to have her ready to leave during February, the month in which the event takes place. She will, according to present arrangements, remain in the dockyard hands until nearly the middle of March.

PENELOPE. Capt. St. George Caulfield D'Arcy-Irvine, who has been appointed to this ship as flag-captain to H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, entered the Navy in 1845, and served as mate in the Megæra, troopship, on the North America and West Indies station and in the Mediterranean from July 26, 1852, until promoted to lieut., Nov. 9, 1854. He was appointed to the Centaur Feb. 12, 1855, and was employed on particular service until July 24, 1856, when he was transferred to the Brunswick, commanded successively by Capts. H. Broadhead and E. Ommanney, in the Mediterranean, on the North America and West Indies station, and with the Channel Squadron until Dec. 8, 1859, when he removed into the Doris, commanded successively in the Mediterranean by Capts. E. Heathcote and Sir F. L. M'Clintock, until the close of 1862, when he was paid off. He was promoted to commander Jan. 29, 1863, and from May 15 following—until posted, Oct. 25, 1867—served successively in the Revenge and Caledonia, flagships of Rear-Admiral Hastings R. Yelverton, C.B., and Vice-Admiral Lord C. E. Paget, C.B. He held command of the Euphrates, troopship, from Jan. 15, 1872, until April 15, 1875; the Duncan, flagship at Sheerness of Vice-Admiral Henry Chads, from Feb. 14, 1876, to Sept. 20, 1877; the Hotspur, twin-screw ram, in the Mediterranean, from Nov. 20, 1877, until April 30, 1878, when he was appointed flag-captain to Vice-Admiral Sir E. A. Inglefield, C.B., F.R.S., in the Bellerophon, on the North America and West Indies station, and was paid off early in the present year.

PENGUIN, Com. A. Paget, will find a relief in the Doterel, commissioned at Chatham on the 7th inst. The Penguin did not leave England until Oct. 1877, so their Lordships are providing a relief with creditable despatch, seeing, too, that she is a new ship, this being her first commission.—Hampshire Telegraph.

RALEIGH, Capt. Jago, from Australia (last from St. Vincent), arrived at Plymouth on Friday last week. The Raleigh has been 25 days on her voyage from St. Vincent, the unusually long passage being accounted for by the calms which prevailed during the period. The passage home has been done under sail. The length of passage was 148 days. She left Sydney on July 17, and Wellington on August 12, calling at Stanley Harbour, in the Falkland Islands, where she made a stay of seven days. She found here the shipwrecked crew of the English ship David Law, which was burnt at sea on a voyage from Leith to San Francisco, and she brought home with her the captain, mate, and fourteen of the crew of that vessel. Two deaths occurred on board the Raleigh on the passage. Thomas Isled, second captain of the forecastle, died near Ascension from the effects of sunstroke. On Nov. 2, when furling topsails, an able seaman named Samwells fell from the foretopsail-yard to the deck, and sustained injuries from which he died. In falling, he struck a carpenter named Lavers, one of the relieved crew of the Wolverene, who was also seriously hurt, but is now convalescent. The Raleigh arrived at St. Vincent on the 7th, and having shipped a hundred tons of coal, principally for condensing purposes, left on the 9th for Devonport. She sailed over the whole distance, and did not get up steam until she was entering the Sound. The Raleigh had a narrow escape from serious damage by fire on Tuesday morning. She is preparing to pay off, and her sails were being loosed to dry prior to returning them to store. The foretrysail having been loosed was carried by the wind over the funnel of the cook's galley, and ignited the canvas, and in a moment it was ablaze. The fire-bell was rung, and seamen were quickly aloft cutting away the peak and throat halyards. By this means the gaff and trysail fell to the deck and the danger of the fire spreading to the hempen and tar rigging was averted. As soon as the burning sail fell the fire was extinguished, and beyond the destruction of the trysail and the gaff being charred, no further damage was done. The whole affair occupied but a few minutes. The metropolitan police turned out with their fire-engine, but the fire was smothered before they reached the jetty.

ROCKET, Lieut.-Com. V. Orlebar, is the only ship left on guard at Esquimault, the position of affairs in South America having rendered it advisable to have a considerable muster of ships near at hand.

SERAPIS, Capt. G. O. Twiss. A telegram, dated Gibraltar, Monday, says her Majesty's troopship Serapis, from India, having called here to report the loss of two blades of her screw on the 3rd inst., proceeded homeward immediately.

SHANNON, Capt. J. D'Arcy, which had been at Arica for some time, was under orders to proceed to Callao about the end of October.

TÉMÉRAIRE. Capt. Henry F. Nicholson, who will shortly recommission this ship in the Mediterranean, entered the Navy in June, 1849, and served as mate in the Excellent, gunnery-ship, Capts. Sir Thomas Maitland, C.B., and Richard S. Hewlett, C.B., from Feb. 20, 1857, until promoted to lieut. Dec. 17 following. As lieut. he was appointed, May 5, 1858, to the Brunswick, Capt. Erasmus Ommanney, fitting for service with the Channel Squadron, and remained until May, 1859. He afterwards served in the Trafalgar, Capt. E. G. Fanshawe, with the Channel Squadron, from July 6, 1859, until Jan. 17, 1860, when he was transferred to the Cambridge, gunnery-ship, Capt. A. W. Jerningham, and continued in the same ship under Capt. Leopold G. Heath, C.B., and C. J. F. Ewart, until appointed, Dec. 5, 1864, to the Magicienne, Capt. William Armytage, in the Mediterranean, and was paid off Dec. 12, 1865. From the 19th of the month last named until promoted to commander, April 11, 1866, he served in the Bellerophon, Capt. Edward Tatham, at Chatham and Portsmouth, and on Oct. 1 following was appointed to the Endymion, Capt. Charles Wake, fitting for the Mediterranean. On Jan. 14, 1867, he was transferred to the Royal Alfred, Capt. F. A. Herbert, fitting for the flag of Sir G. Rodney Mundy, in the West Indies and North America, from which ship he was posted July 20, 1869. On Sept. 17, 1870, he was again appointed to the Royal Alfred, as flag-captain to Vice-Admiral Edward G. Fanshawe, C.B., on the same station, and on his return to England in Jan. 1874 was paid off. At the close of March, 1872, the Royal Alfred unfortunately got on shore on one of the Bahama shoals, and had her false keel carried away and one of her bilge-keels, where, unfortunately, about the same time in the following year, she met with a similar fate, while entering the narrows. Capt. Nicholson subsequently studied at the Royal Naval College, at which establishment he became capt., Feb. 19, 1875, and remained, until appointed in May, 1877, Naval Attaché for Europe. He has been employed as capt. of the Penelope, armour-plated, double-screw corvette, Coastguard, and drill-ship of the Naval Reserve at Harwich, under the flag of Rear-Admiral H.R.H. the Duke of Edinburgh, since May 1, 1880.

THUNDERER, Capt. P. Colomb, arrived at Malta on the 8th inst., from Teodo Bay.

TRIUMPH, Capt. A. H. Markham. Rear-Admiral Stirling expects to be at Talcahuano by Jan. 10, and will be joined there by the Penguin, which was last at Callao, under orders for Coquimbo.

TURQUOISE, Capt. W. Medlycott, was expected at Coquimbo by the end of November. She has recently been cruising among the Pacific Islands.

VALOROUS, Capt. G. D. Morant, left Plymouth Sound on Tuesday morning for Queenstown and Galway.

VICTORIA AND ALBERT, Capt. Frank T. Thomson, will not be taken in hand at Portsmouth for the usual repairs until the more pressing work now in hand in the yard has been completed. The statement that she is to be prepared with all dispatch for the use of the Queen is not true.

VICTORY is undergoing some extensive repairs. She has been freely replanked, redecked, and repaired in every way, and now, among other things, she is to be provided with a new upper deck for more than a third of her length, at a cost of something like £400. The necessity for the execution of this work will be seen when we say that an examination showed that in many places the planking of the upper deck, originally 3½ in. thick, is now only 1½ in thick, while those portions over which there is continual traffic are even thinner. The deck to be laid will consist of 2½-inch fir plank.

WYE, Staff Com. H. D. Sarratt, arrived at Spithead on Sunday night from South America, with supernumeraries and stores. She came into harbour, and will go round to Woolwich to land her stores.

The following men have been awarded medals for long service and good conduct:—William Moore, leading stoker, and Joseph Davenish, able seaman, of the Asia; William Challen, lamp trimmer, of the Victoria and Albert; W. May, ward-room steward, of the St. Vincent; John Morey, leading stoker, and J. A. Hains, ship's steward, of the Euphrates; John Hill, serjeant, R.M., of the Indus; John Biddlecombe, private, R.M., of the Britannia; Joseph H. Wood, chief quartermaster of the Royal Naval Barracks; Alfred Faram, leading stoker, of the Salamis; Samuel Coucher, carpenter's crew, of the Eagle; George Williams, torpedo artificer, and G. Harner, private, R.M., of the Minotaur; W. Davies, caulker, of the Thetis; John P. Mortimer, calker, of the Asia; Benjamin Bracher, private, R.M., of the Ganges; Thomas Hodgson and Selwyn Jago, chief gunner's mates, of the Defence; John Semmens, Thomas Lawler, Peter Fox, and Samuel J. Mildern, boatmen, Thomas Teed and John Wynn, chief boatmen, Michael Murphy, divisional carpenter, and John Harvey, W. Barter, Walter Rapson, and William Gunter, commissioned boatmen, of the Coastguard.

Obituary.

Com. Frederick Abraham Smith died at Escot Lodge, Ottery St. Mary, Devon, on the 2nd inst., in his 83rd year. The deceased officer entered the Navy, Feb. 8, 1811, on board the Edinburgh, Capt. Robert Rolles, and while attached to that ship he assisted in cutting-out some vessels near Toulon, took part in the siege of Tarragona, and witnessed the fall of Genoa. On his return in the Valiant from a visit to the coast of Brazil, he joined, in July, 1815, the Albion, stationed in the Channel; and next, in the course of the same and the following year, the St. George, Impregnable, Berwick, and Impregnable again, flagships of Sir John Thos. Duckworth and Lord Exmouth at Plymouth. After further serving for nearly 18 months on the coast of Africa as master's mate in the Tartar, bearing the broad pendant of Sir Geo. Ralph Collier, he was there (Jan. 18, 1820) nominated acting-lieutenant of the Myrmidon, Capt. Henry John Leeke, to which ship he was confirmed April 10 ensuing. In the Tartar he aided in taking several slave-vessels; and while in command of the Augusta, a tender belonging to the Myrmidon, he effected other captures. In an attack made by him, May 20, 1820, on some slave-towns in the Rio Pongo, he had the misfortune to lose the sight of an eye, and was in consequence obliged to invalide in Feb. 1821. His next appointments were—April 30, 1827, and Sept. 17, 1829, to the Britannia, flagship of the Earl of Northesk, and Kent, Capt. J. F. Devonshire, both on the Plymouth station. Severe and repeated inflammation of the eye obliged him a second time, in 1830, to seek half-pay; and he was granted, Jan 5, 1831, a pension of £91 5s. per annum. He became retired commander July 1, 1864, and on July 4, 1875, was promoted to the list under Order in Council of 1816.

Lieut. Henry Bingham Chesshyre Wynyard, R.N., late gunnery and torpedo lieut. of the Boadicea, died at the Naval Hospital at Simon's Town on the 8th ult., in his 30th year. The deceased officer served as supernumerary sub-lieut. in the Defence, Capts. Charles H. May and Nowell Salmon, V.C., with the Channel Squadron, from December 10, 1868, until June, 1869, when he was appointed to the Growler, gun-vessel, Com. E. H. Seymour, fitting for the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa, and subsequently served in the same ship under Com. E. H. Verney, in the Mediterranean, until promoted to lieut., Dec. 30, 1872. On Jan. 7, 1874, he was appointed to the Doris, Capt. W. H. Edye, on the North America and West Indies station, and in Sept. was transferred to the Resistance, Capt. E. W. Sullivan, C.B., wlth the Channel Squadron, and subsequently served in the same ship, under Capt. C. W. Hope, until Sept. 1875, when he joined the Excellent to qualify for gunnery, and remained until June, 1877, when he was appointed to the Cambridge, as additional for service in the Foudroyant, from which ship in June, 1879, he was appointed to the Boadicea, Comdre. F. W. Richards, C.B., on the Cape of Good Hope and West Coast of Africa station.

Paymaster-in-Chief Frederick Brady, who died at Portland House, Kidbrooke Park Road, Blackheath, on the 30th ult., in his 60th year, attained the rank of paymaster Jan. 19, 1842, and from the following August until 1846, served in the Orestes, Capts. the Hon. S. T. Carnegie and Edward St. Leger Cannon, in the West Indies, North America, and Mediterranean. He afterwards served in the Rattlesnake, surveying-vessel, Capts. Owen Stanley and J. H. Cockburn, in the East Indies, from Oct. 1846 until Nov. 1850, and in the Majestic, Capt. J. Hope, from Feb. 1854 until 1857, in which latter ship he served during the campaigns of 1854 and 1855, in the Baltic and in the Mediterranean, and received the Baltic medal. On April 30, 1859, he was appointed to the Marlborough, Capt. Lord F. H. Kerr, flagship in the Mediterranean of Vice-Admiral Arthur Fanshawe, C.B., and subsequently served in the same ship, on the same station, under Capt. William H. Stewart, C.B., and the flag of Sir William Fanshawe Martin, K.C.B., from March, 1861, until Jan. 1864, when he was transferred to the Britannia, training-ship for naval cadets at Dartmouth, from which ship, on Oct. 28, 1866, he was appointed additional to the Pembroke, Coastguard ship at Harwich, for service on shore, where he remained until Nov. 1869. He attained the rank of paymaster-in-chief, Dec. 1, 1874.

ADMIRALTY FURNITURE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—My attention has been called to an article in your paper of last week, praising up the present regulations about the furniture of official residences. Some of what you say may suit some officers, without furniture of their own. In my own case, having my own furniture, the present regulations are most harsh and arbitrary, and create a deep and bitter feeling of injustice, and render what otherwise would be considered a good appointment, one of little value. I would gladly, were I allowed, rent a house at my own private expense, so as to avoid coming under the present furniture regulations. I dare not in this give particulars, fearing, should this be published, identification. This I beg you will receive as a confidential communication.—I am, &c., VICTIM OF INJUSTICE.

On the recommendation of the Lords of the Admiralty, the medallion of the Royal Humane Society was given to Alfred Sydney Locke, of her Majesty's ship Alexandra, for jumping overboard to the rescue of William Anniss, who was in danger of drowning at Teodo Bay, Dalmatia, on the 2nd ult., the night being very dark, and the only indication of the man's whereabouts being afforded by the splashing of the water.

A scheme as to the position and pay of men of the Royal yachts is being considered by the Admiralty. These men will in future be petty officers, and paid for seven days in the week, with rations, instead of 4s. a day for six, as riggers under dockyard vote as hitherto.

The Sydney Mail records the death of a very old Tasmanian colonist, Lieut. C. B. Hardwick, aged 92. Born in Lincolnshire in 1788, he joined H.M.S. Fury, and soon rose to be a lieutenant, and in the wars with the French in 1813 took part in an engagement with a French frigate. In 1816 he landed in Van Dieman's Land, coming thence from Sydney. He died in Launceston. In his lifetime he has owned some of the best racing blood in Tasmania. He leaves a widow and no less than 70 children, grandchildren, and great-grandchildren, the figures being 14, 40, and 16 respectively.

The Superintendent of Devonport Dockyard and the chiefs of departments have been engaged in examining an ingenious invention by Mr. Hands, the chief constructor, which is likely to be of very great importance in the development of torpedo warfare. Mr. Hands' ingenuity has succeeded in perfecting a machine for preparing torpedo spars, which have hitherto been made by hand. Under the plan previously employed, it took a man a day and a half to complete a single spar, but with the aid of the machine a workman can turn out 30 a day, so that the machine is practically equal to the labour of 45 men. What is of equal importance is that the machine finishes the spars with far greater accuracy than the unaided workman, and for the purpose for which they are intended, exactitude of workmanship is essential. The machine and the spars prepared by it were critically examined, and the Admiral-Superintendent spoke in very high terms of every detail.—Western Morning News.

The following ships have given their addresses to the care of H.B.M.'s Consul, Panama, namely, the Triumph, Thetis, Turquoise, Penguin, Pelican, Shannon, Osprey, Gannet, and Kingfisher.

The state of affairs on the West Coast of Africa has called for a gathering of the ships on the station at or about Cape Coast Castle, where the Dido, Dwarf, Firebrand, Foam, and Flirt should be addressed. The Commodore, in the Boadicea, and the Pioneer may also soon be expected to arrive at Cape Coast Castle, but by last mail were addressed at St. Helena.—Hampshire Telegraph.

The Naples correspondent of the Daily News states:—"Towards the middle of next month the Italian ironclad Duilio will go from Spezzia at the full speed of her engines till she arrives off the Gulf of Salerno, a distance of 460 miles, and afterwards anchor at Gaeta. During the voyage the machinery will be put to the severest test. As previous experiments have demonstrated that the engines can communicate to the vessel a speed of more than fifteen miles an hour for a short space of time, and afterwards of fourteen miles an hour, it may be calculated that the voyage contemplated will not take longer than twenty-five hours, at an average of thirteen miles an hour. After the Duilio arrives at Gaeta she will join other vessels of the permanent squadron in making experiments with guns and torpedoes. These experiments will be directed by a commission selected from the members of the Stato Maggiore, presided over by Capt. Caimi, commandant of the Duilio."

Exhaustive trials are to be made by the Excellent staff with the gun-carriages which have been designed for mounting the new six-inch breech-loading guns by Armstrong. One gunboat, the Mastiff, and probably another, are to be fitted with these carriages experimentally, so as to enable a full trial of their capabilities to be made.—Hampshire Telegraph.

The Admiralty are desirous of proceeding with the gunnery trials on board the Inflexible with as much expedition as possible. The Chief Constructor at Portsmouth has pledged himself to complete the required work in both turrets by the evening of the 11th inst. On the 13th the ship will be handed over to the captain of the Excellent from the shipwright department, and after a few days occupied in the special gun-drill, it is expected that the gunnery trials will be proceeded with on the 16th and 17th inst.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO is the purest and most fragrant Tooth Powder ever used, and contains no acid or mineral ingredients, which are so detrimental to the teeth and gums. All who have a good set of teeth, and wish to keep them, should use it; and they who, by early neglect or ill-health, suffer from discoloured or imperfect teeth, which are the forerunners of dyspepsia and indigestion, will find that ROWLAND'S ODONTO will keep them sound and white, and prevent and arrest decay. Its purity especially adapts it for the teeth of young children. Ask any chemist for Rowland's Odonto.

WEARING UNIFORM.

"An Infantry Field Officer" writes:—"That the late Order on the subject of wearing uniform may not become a dead-letter, it might be suggested that General officers should in their monthly returns certify that it had been strictly carried out in their commands. Officers are very sore at being compelled to wear uniform off duty, and it has been noticed already that many endeavour to evade complying with the Queen's Regulations on the subject of dress. The Order is undoubtedly a right one, as the habit of throwing off the uniform and getting into mufti is very greatly indulged in, not only by old officers, but by youngsters,—the bad example having been shown the latter by those who are their superiors. If an officer is ashamed of his profession, by all means let him quit it, and make room for those who would consider it a special privilege to be allowed to wear the uniform of the British Army."

ARMY QUARTERMASTERS.

"One of the Sufferers" writes:—"In your paper of April 24 last, urging on the New Secretary of State for War the propriety of doing something for that hard-working, meritorious, but friendless class of officers, Quartermasters and Riding-masters, you say, 'We hope to go into the matter at length, on some future occasion.' Your able advocacy on behalf of the quartermasters is, I am sure, most deeply appreciated by those officers, and I trust you may be enabled to allude further to our case as promised, in such manner as you may deem fit for the consideration of the authorities. I am induced to address you more particularly just now, having in view your leader of Oct. 4, 1879, bearing upon the Clothing Accounts, admittedly most complicated, and which you most truly describe as the 'bane of a quartermaster's existence.' Notwithstanding that this is the law, I have every reason to believe that the Annual Clothing Account is, by the introduction of numerous additional columns, to be made more perplexing and intricate to the already bewildered quartermaster, whose work and responsibilities are to be further increased by the introduction of the system on April 1 next of withdrawing from the soldier, even when worn out, every article of clothing issued to him. In 1869, the Clothing Accounts of a regiment could be compiled easily in a day on a sheet of foolscap paper; now it is a huge book of over 100 pages, with scores of vouchers to support every entry, requiring incessant labour and vigilance to prevent inaccuracies, the increase of the work being occasioned by the system in force of accounting for part-worn clothing; and with all this, adjutants are to be found who do their utmost to prevent the quartermaster from having a clerk in his office, in addition to interference on matters with which they have nothing to do, tending to make the quartermaster's position peculiarly uncomfortable in carrying out his duties. That we are a friendless class no one will deny, although we have the name of being hard-working, &c., and it is admitted that no regiment can be efficient or comfortable (especially in the field), unless it has a good quartermaster. And why, Mr. Editor, is it we are friendless, and (not to disguise the fact) treated different to every other class of officer? It cannot be because we are promoted from the ranks, as other grades so promoted are not treated as we are; it must be in the name of quartermaster, which seems to carry with it a dread into all social life,—and it is only a quartermaster who can tell you how much is endured on this head. I wish that some officer of rank and position would befriend the poor quartermasters, and seek to form us into a Department, under his fostering care and attention; and, as a body, we would soon prove ourselves worthy of the kindness shown, perform our numerous and complex duties to the satisfaction of the authorities, make our regiments efficient and comfortable, and in place of being the social outcasts we now are, ignored by all on account of being only a quartermaster, assert our claim to be recognised socially, not as a separate and distinct class, but as every other officer serving, holding, as we do, her Majesty's commission; for either long or faithful services, generally both."

"THE COMING RACE."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I have been looking over the new official Army List to June 30, 1880, which contains Gradation Lists of all the Officers of the Army, and think, perhaps, the following items may interest your readers:—The senior General officer on the Effective List was Gen. Sir Jas. Michel, G.C.B., commander in Ireland, born Sept. 1, 1804, so that he was six years older than the age permitted for that list, and will be removed from it. He seems to have taken some time settling down to a regiment, having been Ensign, 57th Foot, April 3, 1823; gone to 27th Foot, June 12, 1823; 60th Foot, Nov. 6, 1823; and to 64th Foot, Nov. 20, 1823. In that regiment he became a lieutenant April 28, 1825, and after only three years' service became an unattached captain, Dec. 12, 1826. After two months on half-pay, he went back into the 64th as captain, and remained eight years, when he exchanged to the Buffs, and was on the Staff of the Commander-in-Chief in India from 1835 to 1839; in 1840 became a major in 6th Foot, lieutenant-colonel of same regiment in 1842, until Inspecting Field Officer of Recruiting, Oct. 1, 1854. The following are the officers who, if they live until the age of 70, will appear at the head of the list of effective General officers, so soon as General Lord Napier of Magdala's time is up at Gibraltar:—(1), Gen. Sir C. van Straubenzee, G.C.B., a Linesman, until Feb. 17, 1882; (2), then Sir E. W. Forestier, K.C.B., a Guardsman, for one day, Feb. 18, 1882; (3), then Sir F. W. Hamilton, K.C.B., a Guardsman, until July 8, 1885; (4), then Sir A. M. Becher, K.C.B., of Bengal Army, May 7, 1886; (5), then Gen. W. S. Newton, a Guardsman, until Aug. 16, 1886; (6), then Gen. H. Doherty, C.B., a 14th Light Dragoon, until April 20, 1887; (7), then Sir Alexander Hamilton Gordon, K.C.B., a Guardsman, until Dec. 11, 1887; (8), then Sir John L. Simmons, G.C.B., Royal Engineers, until Feb. 12, 1891; (9), then Sir Charles H. Ellice, K.C.B., Guards and Line, until May 10, 1893; (10), then Sir Edwin Johnson, K.C.B., Bengal Artillery, until July 4, 1895; (11), then Hon. A. Hardinge, C.B., a Guardsman, until March 2, 1898; (12), then Hon. Leicester Smyth, C.B., a Linesman, until Oct. 25, 1899; (13), then Sir Garnet Wolseley, G.C.B., a Linesman, until June 4, 1903; (14), then William Hill, Line and W.I. Regiment, until Jan. 26, 1906; (15), then H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, K.G., &c., a Royal Prince, until May 1, 1920. These may be considered the lucky ones, as regards promotion, of the Service. Of these, 15 officers, Nos. 2, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11—that is, six officers—owe their quick promotion to having started in the Guards. Nos. 4 and 10 are of the late H.E.I.C.'s Bengal Army, No. 6 is a Cavalryman, No. 8 a Royal Engineer, Nos. 1, 12, 13, 14 are Linesmen, No. 15 is a Linesman and Royal Prince, and therefore exceptional. It shows what a preponderance of promotion the Guards have had. —I am, &c.,

THE STAFF COLLEGE.

"The Owl on the Cross Swords" writes:—"About two years since, you informed your readers that a committee, composed of Sir Evelyn Wood and several other distinguished officers, had been ordered to report upon the condition and working of the Staff College. Can you inform them now if any decision has been come to, or has the subject been dropped? Rumours have reached the non-official world from time to time that it is proposed to introduce certain changes in the regulations now existing, the most important being that officers who fail to obtain the requisite number of marks in the obligatory subjects at the examinations held at the end of the first year's study, shall not be dismissed the College. This would, unquestionably, be a healthy reform. There are several well-known cases of officers, possessing military ambition and considerable intelligence, who, having passed into the College creditably, worked laboriously there for a whole year, and having undergone great expense and anxiety in the hope of seeing the much-coveted 'p.s.' opposite their names, have been ignominiously evicted and sent back to their regiments, for no greater crime than having failed to solve certain algebraical conundrums about old women having so many eggs in their baskets, before or after certain contingencies, or determining the relative speed per minute of two pedestrians. These officers—for there are many cases in point—have returned to their regiments broken-hearted, with all the zeal they possessed utterly crushed out of them, their prestige ruined, and, indeed, in every way far worse than if they had never aspired to compete at all. Once an officer has qualified before entering in these digits and quadratics, which have so little bearing on the real business of Staff life, surely his time at the College would be better devoted to the study of the higher branches of military science, theoretical and practical, than in untying ingenious knots devised by the pedant, to succeed in which is not only a waste of time, but tends to blunt the mental faculties and perceptions, and make him what so many of our Staff officers now are,—a theorist only."

THE NEW SHOULDER-STRAPS.

"Infantry of the Line" writes:—"The new regulation shoulder-straps, as worn at present, are giving anything but satisfaction to the Army generally, and we trust that you will help us to try and induce the authorities to make some change, with a view to a more satisfactory mode of fastening them on to the tunic and jacket. It would be a great advantage if these shoulder-straps were made stronger and more serviceable than they are at present. Their disadvantages are, viz.:—(1), They are not likely to stand rough work; (2), they are too easily damaged, and the badges liable to be torn off when worn under a cloak or great-coat; (3), they invariably come unfastened (either one or both) when the arm is raised in saluting, &c. I would suggest that shoulder-straps be made more durable, and fastened with a spring-catch (first being passed under a loop of gold lace on the point of the shoulder), similar to the way the epaulettes and scales are fastened in the Navy; and that they be made universal for all uniforms, thus doing away with the cloth straps as at present regulation for undress cloaks and great-coats. It would have been far more economical for us had we been given wire-lace or metal scales, instead of shoulder-straps, similar to those worn in the Navy now, and by the Army in times past. They would have lasted all one's service, and always looked smart and soldier-like. Is it too late now to make the change?"

The Standard says:—"The Aldershot Sub-committee of the Pack Saddle Committee, of which Col. Annesley, A.A.G., is president, is now dissolved. This Committee has been engaged in experimental trials at Aldershot with mules and pannions since April last, and it is considered probable that their recommendations will shortly be adopted throughout the Service, and that mules and pack saddles will be more extensively used in connection with the regimental transport of ammunition and entrenching tools in the field in future."

A new wing, which has lately been added to the Soldiers' Daughters' Home, Hampstead, was opened on the 3rd inst., in the presence of a number of the friends of the charity. Gen. Sir Edward Hodge, K.C.B., who presided, said that this institution was founded in 1855, and the inaugural ceremony performed by the late Prince Consort in 1858. The present number of girls in the Home was 186, the total number of those who had received its benefits being over 800, of whom more than 350 had been sent to service. Gen. Boileau, who had been chairman to the House Committee for 18 years, had superintended the erection of the new wing, which, in consideration of his services to the Home, the committee had resolved to call the Boileau Wing.

MESSRS. ALLEN AND HANBURYS have as nearly as possible succeeded in depriving Cod Liver Oil of its nauseating smell and taste. They present in their "Perfected" article the oil in a beautifully bright and but very little coloured state. Many persons to whom the taste of the oil has hitherto been an obstacle will doubtless be able to take it in this more perfected form.—Lancet. No nauseous eructations follow after it is swallowed.—Medical Times and Gazette. All who have difficulty in taking Cod Liver Oil should insist on having Allen and Hanburys' "PERFECTED" OIL. "DOWN ON THE DOCTORS AGAIN!"

"Miles" writes:—"Will you allow me, as a combatant officer of many years' standing, to bring to your notice and that of the public, some of the causes which still combine to make the Army Medical Department unpopular? It must be allowed by every unprejudiced person that the last Warrant swept away many grievances, and from a pecuniary point of view has placed the medical service in a very superior position to almost every other branch of the Service, as regards pay and allowances. But there seems to be some unfortunate fatality in the system of carrying on the administration of the Department, which causes fresh discontent continually, and must render it again unpopular. In what other branch of the Service is it ruled that officers exchanging draw no pay while en route to join their respective stations? Again, see how faith has been broken with medical officers serving in India. I have a near relative there now, who has completed his foreign tour of five years, and naturally thought he had a right to return home this winter; but suddenly an order is issued, detaining in India all medical officers who have been out for five years for another year. This is in direct violation of the terms of foreign service, and is the more remarkable from the fact that the establishment of surgeons-major in India is far above that allowed by the Indian Government, and also that there are now in the United Kingdom many medical officers who have been at home for years, to say nothing of all those who have entered under the new Warrant, and are available for foreign service. Many of the officers now detained have served through both Afghan campaigns, and to detain them in India is unjust and cruel. Another most unfair order has just been issued, viz., limiting sick-leave from India to six months for medical officers, while the rule allowing twelve months for all others holds good. Is a doctor made differently from any other officer, that such a distinction should be allowed? Medical officers should be treated in every respect as other officers are, and till this is done, it is waste of money to bring out new warrants, only to break them next day."

The Executive Committee of the Corps of Commissionaires have received the following sums during the past month in aid of the endowment fund of the institution:—Major-Gen. the Marquis Conyngham, £10; the officers 56th Regt., £10; Col. Bulwer and officers Inns of Court Rifle Volunteers, £26 5s.; Capt. Konarski, 25th King's Own Borderers, £10; Capt. A. Fewkes, Robin Hood Rifles, £2 2s.; Mr. Salisbury Baxendale, £5.

A divisional order was issued at Aldershot on Saturday directing a Board, consisting of a lieutenant-colonel, Royal Artillery, president, a field officer of infantry, and Col. Prior, garrison-instructor, to assemble at the camp, for the purpose of examining and reporting upon the qualifications of Brevet Majors Barrow, C.M.G., 19th Hussars, and Fraser, 60th Rifles; Capts. Ingle, R.H.A., M'Cleverty, 45th, Wilson, 75th, Thornton, 4th, Bingham, Crosbie, and Browne, 60th Rifles, for promotion to the rank of field-officer.

Major-Gen. Sir F. Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., has consented to serve on the council engaged in supplying coffee-taverns for the Army and Auxiliary Forces in the various camps and garrison towns.

It is probable that Col. E. R. C. Bradford, C.S.I., Madras S.C., will succeed Col. Sir R. Meade as Resident at Hyderabad.

Reviews.

The South-African Campaign, 1879. By T. P. Mackinnon, 25th K.O.B., formerly 72nd Highlanders, and Sydney Shadbolt, of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Sampson Low and Co.

After several months of careful preparation, Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. have published a work of rare merit on the Zulu War. Although this splendid volume does not contain an elaborate history of the campaign, it nevertheless presents a thoroughly interesting summary of the operations It is, moreover, a "Memorial" of the brilliant services of British officers. The compilers are entitled to sincere commendation for the perfect manner in which they have completed a most arduous task. Any delay which has arisen in the publication is fully accounted for by the difficulties inherent in collecting records of the individual services of more than 1,100 officers, scattered over all quarters of the globe, and by the time necessarily consumed in the enlargement and reproduction of sixty photographs. The volume, which is a quarto, and a model of excellent handiwork in every respect, contains a large number of cabinet portraits, finely reproduced by the Woodbury process of photography. To each portrait is attached a biographical sketch, which has been furnished by his relatives or surviving comrades. There is also a complete list of all the officers of the Army and Navy engaged in the campaign, as well as summaries of the movements of the various regiments. Altogether, though it treats of no subject beyond the South-African campaign, it is full of military matter, which cannot fail to prove interesting to every regiment in the Service. By the non-professional reader, the work will be gladly welcomed as an authentic narrative. The first photograph is that of the Prince Imperial, splendidly executed. The fatal event which caused such profound grief throughout Europe is thus narrated:—

> "The Prince, who is stated to have saddled up first, waited until, in a soldierlike manner, he had asked the men, 'Are you all ready?' and had received the reply, 'Yes, Sir,' when he gave the order, 'Prepare to mount.' At this moment, suddenly there burst from the cover a rifle-volley, and with a loud shout, the Zulus, about forty in number, rushed towards the party. The horses all swerved at the suddenness of the tumult, and some broke away. One of the escort was shot while still on foot, another directly he was mounted, and the rest fled precipitately. The Zulus started in pursuit, yelling and firing after the fugitives. The Prince's horse followed the others, and the Prince was seen holding the stirrup-leather with his left hand and the saddle with his right, trying to mount. The last man who seems to have seen him was a trooper named Letocq, who was lying across his saddle, unable to get into it, and who, as he passed, cried out, 'Dépêchez-vous, Monsieur, de monter!' so that, strange to say, the last words uttered by European lips which the poor Prince heard were in the same language as that which had greeted him at his birth. He must have made one desperate effort to leap into the saddle with the help of the holster, and the holster must have given way."

This, in all probability, is the true version of this great calamity, as it was strongly corroborated subsequently by eighteen Zulus, who had taken part in the attack. It would be a pleasing task, if space permitted, to transcribe copious extracts from the compiler's "Introduction," which is written with admirable clearness, and an evident desire to state the plain, unvarnished truth, and nothing else. Before concluding this brief notice of a work which will prove of unfading interest to so many, it may be observed that this is the first time in which one of a similar description has been offered to the public on anything like so extended a scale. The idea was a bright as well as a bold one, and both compilers and publishers have laboured successfully in realising it.

Hardwicke's Science Gossip—a delightful little periodical, well described in its title as "a monthly medium of interchange and gossip for students and lovers of nature"—this week completes its sixteenth year, and bids fair for a green old age. For 5d. per month, any soldier or sailor who "loves nature" has in this excellent work, which is edited by Mr. J. E. Taylor, F.L.S., with great care and judgment, the means of learning what is going on in the world of natural history, and of furnishing his own impressions or communicating with his fellow-students in that fascinating branch of human knowledge.

Military Misreadings of Shakespeare is a quaint exercise of the powers which Major Seccombe has made familiar to the world, in good-natured caricature of those who wear the Queen's livery on land, and is to be commended for its pleasant humour and diverting application of Shakespearean sentences. It is printed in colours by Mr. E. Evans, and published by Messrs. Routledge. The author feels bound to disclaim any "intention of reflecting upon the powers of equitation, &c., of any particular corps, the uniforms of the regiments represented having been chosen solely for variety." It is well suited for a mess ante-room, for it must amuse all, and it hurts nobody.

The Giornale d'Artiglieria e del Genio affords continual proofs of the immense ingenuity of our Italian fellow-labourer in the mechanical parts of gun-making, and ought to be read with attention by the officers of the Scientific Corps who wish for accurate official information on the progress of artillery, &c., in Italy. The latest and best improvements in gunpowder are due to the manufacturers of that country, and the introduction of the "Fossano" powder is a very important element in the development of artillery results.

"OUR SOLDIERS IN AFGHANISTAN."

Capt. J. Gildea writes to us from 20 Stafford Terrace, Kensington, W.:—"May I request the insertion of the following extract from a letter received from the chaplain at Peshawur, which will prove of interest to many who so kindly answered my appeal, made through your indulgence, and enabled me to forward such a plentiful supply of newspapers, books, &c., during the last eighteen months, for the use of our soldiers in Afghanistan? Would that there was an equally liberal response to our fund for the widows and orphans of those left destitute since the commencement of the war:—' . . . . Your last large supply of books and papers has arrived. . . . . It has made such a difference in the hospitals and barracks here, and the quantity you have sent is so large that it will now last for a very long time. The garrison is now resuming its usual strength of two Queen's regiments and three batteries, besides a number of native regiments. Soldiers' wives and children are returning, and all the good, healthy literature you have sent will be more than ever valuable.' I might add that I have despatched altogether seventy-three bales to Cabul, Candahar, Jellalabad, Kohat, and Peshawur."

A PLEA FOR FRENCH SOLDIERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

DEAR SIR,—May I be permitted to ask the officers of the English Army and Navy—those by whose kind sympathy so much good has been done for the moral advancement of the soldiers and sailors of England—that they would have the generosity to help me in a work I began two months ago, for the soldiers and sailors in this large garrison town? Nothing had ever been undertaken for their benefit, previous to my opening a free library at No. 38 Rue Nationale. Here they find books to read, a room in which they can write their letters, and a smoking-room; they can likewise obtain a cup of good coffee for 1½d. Once a week a service is held in the evening, at which are many earnest listeners. What I am most in want of for the library is money to buy second-hand books, on useful, scientific, and entertaining subjects. The young men in our Army and Navy have no advantages whatever, and their whole time when off duty is spent in low drinking houses. I know how much is done for England's soldiers and sailors, and perhaps I may be forgiven for making this short appeal on behalf of those in my own country. My wife, being English, will gladly answer any inquiries. Donations on behalf of the "Soldiers and Sailors' Free Library, Toulon," will be gladly received by Messrs. Morgan and Scott, publishers, 12 Paternoster Buildings, London.—I am, &c.,

JACQUES MASSIS, Pasteur Français,
Director of the Mission Work.

Toulon, Var, France, November 24.

The officers of the Royal Naval Barracks, Sheerness, gave a children's party on the 2nd inst., which was attended by 50 or 60 children. The amusements provided were varied, as suits child nature, and consisted of many delightful games, a little dancing, a huge bran-pie, in which every child found a small toy, or sweets; swings, and last, but not least, a procession (otherwise called the hungry march) of the children carrying flags, and headed by the fife and drum band, which marched round the quadrangle of the barracks to the sound of gay music, and which ended in the enclosure, where numerous little tables were laid ready for tea. A charming coup d'œil was afforded by the happy young faces with their background of bright-coloured flags, the fountain playing in the centre, all brilliantly lighted up; and, without doubt, the mothers and elder sisters present must have thoroughly appreciated the trouble and thought for the little ones, unsparingly shown by Com. Collins and the officers.

The first delivery of Berthon duplex boats for use on board torpedo-boats has been made at Portsmouth. There are six 12 ft. in length, and four 6 ft. long, the size which has of late been supplied to the Navy being 28 ft., although at one time 38-ft. collapsible boats were used. The 12-ft. boats when open have a beam of about 4½ ft., but when closed are not of a greater breadth than 16 in., and for stowage purposes they are divisible longitudinally, being so arranged that each half can be used independently of the other; and while a half would be sufficient to carry one man at least, the entire boat can accommodate no less than six. The weight is only 1½ cwt., and the boat can, after being separated, be put together ready for service within three minutes. The object of these small collapsible boats is to enable torpedo-boats to more readily communicate with the shore or a steamer, and to afford escape to a crew.

The first class for the instruction of the wives of non-commissioned officers in nursing and hygiene, under Lady Strangford's scheme, met on the 6th inst. at Woolwich, Lady Strangford being present. The scheme has received the approval of the Commander-in-Chief and the Secretary of State for War. The instructor was H. Crookshank, Esq., M.R.C.S., one of the medical staff of the St. John's Ambulance Association, and the author of a recent valuable work on nursing.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—ITS UNEQUALLED EFFICACY IN INFANTILE WASTING AND DEBILITY OF CHILDREN.—Thomas Hunt, Esq., late Medical Officer of Health, St. Giles's and Bloomsbury, writes:—"In badly nourished infants, Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is invaluable. The rapidity with which two or three tea-spoonfuls a day will fatten a young child is astonishing. The weight gained is three times the weight of the Oil swallowed or more; and as children generally like the taste of Dr. de Jongh's Oil, and when it is given them, often cry for more, it appears as though there were some prospect of deliverance for the appalling multitude of children who figure in the weekly bills of mortality issued from the office of the Registrar-General." Dr. R. C. Croft, Author of "Handbook for the Nursery," writes:—"Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is almost a specific in many of the diseases peculiar to infancy and childhood, and I have seen marked benefit produced by its use. Patients prefer it to the Pale Oils, and are able to retain it more comfortably." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature and the signature of his sole consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

Amusements.

At the ST. JAMES'S, Mr. Coghlan's new version of Octave Feuillet's "Roman d'un Jeune Homme pauvre," already made familiar to the London stage by Mr. Oxenford's "Ivy Hall" at the Princess's, and Dr. Westland Marston's "Hero of Romance" at the Haymarket, has been favourably, but not enthusiastically received. "Good Fortune," as the adaptation is now called, is carefully placed on the boards and excellently cast, though the visitors to this theatre hardly expect to find Mr. Hare's name absent from the playbill. The hero, now named Lord Neath, is played with ease and earnestness by Mr. Kendal, and Mrs. Kendal as Isabel Ransome, enforced almost against her will to acknowledge with ardent admiration the heroic nature of the impoverished nobleman, charms the audience by a display of emotional power most naturally expressed. Mr. John Clayton is not quite at home as the supercilious baronet, Sir George Fallow, but Mrs. Stephens as the mercenary Lady Banks, Miss Linda Dietz as the malicious governess, Miss Somers, and the more subordinate parts embodied by Mrs. Gaston Murray, Miss Cowle, Mr. Wenman, and Mr. Mackintosh, are all admirably filled. A little Welsh girl, represented by Miss B. Buckstone, a youthful daughter of the late manager of the Haymarket, attracted favourable notice. Messrs. Gordon and Harford have supplied some picturesque scenes, illustrative of the mountainous region of Wales, and the only weakness in the drama is felt in the last act, when some tediousness is created by the repetition of elaborate family explanations.

Madame Modjeska, who seems to retain her popularity at the COURT, exchanges to-night the character of Mary Stuart for that of Adrienne Lecouvreur, in a new version of the well-known drama by MM. Scribe and Legouvé. In the meantime, Mr. James Mortimer has furnished a neat comedietta, called "Two Old Boys," adapted from Henry Meilhac's "Suzanne et les Deux Vieillards," brought out about a dozen years since at the Gymnase. Miss Winifred Emery pleasantly personates the heroine, and Mr. Anson and Mr. Price amusingly act the two foolish old guardians, who make the choice of a husband for their ward depend upon the uncertain issue of a game at cards.

With this week has terminated the brief run of "Anne-Mie" at the PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE, and the establishment will now be closed for a week, to reopen with Mr. Coghlan's version of Giacometti's play, "Le Morte Civile," in which the adapter will represent the character originally created in Italy by Signor Salvini.

The benefit given in aid of the Harcourt Memorial Fund at DRURY LANE THEATRE, on Monday afternoon, will be memorable as showing the high esteem in which the deceased actor was held by his professional brethren, and the deep sorrow with which his sad accidental death was regarded by the public. Every actor and actress of eminence appeared on the occasion, and the house was crowded in every part. The money paid for admission reached the sum of £420, and the treasurer announced that, after paying all expenses, a fund amounting to £1,700 was at the command of the trustees to provide for the youthful daughter of the universally-lamented Charles Harcourt.

Haverley's American United Mastodon Minstrels will return to her Majesty's Theatre, Haymarket, London, on Boxing Day morning; performance at two, evening at eight. They will present (among other new features, fresh from America), Haverley's latest New York sensation, the Christmas burlesque pantomime, entitled, "The Hoo-Doo Queen; or, the Clown Among the Niggers." Besides the burlesque pantomime, many novelties will be produced, among others, the American Volunteer Firemen Drill, new Monster 40 first part, the Picnic. The American advanced banjo artist, E. M. Hall, will also make his first appearance.

In order to continue the work of exact longitude determinations, the United States Navy Department will shortly send Lieut.-Coms. F. M. Green and Charles H. Davis, with their assistants, Lieut. J. A. Norris and Master S. C. Lemly, to the Asiatic station to determine telegraphically the longitudes of places in China, Japan, and the Eastern Archipelago, which are connected by submarine cables with the primary meridian of Greenwich. The U.S. steamer Palos will be used to transport the observers and instruments from place to place, and will be commanded by Lieut.-Com. F. M. Green, who will have charge of the expedition. The measurement will commence at Yokohama or Vladivostock, and will be carried through the Japanese and Chinese ports to Singapore and Madras, there connecting with the measurement made from England by the officers of the Great Trigonometrical Survey of India. The north point of Australia and the east point of Java may also be included. The companies owning the telegraph cables have very liberally offered the free use of their lines to the U.S. Government, and applications have been made through the State Department to the respective Governments for permission to make the necessary astronomical observations. The French Government have already issued orders to the Government of Cochin-China to furnish the expedition with all possible facilities for landing at Saigon, and for establishing a temporary station there. It is intended that work shall be commenced in Japan early in the spring of 1881.

A HEALTHY TRIM versus SUPERFLUOUS FAT.—ENO'S FRUIT SALT acts as simply, yet just as powerfully, on the animal system, as sunshine does on the vegetable world. It has a natural action on the organs of digestion, absorption, circulation, respiration, secretion, and excretion, and thus removes and hinders (by natural means) the unnatural and dangerous accumulation of Fat. It keeps the body in healthy TRIM, by preserving and restoring health. Instead of being lowering to the system, this preparation is in the highest degree invigorating. It supplies the want of ripe fruit, so essential to animal economy, and may be taken as an invigorating and cooling draught under any circumstances from infancy to old age, and may be continued for any length of time, and looked upon as being PURE FRUIT SALT, the product of ripe fruit. It is impossible to overstate its value; on that account, no household ought to be without it, for by its use many disastrous results may be entirely prevented. In the nursery, it is beyond praise.—Caution.—Examine each bottle, and see the capsule is marked "ENO'S FRUIT SALT." Without it, you have been imposed on by a worthless imitation. Sold by all chemists, price 2s 9d and 4s 6d.

ELEYS' "BOXER" AMMUNITION, for Snider, Martini-Henry, and other Rifles. British Government Pattern. Merchants, Gunmakers, and others are warned against buying Inferior Cartridges of the above description, now being offered in the market at low prices. We have examined samples of these Cartridges, and find that they are of an obsolete pattern, made many years since; and that the powder in them, through long and defective storage, has become so decomposed as to render them absolutely worthless for any practical purpose.

We have also to warn merchants and others against buying Cartridges manufactured at the Royal Arsenal, which are sold to the public by serjeants and storekeepers. The traffic in these Cartridges is illegal, and all persons concerned in the buying or selling of the same are liable to prosecution, and severe punishment on conviction.

Having laid down special machinery for the manufacture of Cartridges on the "BOXER" principle, we are prepared to submit Samples, with all the latest improvements, at special prices for large quantities.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Directors have much pleasure in announcing the opening for public traffic of the first section of this Line of Tramway, which runs through the important Metropolitan districts of Bermondsey, Rotherhithe, and Deptford, and they are now prepared to receive applications for the remaining Share Capital, to complete the construction and equipment of the other Sections of the Lines authorised by their Act of Parliament.

These Lines traverse one of the most thickly inhabited districts of London, and will afford direct accommodation to a resident population of considerably over 200,000 persons, of a class specially requiring the service of Tramways, beside the large numbers whose business calls them daily to the district.

The Directors will apply in the coming Session for important Extensions, including one from their Tramway now working, to a point near London Bridge Railway Stations, to which they believe the full support of the authorities will be given. The present Lines and these Extensions are shown on a Map, copies of which can be had on application.

The Directors can but repeat what they stated in their Report in August last, that they feel more than ever assured that the enterprise must prove a success; that the project is warmly supported; and the population is essentially one to whom a Tramway will be of service, and is increasing rapidly. The Directors would only further remark that when the extensions are obtained, the value of the line, and of the Shares as an investment, must be largely increased; and there is no reason to doubt that this will become one of the best paying lines in the metropolis.

The works have been carried out to the satisfaction, not only of the Directors, but also of the Local authorities, and the solid manner in which the Line has been constructed has met with the strong approval of the Inspecting Officer of the Board of Trade.

The whole of the Works, including Cars, Horses, Stabling, and other equipment, will be completed within the authorised Capital of the Company.

Copies of the Act of Parliament and of the Contract for Construction can be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitor of the Company, and copies of this Propectus may be obtained at the Company's Offices, and from the Bankers and Brokers.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480):—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' 'Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'"

Teeth from 5s; sets, 5 to 30 guineas. Only addresses, 312 Regent Street, opposite the Polytechnic; and 49 Moorgate Street. Established 1820. Consultation free.

WATCHES.—JEWELLERY.—WATCHES.

The Rev. Robt. Cass, Settle, Yorkshire, writes February 19, 1880:—"The Ladies' Gold Lever Watch received from you for 70s in size, workmanship, and beautiful appearance, resembles a watch usually sold at £10. It gives entire satisfaction."

The Rev. James Arthur Kemp, Lew Down, North Devon, also writes, March 8, 1880:—"The watch I ordered of you at 25s, for my servant, arrived quite safely, and I am exceedingly well pleased with it in every way. It is an excellent timekeeper, very neat and handsome in appearance, and in my opinion worth far more than those that cost treble the money. I do not think anybody should be without a watch, when they can obtain from you such an excellent article at so reasonable a price."

From Mr. J. J. HARRIS, Schoolmaster, 2nd-18th the Royal Irish Regiment, Aldershot, Sept. 22, 1880.

"I am very much pleased with everything I have had from your Company. The watch (25s) has proved to be an excellent one, and is a marvel of cheapness. It is fully equal to, or indeed superior to, many I have seen purchased by regimental clubs for treble the money. I am positive your Company will prove itself a boon to Army men at home and abroad, particularly the latter, who are often compelled to pay enormous prices for very inferior articles indeed. ONCE more the Army is to be "reorganised!"—not provided with new organs—not even with new pipes! But it is to be renamed. The regiments are to be—not rejuvenated, for they are now only teething, most of them—but they are to be made of age by official christening at Pall Mall. "What's in a name?" "Everything," say the War-Office Authorities. Take a decrepit little battalion of shoeblacky lads, and link it with another decrepiter battalion of a more intensely shoeblacky dye, and give both a local habitation in a district, and affiliate them with the Militia and Volunteers of the aforesaid district, who probably hate the very sight of them, and there you have the makings of an army—not a British Army, but a Territorial Army, with local affections and Imperial duties and obligations! Well, we cannot pretend to affirm that there is no good in a change which produces a certain amount of symmetrical proportion in our Military system, but we hold most firmly to the belief that for military purposes, as far as potential strength is concerned, the change will be of little value. How is it to be supposed that by giving these battalions certain names, you can fill up their ranks with eligible recruits? We understand that last week the Military Authorities resolved on accepting in the main the nomenclature recommended by Colonel Stanley's Committee, as they were published, barring some modifications, and that Mr. Childers will incorporate them in the scheme of reform he will lay before Parliament when he proposes the Army Estimates. The Army List will become a curious study, at this rate. We do not hold so very much to the influence of what we are obliged to use French to express,—the pride men, officers and privates, feel in their regiment as likely to perish, or regard it altogether as a power which dies out, if the name or number of the corps be changed; because it is the particular body they are in at the time of their service which soldiers are proud of; but we certainly attach great importance to the maintenance of corps' individuality, and to the sentimental influence which old associations and comradeship exercise over those who wear the same uniform and serve in the same battalion. There is sure to be an "Old This" or an "Old That" feeling in every regiment, no matter where it was raised or what it has done; and the colour of a tunic or of a facing, the badge on a coat or a button, has a magical, if quite illogical, force, which may do good service in a hard-fought field. "Nos numeri sumus," says the poet. We are only "numbers," it may be, but there is strength in numbers, even in that sense; and the question for consideration is how far our new system will conduce to internal harmony in the newly-formed regiments, each battalion of which has hitherto regarded itself as being at least "as good as any other." The most down-hearted, ill-conditioned corps in the Service, if there be one, could be rallied by a few stirring words of the "Steady, the Buffs!" style. We are about to try if this property be quite diffusible; but unless great care be taken in the bottling, "You may name, you may number the corps as you will," "But the scent of the old lot won't hang round it still." What does the Duke think of it all? He seems to be in the mill, and to assume all kinds of shapes at the twist of the handle by his grinder—more or less charitable. There was once a Duke who had a good deal to say to the handling of British troops on such fields as Blenheim, Ramillies, and Malplaquet, and deuce a fragment can one glean from what he said or wrote that can be quoted to support the present business of doctoring the Army by a system of new labels. In his days, regiments were personal, and men talked of them as Cutts's or Ligonier's, and the like. Later, there came another Duke, who had to lead what passed for a British army against some famous captains, and left his mark on his opponents, wherever he met them, in most unmistakable round-hand. Strange, but true, in all the immense mass of writing which the piety of the present Duke of Wellington has given to the world from his father's despatch-boxes, there is not a trace of a suggestion that the British Army ought to be territorialised, or renamed, or renumbered, or reorganised. But times are changed—they are, indeed—and so are the captains and the armies. We are handed over to doctrinaires, to Committees, to Commissions, and there is a frightful amount of work done in tailoring and cabbaging, in pen-and-inkery, in naming and re-naming, in circularising and general-ordering, in amalgamating and constructing and reconstructing, in shifting clerks out of one set of rooms under one master into another set of rooms under another master, in reporting and inquiring,—and all the time, the British Army is withering away. Now and then a small or a considerable war accrues to us, and a capable officer arises to handle the matchless material which a British army is sure to furnish to him who knows where to look for it, and real, old, professional soldiers march and fight as of yore; but the character of the Army, as a whole, is not what once it was, and neither Marlborough nor Wellington would to-day feel confidence, we feel bold to say, in the successful conduct of an expedition against a foreign enemy of a corps of 30,000 or 40,000 men, such as they would have had in the days when every regiment was a gallant, selfish, corrupt, personal corporation, without any ideas of re-organisation or reconstruction, but with perfect reliance on its own power as a fighting unit, which it called "the Old" something or other. It is quite true that times have changed too, and that the great standing territorial armies of the Continental States are different from the levies which fought under Turenne and Saxe, or the better constituted forces which were led by Soult and Massena; but we are not, it seems to us, making any appreciable approach to the foreign system by mere readjustment of surfaces, and by rechristening our military babies. If the Authorities at the War Office think that a system of labels will stand the test of a stern demand for real stuff, we fear that the delusion will be dispelled, the moment they begin to work it "under fire."

Mr. Shaw-Lefevre is doubtless honest and bold in stating his convictions, but his remarks at Reading on the entry of Cadets were scarcely complimentary to the Naval Service, and many who read them will think there was no reason to regret that he has been removed from the Admiralty to another office. The bare report of this speech in the London papers, made it appear that Mr. Lefevre had almost gone out of his way to fire a parting shot at that Service which had been the means of providing him with office, and of bringing him forward with a reputation as a Radical reformer. Such a fine old Service as the Royal Navy affords an opportunity for an ardent reformer who desires to make his mark as one who cares naught for precedent, tradition, or esprit de corps, and the Navy began to look upon Mr. Lefevre as another of that school which shows a supreme disregard for that which is, if only they can found some new régime. We are glad to find, however, from a full report of Mr. Shaw-Lefevre's speech which has been placed in our hands, that his charge against the Navy was not correctly stated. Indeed, he himself did his best to prove to his hearers that in bringing forward his pet hobby of competitive examinations, he had been led into statements that were not borne out by fact. It is difficult to credit the assertion that the Cadets who have been admitted by nomination are inferior in every respect, both intellectually, and "strange to say, physically;" and if it be so, as is alleged by the late Secretary of the Admiralty, it is clear that some exceptional batches of entries have been made. Entry by nomination has been the rule, and the Navy has been admitted to be as fine a Service as there is in the world, and yet we are told that "Parents have chosen the worst and most stupid member of their family, to enter the only Service which can now be entered under the principle of nomination." If Mr. Lefevre did not unsay all this in another part of his speech, it would have been one of the greatest insults ever cast upon the Royal Navy by a public man; but happily for the good name and amour-propre of the Service, he did so. Nomination is not a creation of yesterday, like competitive examination, but has been the means by which the Navy in times past has been given her best officers. Indeed, Mr. Lefevre speaks of having served at the Admiralty with Naval colleagues whom to know was to admire, and having been brought in contact with a large number of Naval men, and says that with that experience of the personnel of the Navy, he scarcely knows in what terms to express his admiration of the high public spirit which they always exhibit in the performance of their duties. "There appears to me," he says, "always to be something in the training of Naval officers which peculiarly fits them to undertake any duty which they may be called upon to perform, and whether in command of fleets on distant stations, acting the parts of diplomats, and placed in positions of the greatest responsibility, and having in their hands the questions of peace and war, or whether in the administration at the Admiralty itself, I have always found we are never wanting in Naval officers of the highest administrative ability and tact, and it is the greatest possible pleasure to work with such men." Such is the verdict of Mr. Lefevre, after the experience he has had in Naval affairs; and yet he seems to have forgotten this in a later part of his speech, and to have implied that competition was a necessity, to prevent the Navy being stocked with fools. The colleagues with whom he has served, and the Naval men with whom he has been brought in contact, and of whom he cannot speak too highly, passed no competitive examinations; and yet Mr. Lefevre gives it as his opinion that nothing but the introduction of this new fancy for straining the minds of mere children, will save the Navy from being used as a refuge for the fool of the family. The ex-Secretary to the Admiralty has great pleasure in informing his electors that the Board will, in a few months, be able to restore the principle of limited competition. This fact we announced on November 27, and the cause of the pleasure which Mr. Lefevre experienced in telling his constituents of this may, perhaps, be found in our remark then made, that "those in power will thus be enabled, while admitting the principle of competition, to reward an even greater number of political adherents than is now the case." Under this system, the old Naval officer, whose dream it has been to see a son following his footsteps in the Service to which he gave the best years of his life, will have no more chance of procuring a cadetship than the political adherent who has been of service as a committee-man during an election. The class from which our Naval officers will be recruited will be materially changed, and the country ought to be quite sure that that change will be for the better. The certificate of character given to Naval officers by Mr. Lefevre at the beginning of his speech is sufficient to show that the method of nominating those having true interests in the Service has worked well. Under the new system, boys will not stick to the Service as they have done, for probably numbers will be sent to sea just as an experience of the world, and will leave it so soon as the life begins to grow monotonous, there being no "family tie" with the sea Service. What we mean cannot be better shown than by looking at the names of the last batch of cadets that were entered, for among them we find a Michael Culme-Seymour, Philip Colomb, Gordon Douglas, Claude Buckle, Cowper-Coles, Corbett, D'Arcy, Osborne, Fremantle, Petch, Brownrigg, and other names which have been constantly found in the Navy List, and which are met with by readers of Naval history. We regret, indeed, for the sake of the Service, that Mr. Lefevre should have been able to carry his point at the Admiralty, and think that had he given more consideration to the fact that the Naval officer of to-day is worthy of the high praise he has been pleased to bestow, instead of taking as his guide the cadets under training (of whom men would be made, when they once got clear of the schoolboy period of life), he would have done better, and would not have made that sweeping and unjust statement that cadets entered by nomination were "the worst and most stupid" members of a family. Such a remark would certainly call for some apology from the retiring Secretary, had he not so satisfactorily shown in another portion of his speech that the statement could not be borne out by fact, but that it should be accepted more as a claptrap expression, intended to take the fancy and gain the support of the Reading electors.

A well-known German Military writer, whose name we for the moment forget, has laid it down as an axiom that the military institutions of a nation should be suited to the national character and circumstances. Every thoughtful person must admit that this brief sentence is full of common-sense, yet many of our would-be military reformers have gone on quite another tack. They think that because the German Army is wonderfully efficient, and has obtained the most brilliant successes, it behoves all other nations to adopt the German system. It is forgotten that the circumstances of Germany are very different from those of England, and that the conditions being different, the system which answers admirably with the former is quite unsuited for the latter. Germany has no foreign possessions; her Army is, therefore, all employed at home. Localisation is, therefore, feasible. Germany, notwithstanding a recent shadow of popular institutions, has been ever ruled with an iron hand. Moreover, she is always in danger of sudden invasion. Consequently, universal liability to military service is accepted, if not without grumbling, at all events without resistance. Again, there is a Military caste in Germany, a military caste all of whose aspirations are limited to the Army. An officer is an officer, and nothing else. Then, the German officer is, both from deficiency of means and want of applicarion, not addicted to hunting and other outdoor sports. In short, the genius of the German officer is quite different from that of the British officer. It is evident from the above facts that to cram the German military system in its entirety down the throats of English officers is a proceeding which will never answer, and which it is an act of gross folly even to attempt. The English officer never ceases to be a private gentleman, often quits the Army on slight provocation, and then soon merges in the civilian population from which he sprang. He is far more independent of his profession than is the German officer, for the simple reason that he requires when in the Army a far larger addition to his pay than is needed by the German officer. He loses, also, no privileges, as he would in Germany, by quitting the Service. In short, there is no such thing as a Military caste in England. Then, again, as to organisation, it being both impossible and undesirable to impose universal liability to Military service in England, and one-third of the Army being always abroad, the German system cannot be carried out, either with respect to localisation or other matters. In Germany, the War Office has practically the whole male adult population of the country handed over to it, to do as it likes with the raw material. With large colonial requirements, constant little wars, high wages, and voluntary enlistment, the Authorities in Pall Mall find their hands tied at every step. Nevertheless, it is a question whether, as regarded the excellence of the individual merits of the three arms, our Army was not as efficient before 1870 as is the German Army. All that was wanted was a carefully-considered and permanent system of administration. It was the War Office, rather than the Army, which needed reform. Instead, however, of reforming itself, our War Office set to work to destroy everything that was most valuable in the Army,—destroying esprit de corps, giving us boys instead of full-grown men, creating and changing new departments and auxiliary services every day, making periodically puerile changes as regards forms and channels of business and uniform, and engendering distrust and discontent among all ranks. The idea was to imitate the Germans, as we had previously tried to copy the French. It is persistence in the endeavour to carry out this crude and theoretical notion which is disheartening and disgusting all our best officers. The British officer of to-day has, owing to the incapacity of the non-commissioned officer, twice as much regimental detail to do as formerly, consequently he has little time for preparing for the numerous examinations which make his life one constant burden. This is especially the case with the Cavalry, in which branch the officers have necessarily less time to spare than in the Infantry. Yet, instead of allowing them to spend the hours not employed in the stables in the riding-school, at drill, and in looking after their men, in hunting, they are compelled to prepare for examinations. Of course, it is desirable that officers should be well acquainted with what may be termed the accomplishments of their profession, but practical and physical capacity are of far greater importance. Hunting is the best possible training for the work of cavalry in war, and a dragoon with a firm seat, a good hand, and an eye for country, is a more useful man for his special functions than one who, though able to rival a Staff-College officer in book-work, never mounts a horse save when on duty. It is the same with regard to the Infantry, in which the physical and moral qualities are being ruthlessly sacrificed to the modern "fad" for closet-work. Moreover, the best English gentlemen, who would make officers in whom their soldiers would have confidence—the sort of officers to cheer, encourage, and set an example to their humbler comrades, in a march like that from Cabul to Candahar—will not submit to this sort of treatment, and either do not enter, or soon leave the Army. The German system contains much which, mutatis mutandis, might be applied with advantage in our own Army; but any wholesale attempt to introduce that system en bloc will never answer, and is already causing great discontent.

Her Majesty will to-day cross from Portsmouth to Osborne, on board the Royal yacht Osborne.

The last day of the year has been named for the paying-off at Malta of the Téméraire, Fawn, Helicon, Torch, and Cockatrice, by which date the new crews for the three first-named vessels will have arrived at Malta.

Under the names of the flagships of the China and East Indies stations, the Iron Duke and the Euryalus, will be found some account of efforts made by men to save shipmates from drowning. These cases will, we hope, not be allowed to escape the notice of the Admiralty.

The Channel Squadron, under the command of Vice-Admiral Arthur Hood, C.B., left Vigo on Monday for Lisbon, where Christmas will be spent.

Vice-Admiral Robert Coote, C.B., telegraphed his arrival at Shanghai on the 6th inst.

The yacht Pandora, with Mr. W. H. Smith, M.P., on board, arrived at Alexandria on Monday.

Lieutenant the Hon. Walter Stopford, who has this week been appointed to the Euryalus, will undertake the navigating duties of the ship, in place of Lieutenant Hulbert, who was appointed in May, 1879.

Truly the native Princes of India are showing a bright example of liberality in their subscription to the Patriotic Fund, since at a meeting held at Allahabad, under the presidency of the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-West Provinces, the Maharajah of Puttiala subscribed a lakh of rupees (£10,000), and two other rajahs subscribed 50,000 rupees, or £5,000, each. It is rarely we see any contribution in England exceed £500 in an individual case.

Lieutenant Thomas Maxwell will, we believe, be placed in charge of certain ratings about to be sent to the Australian station by merchant vessels, to relieve some of the men serving in the schooners employed in the South Seas. Seeing that the Raleigh has but just arrived in England from a voyage to Australia and back with relieved crews, it seems rather early to be compelled to provide passages in trading vessels for fresh drafts.

In a letter which we published last week from "A Victim of Injustice," on the subject of our remarks on the working of the system of supply of furniture by the Admiralty to officers' houses, the writer raises objections to the fact that the system is of general benefit, and points to himself as a victim, on account of his having furniture of his own, and considers the regulations are harsh and arbitrary. No new regulation can be introduced without acting prejudicially in some individual cases, and the remarks of our correspondent only bear out the argument we used, that it would be most desirable to expand the system of supply to such an extent that in future no officer need encumber himself with furniture, either for cabin, barrack-room, or house.

The new Parliamentary Secretary at the Admiralty, Mr. G. O. Trevelyan, has commenced his duties at the office. As is well known, Mr. Trevelyan holds advanced views as to the disposal of British officers, and has already attacked General officers in a ruthless fashion. The Navy should, therefore, not be surprised if some new ideas on the question of compulsory retirement result from the importation of Mr. Trevelyan into Whitehall.

Captain Edye's successor as Senior Officer at Gibraltar, will, we believe, be Captain the Hon. Edmund Fremantle, C.B., and the command of the Invincible will be taken up by Captain FitzRoy.

Vice-Admiral Sir L. M'Clintock was in the Northampton, at Bermuda, up to November 27, and would sail, December 27, for a ten weeks' cruise in the West Indies. He intended to arrive at Antigua, January 2, leaving January 6; at Barbadoes, January 20, leaving January 26; at Trinidad, January 28, leaving February 1, calling at Tobago; at Grenada, February 2, leaving February 5; at Port Royal (Jamaica), February 20, leaving February 28; arriving at Bermuda, March 7. Letters should now be addressed West Indies, instead of Bermuda.

The Russian Squadron was expected at Yokohama about November 15, and the Japanese have made preparations for the reception of the Admiral.

The Council of the Royal Naval School, at a meeting held on the 15th inst., unanimously awarded the "Yarborough" Naval Scholarship to M. J. C. Soady, now in the Britannia who won the Admiralty cadetship last June. The cadet who is thus distinguished is son of the gallant Rear-Admiral J. C. Soady, who was formerly a pupil at the School.

Commodore Richards appears to have shortened his intended cruise on the West Coast division of his station, and has returned to Simon's Bay, whence he this week telegraphed his intention of remaining. The Brass River difficulty having been overcome, the Commodore doubtless thinks that affairs at the Cape are far more important, and that his presence might be of service there.

Vice-Admiral Coote, C.B., has we hear arranged for a muster of the ships under his command to take place at Hong Kong during this month. It is stated that the Iron Duke will have in company the Modeste, Encounter, Comus, Curaçoa, Foxhound, and Pegasus.

Lieutenant Graham Bower, R.N., has we hear, been offered the appointment of secretary by Sir Hercules Robinson, the newly-appointed Governor at the Cape of Good Hope. We hope their Lordships will allow this officer to accept the office.

We are gratified to learn that the thanks of her Majesty's Government have been conveyed to Vice-Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B., for the manner in which he performed his difficult duties in connection with the International Squadron. Not alone have the officers of the Royal Navy borne tribute to the ability shown by their chief, but the officers of the foreign ships have also expressed their admiration at the extreme tact with which any of those little difficulties inseparable from such a mixture of nationalities were handled, and the courtesy with which they were invariably treated.

An Admiralty Circular containing provisions for ensuring economical steaming in her Majesty's Navy will shortly be issued to the fleet.

We are glad to learn that the Committee of Lloyd's have voted the silver medal of the Corporation to the executors of the late Lieutenant Heyland, of the Minotaur, as they would have done to that officer had he lived, and the bronze medal of the Corporation to Arthur Triggs, torpedo-instructor of the ship, for their efforts to save life at sea.

We are glad to hear that the statement made by a contemporary that the Admiralty had declined to recommend a boatman of the Coastguard, named Evans, for the Humane Society's medal for his gallantry in saving life from shipwreck, is incorrect. We are assured that their Lordships are as ready to reward the gallantry of the Coastguard as of the Service afloat, and that Evans will be brought to the notice both of the Humane Society and of the Shipwrecked Mariners' Society.

Lieutenant Arthur Barrow, senior staff officer of the Excellent, will, we understand, shortly proceed to the Armstrong factory at Elswick, to study the application of hydraulic machinery to the working of guns.

Mr. Brassey has always been an ardent lover of things nautical, and if he had but a more important post at the Admiralty than that of Civil Lord, the Service might expect something really good to come out of his connection with the Navy. He has already told the Naval Volunteers what he would do for them, if he could; and now, in a more recent speech, he has been saying how he would like to see two Flying Squadrons, of six ships each, and to have seagoing tenders attached to each flagship at the Home ports, and the Naval Barracks at Sheerness. The Service will readily admit that his wishes, if carried out, would add to the efficiency of the Service. Mr. Brassey can see that from his official position, but he has not the power to force these improvements upon his colleagues. This being so, the matter resolves itself into the solid fact that these improvements are not carried out because they would cost money, and in order to keep the Navy Estimates down to a low figure, these ideas for adding to the efficiency of the Fleet are quietly set aside. There is nothing to prevent the desire of Mr. Brassey to see the Naval Volunteers aided by a capitation grant, to see detached squadrons formed for the training of our young seamen, and to have tenders attached to the harbour ships, but that one obstacle—the cost. All are ready to admit that these measures would add to the efficiency of the Fleet and her reserves, but the Admiralty Board will not take the necessary steps, as it is its desire to keep down the Navy Estimates, and to show a cheap Navy to the public, if possible.

The time is now approaching for their Lordships to decide whom they will advance to post-rank when the annual promotions are made. We have before pointed out that there is too often a tendency to look rather far down the lists in making these selections, and thus deserving officers are passed over until they add to the failing want of interest the offence of advancing years. Thus it happens that the neglect which they first suffer uncomplainingly and in hope that they will have a better chance next time, culminates in their being thanklessly shelved. Many of those whose services should have entitled them to promotion to the list of Captains have been rewarded only with a Coastguard division, which, in the case of seniors on the Commanders' List, means non-promotion. But there are others still in command of ships, some of them on foreign service, who have been persistently passed over, although their fitness for command is plainly indicated by their present employment. The claims of these will, we hope, be looked into this year, that the Board may save itself from the charge of injustice in passing over tried and trusted officers. If, too, their Lordships take into consideration war services and hard work, the claims of Commander Stokes appear to stand forward in an irresistible manner. The command he now holds has been no easy berth, given as a reward for length of service and as a sop for non-promotion. On the contrary, such a command as that of the Tyne will be acknowledged to be good service at sea, and the manner in which she has fulfilled her duties under her present commander has been such as to call for approval. This is the third command held by that officer, and in all of them he has done well, and has received the approval of her Majesty's Government and the thanks of more than one foreign Power for services performed. In point of war services, too, Commander Stokes is at least equal to any who stand with him on the List, and we hope that the claims of this officer may not be overlooked when the selections are made at the Admiralty. There is certainly no need to go below the years 1869 and 1870 in selecting the Captains for the year 1880, and the Commanders can be found among the Lieutenants of 1866 and 1867, for among the names to be found on those Lists there are many good officers who could be chosen.

The Russian Government has decided upon the construction of two more cruisers of the Minin type, which is the flagship in the Pacific. The General Admiral is on its way to the Mediterranean, and the Duke of Edinburgh is following it, both eventually being under orders to join Lesovsky's squadron in Chinese waters. One of the two cruisers has already been commenced at the Galerni Dockyard, St. Petersburg. Length, 295 ft.; breadth, 52 ft.; displacement, 5,754 tons; engines, 7,000 indicated horse-power; speed, 15 knots; armour, 7 in. thick; and armament, four 8-in. guns, two 6-in., four 9-pounders, and six Hotchkiss cannon. The steel for the hull is being prepared at the Oboukhoff and Ijor Government Works. The armour-plates will be manufactured in England, and the engines by the Baltic Iron Works, on the Neva. The steel will cost 2,264,890 roubles, or, counting eight roubles to the £1 sterling, £283,112. The engines, at the rate of 165 roubles per indicated horse-power, will cost 1,155,000 roubles, or £144,375. The auxiliary mechanism will involve an outlay of 55,000 roubles more; the armour-plating, 225,000 roubles. The vessel will thus cost £460,000, exclusive of fittings and artillery. It will be considerably larger than the Minin, the latter being only of 5,700 tons displacement, while the new vessel will be of 7,000 tons. It will be completed in 1883. The second vessel will be built by the Baltic Iron Works, and will be finished a year later. Both vessels will be destined chiefly for operations against merchant shipping. They will be fitted with the latest improvements in torpedo warfare.

Whilst the Russian cruiser Europe was on her way from Vladivostock to Nagasaki with Admiral Lesovsky, at 11 o'clock at night, in the midst of calm weather, a violent squall struck the vessel, splitting several sails. The wind continued blowing furiously, and during a lull at 4 o'clock, while Admiral Lesovsky was proceeding along the deck, a heavy sea swept over the vessel and bore him off his legs. After washing him along the deck some distance, it dashed him against the mainmast. The sailors hurried to his assistance, and found him trying in vain to rise, his leg being broken above the right knee. After he was taken to the captain's cabin, the storm burst upon the vessel with renewed fury, driving her at more than 14 knots an hour. The Europe had three boats carried away, and her deck-house smashed to pieces. Late telegrams from Nagasaki report the Admiral as doing well.

The French despatch-boat Hirondelle, which was one of the International Squadron, distinguished herself some time since by services rendered to a Spanish vessel. The circumstances having been brought to the notice of the King of Spain, he has awarded the Silver Cross of Naval Merit to eight of the men, and the thanks of the Government have been conveyed to the officers.

The Arsenal at Foochow has turned out another composite gunboat with ram bow, named the Teng-King. The following are the dimensions of the vessel:—Length between perpendiculars, 64·00 metres; beam at water line, 9·40 metres; depth of hold, 5·70 metres; draught of water (ordinary), 3·18 metres. This vessel will have compound engines, now being completed at the arsenal, of 750 indicated horse-power. The armament will consist of one 7-in. Armstrong, one 6-in. gun, and three 40-pounders, one placed as a bow-chaser, and the other two as broadside guns.

According to letters received from Hong Kong, much adverse comment has been expended upon the conduct of Commander Adolphus St. Clair, of the Fly, who, it is alleged, after receiving intelligence of the missing British ship Cilurnum to the effect that she had been spoken at sea in a disabled condition under jurymasts, allowed three days to elapse before he sailed to look for her. In the meantime, Admiral Clitz, the American flag-officer at Yokohama, offered one of his vessels for the service, which was declined. Some particulars of this case, and the cause of the Fly not putting to sea, will be found under the name of that ship in another column, and it will also be seen that the paper which so severely dealt with the good name of Commander St. Clair, has since seen fit to modify its views, and to admit that the fault does not lie with the Commander, but with his having an inefficient ship under his command. In a later issue of the journal in question, it is remarked that:—

> "If our strictures upon the inactivity of H.B.M.'s gunboat Fly, in not proceeding to the assistance of the dismasted vessel Cilurnum, spoken by the Eme on the 8th inst., have been deemed too severe, we are sorry. Had we known that the steam-power of the Fly is scarcely sufficient to enable her to keep headway against a strong north-east monsoon, and that her towing power with a ship of 1,000 tons would be limited to some mile or two an hour in still water, we should probably have modified the comments we felt justified in making on Saturday. It is as unnecessary now, as it has hitherto been, to explain that in all allusions to the English Fleet in these waters, we have never intended the slightest reflection upon officers or men, whose courage is now, as it always has been, beyond reproach. That the Fly has not gone to seek the Cilurnum is due to her misfortune, not her fault, and we can sympathise with her commander and officers that the weakness and incapacity of the vessel as a steamer prevent her from proceeding to the assistance of a dismantled British merchant ship. Perhaps, when the matter is sifted, the strictures made by some of our China contemporaries, as well as ourselves, upon the condition of the British Fleet in China waters, will seem more fully justified as passing events prove the unfitness of the vessels for any but show purposes."

It is humiliating to find a Japanese paper thus speaking of the Royal Navy, and perhaps the Admiralty will now see that it is time to find a relief for the Fly, which left England in 1874, and has worn out her boilers on the station.

We are informed that Messrs. J. P. Mackinnon (late 25th King's Own Borderers, formerly 72nd Highlanders) and Sydney Shadbolt (of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law), joint authors of The South-African Campaign, 1879, are preparing an exhaustive work on the Afghan campaigns, 1878, 1879, and 1880, which is to be dedicated, by permission, to Lieutenant-General Sir Frederick Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., and published by Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. In addition to a history of the war, the work will include photographs and biographies of all the officers who lost their lives therein, summaries of the movements of every regiment which was engaged, and brief records of the individual services in Afghanistan of every officer who was employed there. Officers who served are invited to communicate with Mr. Sydney H. Shadbolt, Beechcroft, Chislehurst.

We learn by private advices from the Cape, that the only movement of Imperial troops of any importance which has been carried out in consequence of the present difficulty in Basutoland, has been the dispatch of two companies of the 3rd Battalion 60th Rifles, five officers and about 190 men, from Pietermaritzburg, to be encamped on the southern frontier of Natal, as a corps of observation. Two other companies were already at Harding, on the same frontier, and one at Fort Harrison, St. John's River; headquarters and three companies remaining at Pietermaritzburg, with a subaltern's detachment at Durban.

If the figures given by Lord Enfield at the distribution of prizes to the North Middlesex Rifles are correct, the remarkable advances in the enrolled strength of the Volunteer Force, noted uninterruptedly since 1874, have not received the check which the limit of age to fifty, and the changes brought about by consolidation and renumbering were expected in some quarters to produce. Lord Enfield only gave the total number of enrolled and efficients, and we must, therefore, wait for the complete returns before attempting a complete comparison with previous statistics. Briefly, the numbers on the rolls were larger in the twenty-first year than on any previous occasion, having risen from 206,250 to 206,410, or an increase of 160. The value of the Force, however, must not be reckoned by its enrolled so much as by its efficient strength, and here, for the first time during the last six years, a falling-off has to be recorded, which is much to be regretted. The efficients are 196,901, against 197,485. The non-efficients are thus 9,509, as compared with 8,765. Now that the new Regulations have come into force, by which the number of drills for recruits of all arms are practically doubled, their working will be watched with some anxiety.

It has been found necessary to increase the accommodation at the Recruit Depôt of the Brigade of Guards at Caterham, and a sum of £5,000 is being expended in providing extra buildings.

The case of "Chilcott v. Alexander," which on appeal was this week sent down for a new trial, is one of great interest to fathers in general. The facts of the case are briefly these. Colonel F. Alexander, of the Bengal Staff Corps, in 1877, placed his son, now a second-lieutenant in the 10th Regiment, at Mr. Arnold's establishment at Kingston, with a view to his preparing for the Army. The young gentleman, who appears to be of a weak and extravagant disposition, during the fourteen months of his stay at Mr. Arnold's, ran up a bill with a tradesman named Chilcott to the extent of £76 10s. This bill included five suits of cloths, two lounging suits, nineteen scarves, and twenty-nine pairs of gloves, an amount of things which Chilcott calmly stated that he did not consider excessive, though we are not aware that his disinterested opinion on such a subject is worth much. Colonel Alexander, whose total income was only £1,200 a year, out of which he paid Mr. Arnold for, we suppose, a reasonable amount of supervision, as well as teaching, never authorised his son to run into debt, and provided him with an ample outfit, declined, as most father's would, to pay this large bill; but not wishing, as he said, that his son should be clothed for nothing, paid £50 into the County Court, before which he was summoned. He swore to the facts mentioned above. His son admitted that he had obtained the articles more for the sake of having new clothes, than because he specially wanted them. He swore also that the goods had been pressed upon him by Chilcott. This, Chilcott positively denied, and we leave it to our readers to decide who is the most worthy of belief. The end of it was that the jury decided that Chilcott—whom, we suppose, they considered to have done no more than any other "pushing tradesman"—was entitled to the whole amount claimed. The Judge disapproved of the verdict, and permitted an appeal, which resulted, as we have said, in an order for a new trial, Mr. Baron Pollock observing that there had been a miscarriage of justice. Whatever may be the ultimate decision, we feel sure that Colonel Alexander will have the sympathy of all, save those directly interested in tempting weak-minded youths to plunge their fathers into pecuniary difficulties. The above shows that we have been quite justified in the remarks we have frequently made on the want of supervision exercised over their pupils, by the swarm of crammers into whose hands almost all candidates for Government appointments now fall. We should like to know how it was that Mr. Alexander could, during fourteen months, pursue such a career of silly, reckless extravagance as above disclosed, without Mr. Arnold's knowledge. If he was not aware of what was going on, he ought to have been.

We regret to have again to call attention to the fact that in our Army it is generally the most persevering applicants, instead of the most meritorious officers, to whom appointments are given. Ths Authorities know perfectly well who are the best men, and these should be given the prizes without compelling them to solicit. An appointment is, in theory, at all events, given in the interests of the Service, not because it will suit Captain A., Major B., or Colonel C. If it is a good appointment it may be assumed that any one will be glad to get it. It is, therefore, as unnecessary as it unbecoming to rarely give save to those who ask. The result of the present system is that appointments, as a rule, fall to the lot only of those who live or are quartered in or near London, and can, consequently, haunt the War Office. Besides, by bestowing patronage in this fashion, suspicions of favouritism are not unnaturally excited, and modest merit is overlooked.

A correspondent points out that there are two pieces of information omitted from the new official Army List. One is the omission of a column giving time on half-pay in the gradation lists, which would be very useful, as showing the total service actually done by each officer; the other consists in the omission of any mark to show whether the officer obtained his first commission from the Royal Military College, Sandhurst.

The system of antedating the first commissions of officers according to the class of certificate they obtained at Sandhurst or the garrison schools of instruction, inaugurated by Lord Cardwell, but now happily abolished, was, in the opinion of many officers, a most faulty and unfair one. By it officers were superseded by their juniors who came into the Service several months after them, and a deal of unpleasantness and ill-feeling was thereby caused; but if the ill-effects of the system ended there, we should not again rake up the subject. We desire, however, to draw attention to the future, when the rottenness of the antedating regulations will be even more apparent. We refer to the time when those officers who obtained their sub-lieutenancies under the above system will be completing their twenty years' service. We will quote an instance of what may very possibly occur in several regiments, say, in 1891. A, the senior captain of his regiment, obtained his first commission at the age of twenty on October 31, 1871, having passed through Sandhurst in the first-class the same year, he will consequently be retired on October 31, 1891. B, the second captain of the same regiment, also obtained his first commission on October, 31, 1871, but in consequence of having only passed through Sandhurst in the third-class, he is not liable to retirement till October, 31, 1893. Now, let us suppose, for the sake of argument, that the majority of this regiment will fall vacant in 1892. By this time, A, whose educational attainments are superior to B's, will be on the shelf, while the latter will remain, and will, in due time, barring accidents, succeed to the command. This is the effect, then, of one of Lord Cardwell's fads.

We learn from Canada that in order to provide facilities for officers of the Local Militia who have been appointed "provisionally" to companies of Infantry to obtain certificates of qualification, required by the Regulations and Orders for the Militia, 1879, arrangements have been made for the opening of three schools of instruction on the 5th prox., viz., one at Toronto for the Province of Ontario, one at Montreal for the Province of Quebec, and one at Halifax, Province of Nova Scotia, for the Maritime Provinces, to be maintained during a period of two months, provided enough officers come forward for instruction. The commandants and adjutants will be supplied from the district staff, and two non-commissioned officers for each school will be detailed to act as drill-serjeants and instructors. Officers who join the schools will not be required to remain longer than necessary to enable them to pass the required examination. The certificates to be granted will be "second-class." The number of officers who may be admitted for instruction in each school is not to exceed fifty; of these twenty may be residents within the city at which the school is established, and thirty from corps whose head-quarters are distant more than two miles from such city. Officers who join for a course of instruction, if residing in the city where the school is maintained or within two miles thereof, will receive no personal allowances during the period they are under instruction. Those residing more than two miles distant from the city will receive, on obtaining a "second-class" certificate, an allowance at the rate of 75 cents. per diem, for the days actually present under instruction, and, in addition, an allowance at the rate of 3 cents. per mile, in lieu of transport, for one journey going to, and the same amount for one journey returning from the school. Those who desire to join either school should make application through the ordinary channel to the brigade-major of the military district within which the school is maintained.

The German Field Ambulance has, in accordance with the experiences made during the Franco-German war, undergone several essential improvements. To each mobilised Army Corps will be now attached three sanitary detachments, of which each will consist of seven surgeons, one dispenser, sixteen hospital assistants, and an ambulance company of thirty sick-bearers, and be accompanied by three wheeled ambulances and six carriages for the badly wounded. Each of the two divisions of an army corps will have a sanitary detachment, while the third will be attached to the Staff of the army corps. There will be twelve field hospitals for each army corps, each capable of receiving 200 wounded. The field hospitals will accompany the troops when engaged, and after the engagement do service in the field hospitals, until the arrival of the hospital reserve personnel and the hospital reserve depôt attached to each army corps. A so-called evacuation commission is intended to convey the sick and wounded gradually from the étappe hospitals to the permanent reserve and provincial hospitals at home. An essential improvement of the field ambulance system has likewise been effected, after the last war, by the reform of the field intendance, the military telegraph and field post departments, as well as by the reorganisation of the ambulance corps.

The German Government intends the construction of a direct railway from Berlin over Schwerin and Lübeck to Kiel, and has entered for this purpose into negotiation with the Mecklenburg Government, with a view of causing the necessary investigations in that country. The railway will be simply a strategical one, as by its means the dockyard of Kiel, the Island of Alsen, and the works on the Düppel heights will receive direct railway communication with Berlin shorter by 45 miles than the existing lines over Hamburg.

A rather strange occurrence was recently reported from Mayence. Two gentlemen were observed minutely inspecting all points of any strategical importance. Map in hand they visited the whole country around the fortifications, and as they appeared in the greatest haste, it was evident their object was not mere amusement. Their names were found to be Miribel and Pistor, and as the French Army contains a General Miribel and a captain of Artillery of the name of Pistor, both officers of great ability, it is generally thought that the travellers are identical with the two officers. The belief is strengthened by the fact that the two officers named seized every opportunity to be present at all the military manœuvres during the last seven or eight years in the western German provinces.

By the erection, now proceeding, of the eleventh fort—the fourteenth, if we include the works on the right bank of the Rhine—the keystone, so to say, of the chain of forts surrounding Strasburg, at a distance of from 6,000 to 7,000 metres, will be inserted. This fort, which was at first not projected, and which is being very rapidly completed, has been located on the Mundolsheimer Kopf, a precipitous rise between the older forts Roon and Kronprinz, but pushed forward about 500 metres. This fort is the highest and lies at the greatest distance from the city, and has been constructed for the reception of the strongest garrison of all the works. Only building material of the very best class is used for this fort. In the city itself, the erection of a large infantry barracks, to take the place of the Sinkmatt Kaserne, found insufficient, will shortly be proceeded with. The site for the new barracks is between the Steinthor and Schiltigheimerthor, on ground formerly occupied by the old fortifications, and the levelling works have already been given in contract. With the fall of the Sinkmatt Kaserne disappears a silent witness of the miserable coup of October 30, 1836. In the court of this barracks it was that the then pretender Louis Napoleon was arrested by a resolute sub-officer. Turning to the other extreme end of the German Empire, it may be added that it is intended to push in three smaller works between the girdle of forts surrounding Königsberg, in Eastern Prussia; they will be located in the north-west front. All the forts of this now important place-of-arms are completed so far that, in case of an impending armament, they may be put at once into a state of defence.

It may be remembered that a Committee was assembled some time ago at the War Office to inquire into the mode of dealing with the funds arising from unclaimed and unissued effects of deceased soldiers. The Committee, after full deliberation, decided that the sum which has accrued from unclaimed effects was sufficient to create and maintain a compassionate or other fund for the benefit of relations of soldiers dying on service. They, therefore, recommended that steps should be taken to invest a portion of the money in the hands of the War Office in the purchase of £12,000 Stock, and that further purchases of Stock should be made from time to time with the interest of the sum invested, and with further residues as they may occur, so that at no time a sum exceeding £1,000 shall remain in the hands of the War Office to meet claims that may arise. This proposal has been acted upon. Some seem to be entirely ignorant of the fact that this Committee ever reported, indeed that it ever sat at all, and the articles and letters which are constantly appearing are, therefore, quite uncalled for.

We understand that General Sherman, in his annual report to the Secretary of War, recommends that the effective strength of the standing Army of the United States be increased to 25,000 men. That is now the nominal strength, but deducting the number detailed as clerks, detached service, sick, &c., the actual working number does not exceed 20,000 men. There are eleven General officers, 555 officers, and 1,286 men of the Staff, and the combatant force is composed of ten regiments of cavalry, five of artillery, and twenty-five of infantry. General Sherman says that "under the proviso 'limit' 25,000 enlisted men, the companies are too small for proper discipline or economical service, and I am convinced that the proposed increase of enlisted men will double the efficiency of the Army, and hardly be felt in the annual expenditures." Twenty-five thousand men is certainly not a large standing Army for a country of the extent and population of the United States, especially with Indian troubles almost constantly cropping up, but it is abundantly strong for a nation devoted to the arts of peace, and whose relations with other Powers cannot easily be disturbed.

We learn from Hong Kong that Major-General Donovan, commanding at that station, recently held a review of Japanese troops, 5,000 of all arms, at Tokio, and expressed a favourable opinion of them.

The French Radicals are now making an attempt to saddle General de Cissey with a portion of the responsibility of the capitulation of Metz, for which ex-Marshal Bazaine has suffered and is suffering. The ground for this new attack is that Marshal Bazaine sent the General to the German head-quarters, to ask what conditions would be accepted. General de Cissey was, by the way, selected for this painful duty, in consequence, as an official report mentions, of "his brilliant conduct during the campaign of 1870, which would insure him a distinguished reception on the part of the enemy." General de Cissey was unable to procure other terms than those imposed on the army at Sedan, and all he had to do was to hand the protocol prepared by General Stiehle to Marshal Bazaine. General de Cissey protested against the terms of the capitulation, and there his share in the military drama ceased. It was General Jarras, in his capacity of Chief of the Staff, who drew out the terms of the capitulation, after an interview with General Stiehle, during which he was informed that no concessions could be made, everything having been decided by the King.

According to the Russian Herald, the official list of Generals and Staff Officers of the Russian Army includes, at present, 1,478 Generals, of whom 16 are foreigners. For the pay of these officers, a yearly sum of over six million roubles (£900,000) is required, without reckoning allowances for quarters, and the value of quarters provided by the Government. The amount of those allowances may be calculated from the single fact that a major-general draws, in St. Petersburg, 1,000 roubles, a lieutenant-general 1,500 roubles. Lands are, besides, allotted to the Generals, the income derived from which is, together, about 765,000 roubles (£115,000). There are in the Russian Army 105 full Generals (of whom 75 are adjutant-generals), 384 lieutenant-generals (39 adjutant-generals, and one lieutenant-general of the suite of his Majesty the Czar), and 974 major-generals (of whom 106 belong to the suite of his Majesty). The pay, besides allowances, of a full General is, on the average, 11,000 roubles (£1,650), a lieutenant-general 5,500 roubles (£825), and a major-general 3,200 roubles (£480).

H.R.H. the Duke of Cambridge has kindly consented to be patron of the scheme for providing coffee-taverns for the Army and Auxiliary Forces in our various camps and garrisons.

The body of Brigdr.-Gen. H. F. Brooke, half-pay, late 109th Foot, who was killed before Candahar on August 16 last, arrived at Portsmouth on Saturday in H.M.S. Serapis. On the starboard side of the Serapis a mortuary had been erected, and within this the body was deposited. On the arrival of the ship at Portsmouth the corpse, which had been in the charge of Lieut. Fox, Royal Artillery, was formally handed over to the relatives of the deceased, and was placed on the railway for conveyance to Dublin. A detachment of the 108th Regiment, with reversed arms, was on the jetty during the disembarkation of the body. The body was interred on Tuesday in the family vault at Colebrooke. The coffin was carried by men of the 94th Regt., under the command of Capt. Lionel Brooke, son of the deceased. A telegram was received from Her Majesty expressing sympathy with Lady Arabella and Mrs. Brooke.

Preliminary to the official trial which is to take place shortly, two light charges were fired on Monday in front of the proof butts from the 43-ton breech-loading gun just constructed at Woolwich. In the first round the charge consisted of 200 lb. of powder, and an elongated projectile weighing 714 lb. In the second round the projectile remained the same, but the charge of powder was increased to 250 lb. The proposed weight of powder for the battering charge is 285 lb. The result of the preliminary trial was in every sense satisfactory. The gun is built up in the same manner as the Woolwich muzzle-loaders, having a central tube of steel, on which are shrunk massive coils of wrought iron. The breech-loading arrangement consists of a screw-plug working in the axis of the gun, portions of the screw-thread being cut away, as in the breech-loaders recently constructed by Sir W. Armstrong. Much interest attaches to the trial of the Woolwich gun, as preparing the way for the introduction of heavy breech-loaders into the British Service.

OUR FIELD ARTILLERY.—II.

Recent developments of tactics, caused by the increased power of firearms, large and small, should be made the subject of careful study, prior to deciding on a new Field-Artillery armament. Of the Artilleries of the Great Powers, ours was the last, the French, which bought experience so dearly, excepted, which recognised the necessity under present conditions for keeping the ammunition waggons well away from the firing line when in action. It did, however, recognise it, and thanks to Colonel Maxwell and Captain Hime, its evident corollary, the provision of additional seats on the gun-carriage, thus enabling those guns the detachments of which are not mounted to have a few men at hand to work them, when distant from the waggons. As five seats are as many as can be provided, the weight of that number of men, or such a number less than five as are necessary to make up a sufficient detachment to work a gun, must be allowed for, in deciding on the weight in material only that we may put behind the gun teams. With the provision of these seats, adaptation to the new order of things in our Service ceased. In the old smoothbore days, when the waggons accompanied the guns, nine men were at hand to work the piece, and the normal drill was arranged for a detachment of that strength. We drill with nine men now, of whom eight are taught to divide the work at the gun between them; while in action, we provide that six men only shall be with the piece in the foot batteries, and seven in the Horse Artillery. (We have used the term "foot" to describe those batteries which are not intended to accompany Cavalry, as the usual term "field," being used in a general as well as a particular sense, is confusing.) It does seem extraordinary that we should continue to drill with eight men on the gun, when in action that number would seldom be forthcoming. But even were all available, it would be unadvisable to use them in the first line. If one thing more than another ought to be clear to gunners after recent warfare, it is that as few men and horses as can efficiently work the guns should be brought into the front line, the remaining strength of the battery being kept in hand to feed the gun detachments, as an infantry battalion feeds its firing line. Years ago, our Infantry officers recognised the new conditions; why have not the more highly-educated gunners done so? Why are they behind the artilleries of the Continent? The question here naturally arises,—how many men constitute an efficient detachment? Let us look abroad to find the answer. The Italian and Austrian light guns are worked by five men, the Austrian heavy gun and both the German guns by six. Surely, then, six men are sufficient for a light field-gun. Six are all we provide for our heavy field-guns, why, then, not make the normal detachment six and drill with it; or, should the heavy gun require seven, then arrange that that number shall be forthcoming in action? We condemn the non-recognition of the necessity for not bringing a single man under fire who is not absolutely wanted; we condemn a drill which teaches officers to bring under fire, when they can, more than are required; we condemn a drill which teaches eight men to divide the work on a gun between them, when in action but six or seven are, as a rule, available. Let us now consider how the detachments should be brought up with the guns. In the foot batteries this is simple. Everywhere, four or five men are seated on the gun-carriage, the commander of the piece riding with it, the horse of the latter, on the Continent, being held by a driver (the centre driver of a team of six horses); in our Service, with our usual extravagance, we provide a mounted horseholder. For a light foot battery, then, it appears that five men seated on the carriage, as at present, with the mounted non-commissioned officer, whose horse should be held by the centre driver, would be an efficient arrangement, giving a detachment of six; should seven men be deemed necessary for the heavy gun, then, in addition to our present arrangement, let us provide a third mounted man, who can hold the horses of the other two. There are three systems of carrying horse-artillery detachments worthy of notice. In Germany, all six men who work the gun ride, and two other riders hold each three horses. There is also a mounted supernumerary, who falls out at drill, and who, if a gun came into action with a full detachment, would keep out of fire; he is practically a first reserve. Two of the Austrian detachment of five men are driven, the other three ride, the riding horses being held by a fourth mounted man. We provide a detachment of seven, two seated on the gun, five riding, and there are three horseholders, two of whom hold two horses each, the third but one. Of the three systems, the worst arranged is the British, for, as compared with the German, we lose power by carrying two men on the gun; and instead of, as in Austria, reaping the advantages by saving men and horses, we actually have one more horseholder under fire. Exclusive of the supernumerary, the Germans bring into the front line per gun eight men and eight riding horses, the Austrians six men and five horses; and we bring, with an equipment necessarily less heavy than the German, ten men and eight horses. By simply reducing the detachment from seven to six, a number certainly sufficient for a horse-artillery gun, we can save two men and two horses from unnecessary danger; and as the horseholders would have but two horses each to manage, a single casualty among the horses would render a holder available for the gun, for there is no more reason, with our more highly-trained men, why with us one man should not hold three horses and a driver the fourth, than with Germans and Austrians. We prefer the former arrangement to start with, as it practically gives us the German supernumerary. We decidedly prefer to carry two men on the gun, because but little increase of weight in material may be allowed if all ride, as, when difficult ground has to be traversed, seated men can dismount in the former case and none in the latter. It does not follow from this that to seat four men would be a good course, for the wish to reduce the weight by so much would rarely occur. Again, there are drivers' duties to be done on a gun, which a couple of men not bothered with horses can do with greater facility than riders, such as putting on the drag-shoe, freeing a fallen or disabled horse, &c.; for such work two are ample, four, as a rule, superfluous. Lastly, in coming into action, two men seated on the carriage can jump down and unlimber much more readily than can riders who have to hand their horses to the holders; for this work two men are ample. On this head we agree to retain our present arrangement, but put forward most strongly that a saving in horses brought into the front line is a natural result of the retention. Horse artillery, being intended to accompany cavalry, must necessarily be able to mount on the march, either on the vehicles or on horses, every man in a battery. With foot artillery this is not necessary, for accompanying infantry on the march, the detachments can dismount, especially as, unlike the infantry, their kits are carried for them, and of course they have no rifles or ammunition on their persons. This admits of the weight in material being greater, and as it is greater, the difficulty of passing broken ground in action increases; hence we conclude that the power of a foot-battery gun cannot be largely increased by going to the expense of providing horses for the detachment, especially as these guns will move in action less often and for shorter distances than a horse gun, and we know that for short distances a horse can exercise much more power than he can exert continuously. We do not mean to say that the weight of the men carried is a factor to be neglected, but that the power of a foot-battery gun can by no means be increased largely by mounting the detachment, the weight of whom, if seated, acts when removed as a safety-valve when crossing difficult ground, the necessity for which increases with the weight of material. Besides, it is not only the first expense of the horses that has to be considered, but casualties among them have to be made good, or efficiency decreases; in any case, additional horses means additional horseholders, and increases the strain on the supply departments. We further believe it advisable to have, as at present, both light and heavy foot batteries, in addition to horse artillery; in this we agree with every Great Power, Germany excepted. The great advantage of having but one nature of foot artillery is, that all the guns, having equal power, can work together efficiently to fulfil the same object. But since the Germans adopted their present equipment, our knowledge of the conditions of burning powder has vastly increased. It is now perfectly possible to have two guns firing different projectiles with the same range and fuze tables without lessening the efficiency of either the light or the heavy one. This we will demonstrate on a future occasion. Again, there is one item in which we differ from other Powers,—that is, while the number of our guns are fewer, we have more money to horse them. This enables us to have our heavy gun for heavy work, drawn by eight horses, as is the case at present. Foreign Powers, for economical reasons, are limited to six draught horses per gun. As we can, therefore, have with advantage a really heavy yet mobile gun, all the more necessity for a lighter supplement, for if all were heavy, the transport of the heavier ammunition would largely increase the impedimenta of an army. Our recommendations, therefore, are that we should continue to have, besides Horse Artillery, both light and heavy foot batteries, the two former drawn by six horses per gun, and the latter by eight; that the weight drawn by these teams should be arranged with a view to the carriage of two men in the Horse Artillery and five men in the Field Artillery. We recommend, however, reducing the Horse Artillery detachment which rides with the piece by two men and two horses, giving still six men to work the gun; and, further, that instead of bringing a horseholder under fire in the foot batteries, it is better that the non-commissioned officer's horse should be held by a driver, as in the case abroad, unless it be deemed that seven men are required for the heavy gun, in which case a third mounted man should be provided. Lastly, it is evident that the sooner the normal drill is arranged to agree with what is normally the case in action, the better will our men do their work, and the less the chance of bad handling on the part of the officers.

THE BRITISH MILITIA.—No. II.

We now come to consider the mode of recruiting. Both for the Army and the Militia, this is conducted under the superintendence of the officers commanding Sub-Districts. The primary military examiners of recruits are Militia adjutants, staff officers of pensioners, and acting adjutants of Brigade Depôts. The primary medical examiners are, where no Army surgeon is available, Militia surgeons, or other private medical practitioners specially appointed for that duty. All Army recruits must be, before being finally passed into the Service, medically examined by an Army surgeon; after this final medical examination, they go before officers commanding sub-districts for military approval. Militia recruits, after passing the primary medical examination, unless the adjutant of their corps happens to be on the spot, undergo no further test of fitness for the Service until they appear to undergo primary drill. If a Militia recruit, on joining (as above), is considered medically unfit, he can be rejected by the Militia surgeon. All Militia recruits must be finally approved as soon as possible by either the colonel of the regiment or the officer commanding the sub-district, after commencement of preliminary drill. As regards the final approval of Army recruits, it should be stated that recruits for the Brigade of Guards, after passing the primary medical and military inspection, are sent direct to head-quarters, and do not go before officers commanding sub-districts. The recruiters are non-commissioned officers of the Army, members of the Permanent Staff of Militia and Pensioners. Recruits are attested as soon as they have passed the primary medical examination. Under exceptional circumstances, they may, however, be attested first. A civilian medical practitioner appointed to examine recruits receives the under-mentioned fees:—For every recruit primarily rejected, 2s. 6d.; for every recruit finally approved, 4s.; for every recruit (Militia) approved, 2s. 6d. No fee is allowed for an Army recruit passed primarily, but rejected by the approving medical officer. Approximately, we believe, out of every 10 recruits, one is rejected at the primary examination, and two by the approving medical officer. The object of the primary medical examination is to save the public the pay, allowances, and conveyance from out-stations to sub-district head-quarters of those recruits who are medically unfit for the Service. The delay caused by this primary medical examination may, however, be valued monetarily at one day's pay and allowances per head. The cost of conveyance does not average more than half-a-crown per head. The cost to the public under the present system for ten recruits examined at an out-station would thus be, as shown above:—Delay (nine recruits, one day's pay, &c.), 16s. 4d.; medical fees for seven recruits approved, £1 8s.; ditto for one primarily rejected, 2s. 6d.; conveyance (nine singles, two returns, on rejection), £1 7s. 6d.; total, £3 14s. 6d. If no civilian practitioners were employed, the cost would be:—Pay and allowances, one recruit (say, for three days), 5s. 6d.; return conveyance for above, 5s.; conveyance (same as in the first case), £1 7s. 6d.; total, £1 18s. Thus by abolishing the primary medical examination by civilian practitioners, there would be a saving of about 3s. per head in the case of Army recruits examined at out-stations. In the case of Militia recruits, it would not always be possible to avoid having recourse to civilian practitioners, nor would, perhaps, any alteration in their case be advisable. Formerly, all Militia recruits were, at any rate, provisionally approved by the adjutant of their corps, before being attested; we have pointed out that this is no longer required, the reason being that the travelling expenses of either the adjutant to out-stations, or the Militia recruits to Militia head-quarters, are thereby saved to the public. That no saving will eventually accrue from this mistaken economy does not need demonstration. Each Militia recruit receives 10s. bounty on attestation. We are not in favour of bounties, but the custom of giving this bounty has obtained so long, that we greatly fear its abolition would seriously injure recruiting. We consider, however, that this bounty should be made payable by post-office order, as some check on "bounty-jumping." It has been stated that recruiting for the Militia and recruiting for the Line are antagonistic; we can confidently affirm that this is not the case. Most men who enlist in the Militia cannot, at first, be persuaded to join the Regular Army. After serving a short time in the Militia, however, many men get a taste for soldiering. Hence, through the Militia, the Regular Army secures some partially-trained soldiers whom it would not otherwise have obtained, even in the raw material. It is by no means rare to find men serving in the Militia who, during the non-training period, are in receipt of 30s. or 40s. a week, and who look upon the training as a holiday, actually paying others to keep their civil situations "warm" for them. There is, no doubt, a great deal of "bounty-jumping," the only check upon which is rigid inquiry into the intending recruit's antecedents, birthplace, and relatives. These inquiries, together with a man's personal appearance, should give an officer great help towards forming an opinion of his fitness or unfitness for the Service. A shilling spent in a telegram will often decide a doubtful case, and should be recognised, on full explanation of the circumstances, as a charge against the public. A special return of absentees should be sent in every training, showing how, when, where, and by whom each was enrolled; whether inspected and questioned as to his antecedents, &c., by an officer; what steps were taken, either before or after enrolment, to verify his statements; what means have been adopted to secure, if possible, his apprehension. Recruiting for the Army and Militia are so connected the one with the other, that it has seemed advisable to treat them as one, giving prominence to the Militia branch. In our next and last paper, we will consider the training, discipline, and finance of the Militia.

The Army.

1st (King's) Dragoon Guards. Capt. Gibbings has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on medical certificate. 2nd Lieut. Waud sailed for India on Wednesday in H.M.S. Malabar.

1st (Royal) Dragoons. Capt. Middleton is about to retire on vacating the adjutancy of the Fifeshire Volunteer Light Horse.

4th Hussars. Lieut.-Col. Montague has sent in his papers to retire, but, if the reports which are in circulation throughout the Cavalry Service have any foundation in fact, the Authorities would be acting wisely were they to use their influence to induce Col. Montague to reconsider his decision, which, it is stated, he would probably consent to do, in the interests of his regiment. All reports from Aldershot agree in giving the palm to the 4th Hussars, whose appearance and efficiency in the field and general good behaviour lately under most trying circumstances was highly creditable to the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men. This should be taken into consideration, for it has to be remembered that the ranks are full of young soldiers, and the excellent reputation the regiment has earned is entirely due to the exertions which the officers have made since their return from India. Soldiering is not now what it was ten years ago, and it redounds greatly to the credit of the regiment that it should turn out as it has done on all occasions this summer, after so short a spell of home service, and hold its own, and more than hold its own, too, against regiments which have been for years in England. To punish the regiment, as it is not unlikely it would be punished were Col. Montague to retire, would be the height of injustice, and therefore we hope that the Horse Guards will think twice ere they accept the resignation of the present lieut.-col., who has led the regiment through the trying ordeal of a first summer at Aldershot, is highly popular with all ranks, and only quits the Service, as many of our best soldiers are doing, because he sees how hopeless is the task which the regimental "chief" has set him in these days of short service and Germanising tendencies.

6th Dragoons. Capt. M'Kean arrived home from India on Saturday last in H.M.S. Serapis.

8th Hussars. Lieut. Davidson sailed for India on Wednesday in H.M.S. Malabar, in charge of a draft. 2nd Lieut. Vesey also left in the Malabar. The death is announced from India of 2nd Lieut. E. Christy as having occurred at Rawul Pindee on the 13th inst., from the results of an accident at polo. The deceased was the only son of Mr. J. F. Christy, of 32 Queen's Gate Gardens, S.W., and was 25 years of age. He was appointed to the regiment from the West Kent Militia, Dec. 8, 1877.

9th Lancers. Capt. Evans and 2nd Lieut. Jenner left England on Wednesday for India in H.M.S. Malabar, in charge of a draft.

No. 8 Baty. 7th Brig. has arrived at Mauritius from St. Helena; and No. 11 Baty. 7th Brig. (Major E. J. Tremlett), has replaced No. 8 Baty. 7th Brig. at St. Helena, from the Cape.

Lieut.-Col. C. E. Newport, 11th Brig. (late Bombay), has been appointed to the command of the Royal Artillery at Bermuda, in succession to Col. O. Stokes.

Capt. W. O. C. Shippard, 7th Brig., who recently met with a sad accident at Woolwich by being thrown from his horse, still lies in a most critical state, no change for the better having been observed in his condition, and very faint hopes are entertained of his restoration to health. All music in the garrison is prohibited.

An exchange of brigades has been sanctioned between Capt. B. F. Domville, G Baty. B Brig. R.H.A., at Woolwich, and Capt. H. Sheil, B Baty. C Brig. R H.A., at Meerut.

Lieut. H. S. Hudson, a candidate for the Indian S.C., has been appointed officiating wing-subaltern, 4th Madras N.I., on probation.

Lieuts. C. T. J. Noble, a probationer for the Indian S.C., and F. B. R. Toms and E. B. Anderson, 8th Brig., have passed the lower-standard examination in Hindostanee.

As Lord Ripon was coming away from paying his return visit to the Khan of Khelat on the 19th ult., the salute was fired by E Baty. B Brig. R.H.A., which distinguished itself so much at Maiwand. His Excellency stopped his carriage, and when the salute was over, addressed them as follows:—"Major Tillard,—As I pass this battery I cannot resist the impulse which prompts me to address a few words to you and to your officers and men, in order to express my deep sense of the gallant services of the battery at the battle of Maiwand, when, in the hour of difficulty and danger, they firmly upheld the reputation of the distinguished corps to which they belong, and when, as I may say without exaggeration, they even wreathed fresh laurels round the guns of the Royal Artillery. It is not alone in the hour of success, and in the triumph of victory, that the qualities of true soldiers are displayed. They are called forth no less when the tide of battle turns against them, in the stubborn resistance, and the perilous retreat. Such occasions afford special opportunities for the display not only of that valour and discipline which are common to all British troops, but also of the noble qualities of pity and self-sacrifice. And you, officers and men, may be proud to recollect in after-days how many of the survivors of July 27 owe their lives to your exertions. Sir, I rejoice to feel that the honour of her Majesty's arms will ever be safe, in weal and in woe, in the hands of this battery, and I esteem myself very fortunate to have had this opportunity of seeing them."

Barlow, Inglis, and Nathan, and 157 men, 21 women, and 12 children, G Baty. 1st Brig.; Major Lloyd, Lieuts. Massey, Talbot, and Taylor, 157 men, 21 women, and 32 children, N Baty. 3rd Brig.; and Major Alexander, Lieuts. Keir, Cuthbertson, and Rundle, and 155 men, 17 women, and 37 children, O Baty. 3rd Brig., R.A.

The degree of LL.D. was conferred upon Major-Gen. Sir F. Roberts, V.C., G.C.B., by the Senate of the University of Dublin, in the Examination Hall of Trinity College. Dr. Webb, the public orator, in a Latin speech, recited the exploits of Gen. Roberts in India. The Vice-Chancellor in presenting the degree to Gen. Roberts, also spoke in Latin. Gen. Roberts signed his name in the College register, and, after repeated calls for a speech, said:—"I cannot make a speech in Latin (laughter and applause), and I am afraid everyone here would not understand me if I spoke in Persian or Hindostanee; so the best thing I can do is to say in a few words of English how extremely proud I am to be here to-day, and to receive the very hearty welcome you have given me" (applause). The proceedings then terminated. Sir F. Roberts was on Tuesday presented with the freedom of the Merchant Taylors Company.

ROYAL ENGINEERS.

The appointment of Commanding Royal Engineer of the Woolwich District, which will become vacant at the end of this month by the retirement of Col. the Hon. G. Wrottesley, who has held the post for upwards of five years, has been conferred upon Col. Sir Andrew Clarke, K.C.M.G., C.B., C.I.E., at present unemployed.

Lieut. C. R. Hoskyn arrived at Portsmouth from India on Saturday in H.M.S. Serapis.

The 3rd and 8th Companies left Gibraltar on Wednesday in H.M.S. Himalaya for England.

"An Old R.E. Sub." writes:—"I see that in the Army and Navy Gazette of Dec. 11 you draw attention to the slow promotion of the R.E. subalterns, compared with their brethren of the R.A., and mention several officers who should be seconded. Allow me to supplement the list with the following names:—Major Oldham, Capts. Begbie and Christie on the Imperial List, and Major Lambert on Bengal List, all of whom are in the Accounts Branch of Public Works Department in India, and who should be seconded like other officers in that branch. The following three officers of Bengal List should also, with little doubt, be seconded:—Brevet Lieut.-Col. St. John, political officer, Candahar; Brevet Lieut.-Col. Lovett, consul for provinces S. of Caspian; Capt. and Brevet Major H. Trotter, consul for Kurdistan. A careful examination of the list of officers, with a view to seconding those holding appointments as above, would go some way to remove the present block.', Grenadier Guards. A concert was given by the 1st Batn. in the East Day Room, Chelsea Barracks, on the 3rd inst. The programme included a comic song, "Dr. Ridge's Food," by Serjt. Wilkinson; a duet, "The Minute Gun at Sea," by Lieut. F. C. Ricardo and Mr. Smears; a song, "Martin, the Man-at-Arms," by O.R.C. Locke; a duet, "The Gendarmes," by Drill-Serjt. Simpson and Serjt. Coldstream Guards. The reinforcement of 108 men of the 1st Batn., under command of Lieut.-Col. Lockwood, left Victoria Station on Thursday evening by special train for Holyhead, en route for Dublin, to join head-quarters. Lieut.-Col. C. S. Burdett, late of the regiment, died at Shrubhurst, Godstone, Surrey, on the 12th inst., aged 61 years. The deceased served with the regiment at the siege and fall of Sebastopol from Dec. 1854 (medal and clasp, and 5th Class of the Medjidie). He became capt. and lieut.-col., Aug. 22, 1859, and retired immediately afterwards.

3rd Buffs. Capt. Kerr, 1st Batn., is about to exchange into the 2nd Batn. with Capt. Spens.

5th Fusiliers. It will not be necessary this year to send the usual draft to fill up the vacancies in the 2nd Batn. at Agra, as a large number of men were transferred from the 1st to the 2nd Batn. prior to the departure of the 1st Batn. for England. Lieut. Orred, 2nd Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 12 months.

The best scores were made by Colour-Serjt. Prentice, 87; Lieut. Charley, 79; and Serjt. Johnstone, 87. A challenge from the Hong Kong Cricket Club to the Army and Navy Cricketers was disposed of on Friday, victory being on the side of the Services, Seaman Dalkin proving a demon bowler, and Lieut. Walker, 4th Batn., arrived home from India on Saturday last in H.M.S. Serapis. The south aisle of Winchester Cathedral nave has received a brass tablet to the memory of a gallant soldier, and it is from the atelier of Messrs. Hart, of London and Birmingham, adapted to the trefoil headed panel in which it is fixed. The apex is decorated with incised circles in the cusps of the trefoil, between which is a Latin cross with the regimental Maltese cross at its feet, charged with the many actions in which the regiment has earned immortal honour. The field of the tablet, within a geometrically ornate border, has the following inscription:—"Major Francis Fitzpatrick, born Jan. 19, 1822, died June 30, 1879, after having served over 40 years in the 2nd Batn. 60th Rifles, 25 of which he was its paymaster and was with it during the Kaffre War, 1851-3, Indian Mutiny, and China War, 1860. Friends who served with him have placed this here in remembrance of his good services to his Queen, his country, and themselves, A.D. MDCCCLXXX." The tablet is close to that of Col. Palmer, who commanded the battalion.

61st Regiment. 2nd Lieut. Hume sailed for India on Wednesday in H.M.S. Malabar.

62nd Regiment. Capt. Carter arrived home from India on Saturday last in H.M.S. Serapis.

66th Regiment. The regiment was to leave Bombay, after the Viceroy's visit, for Khandalla, there to remain until required to embark for England. Speaking at a dinner given in India to the survivors of the Afghan Campaign, Lord Ripon told them that their comrades, who had died to the last man in the defence of the colours, would long live in the memory of Englishmen and of the world; but they must remember that to have been the comrades of those who died so gallantly threw a great responsibility on the regiment, because they would have to maintain the fame thus won for them. He heartily wished them godspeed, and was confident that, if called upon, they would know how to defend the colours which the Queen would soon entrust to them. Colonel Hogge having replied, the men gave three cheers for the Viceroy and the Commander-in-Chief; and a soldier called for a cheer for Gen. Burrows, which was heartily given.

67th Regiment. The following telegram is published in the Times of India, dated Bangalore, Nov. 6:—"The first party of the 67th Regt. arrived this morning from Afghanistan. There was a large crowd at the station, who gave the regiment a warm reception. The men look well. Gen. Payn congratulated the corps on the two years' 'glorious campaign' and on their soldierly appearance and excellent discipline. The head-quarters arrive to-morrow." Major Kingsley has been granted leave from India to England for fifteen months, on private affairs. Capt. Jarvis has passed the lower-standard examination in Persian.

68th Light Infantry. Capt. Tyndall arrived home from India on Saturday last in H.M.S. Serapis. The regiment was to have left Mean Meer on the 1st inst. by road for Meerut, on being relieved by the 2nd Batn. 8th.

70th Regiment. Capt. Miller arrived home from India on Saturday last in H.M.S. Serapis. Capt. Roupell has been granted leave to Calcutta for six months, to study the native languages. 2nd Lieut. Roberts sailed for India on Wednesday in H.M.S. Malabar.

72nd Highlanders. The regiment had arrived at Lucknow when the mail left India. Lieut. and Adjt. Monro, who was severely wounded in the thigh at the battle of Candahar, is not yet able to leave his bed. It is said that his wounds are serious, and that grave apprehensions are entertained about his being able to recover the use of his right leg. The Lahore paper has the following:—"The entertainment to the non-commissioned officers and men of the 72nd and 92nd Highlanders, by the Scotchmen of the Punjab, took place at Lahore on the 16th ult., and was in all respects a success. The dinner, which seemed an ample one, consisting of maunds of beef and bacon and dozens of sucking pigs, with innumerable plum-puddings, &c., was served in two large tents made from darries, each seated for about 600 men. The space between these tents was covered in and carpeted with red cloth, for visitors. At the entrance from the Mean Meer road a triumphal arch was erected, bearing inscriptions of welcome in Gaelic and English. The men seemed to do ample justice to the viands, washing them down with good bottled beer, and they then, in response to an excellent speech from Mr. David Ross, quaffed a tot of whisky to the Queen-Empress's health. After enjoying a couple of cheroots, while the combined bands played a selection of Scotch airs, the men proceeded to the ground laid out for the national sports. Here a large circular piece of ground had been levelled and railed off, and the sports at once commenced. Throwing the hammer, pipe music, dancing Highland fling, sword dance, tossing the caber, putting the shot, and many other 'events' were keenly contested. After three cheers had been given for all the promoters of the treat, and especially for Mr. and Mrs. Ross, who had kindly undertaken, and most satisfactorily accomplished, the lion's share of the preparations, the men dispersed to their camps. The men seemed to enjoy themselves thoroughly, and all expressed the opinion of their spokesman that as long as they lived they would not forget the warm welcome they received from the Scotchmen of the Punjab. To the credit of both gallant regiments be it recorded, there was not one case of misbehaviour during the entire proceedings."

92nd Highlanders. See 72nd Highlanders. The regiment was to have left Mean Meer on the 27th ult. for Cawnpore, which station it will leave on the 1st prox. en route to Bombay, to embark for England. Lieut. Cunynghame has been recommended for the adjutancy, vice Capt. Douglas, promoted. 2nd Lieut. Stewart has been granted leave from India to England for six months, on medical certificate.

95th Regiment. Capt. St. John has succeeded Capt. de Salis as adjt. of the 1st Derby Militia.

97th Regiment. It has been decided to bring the regiment home from Gibraltar immediately. H.M.S. Tamar left England yesterday for the purpose of conveying it to Ireland. As briefly announced by us a fortnight ago, Lady M'Dougall presented a set of new colours to the regiment, at Halifax, N.S., on the 13th ult., previous to its departure for Gibraltar. The colours having been consecrated by his lordship, Bishop Binney, and handed to the senior lieut., Lady M'Dougall delivered the following address:—"Soldiers of the 97th Regiment, I feel deeply the honour of being chosen to present new colours to your regiment, which I now do in the name of her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen. The interest I must always feel in the honour and welfare of the 97th will be intensified by the memory of my having been associated with you on this solemn and memorable occasion. In these days when events follow each other with startling rapidity, and when the world is bristling with armaments, it is impossible to say how soon England may be called on to take her part in the great war that sooner or later appears to be inevitable. Whenever that event may happen, everyone acquainted with the 97th Regt. will feel sure that fresh distinctions will be added to those now emblazoned on the regimental standards. It may not be generally known in this community that in the churchyard opposite to Government House, there is a monument to Major Welsford, a native of Nova Scotia, who was killed at the assault of the Great Redan at Sebastopol while in command of the ladder party of 160 men, furnished by the 97th Regt.; at the same time that your lieut.-col., Col. Hancock, was killed at the head of the stormers of the regiment. In that assault the 97th suffered heavily, their loss in killed and wounded having been 11 out of the 13 officers, and 202 out of the 360 men who were engaged. A few years later the regiment lost another lieut.-col., Ingram, who was killed at Lucknow in the assault of the Kaiserbagh. Your old colours have been borne aloft in many a hard-fought battle and have seen much service, as their appearance testifies; and I now charge you, one and all, to fight manfully in defence of these new colours which have been this day consecrated to the service of your Queen and country, and which I now confide to the guardianship of the 97th Regt., in the conviction that every officer, non-commissioned officer, and man, will die in their defence, as their comrades of the 24th and 66th have lately done in Zululand and Candahar, rather than forsake the trust now committed to their charge.' Lieut.-Col. Browne, in reply, said:—"Lady M'Dougall,—On behalf of the 97th Regt., that I have the honour to command, allow me to return you our most sincere thanks for the great honour which you have this day conferred on the regiment by presenting us our new colours in the name of her most gracious Majesty the Queen. Allow me also to thank you for the flattering address which you have been pleased to make on the occasion, and for the very complimentary manner in which you have alluded to the past deeds of the regiment. And I beg to assure you that the highest ambition of every officer, non-commissioned officer, and man, now serving in the regiment, is that the regiment of the present day should, in all respects, be worthy of the prestige and renown of the regiment of the past, and that, whenever and wherever the 97th Regt. may be again called upon to take the field, we who are now serving under the new colours, which we have this day received at your hands, and which you have entrusted to our charge, should prove ourselves worthy of the distinguished and gallant men who have served, fought, and died under our old colours, which we have this day trooped for the last time. The old colours will eventually be placed in Winchester Cathedral, underneath our still older colours which we carried in the Crimea, and under which the two gallant officers whose names you have mentioned, Lieut.-Col. Hancock and Major Welsford, served and died. Lady M'Dougall, the spirited address that you have this day been good enough to make to the regiment will be published in regimental orders and entered in the historical record of the regiment, and will prove a fresh incentive, if any incentive be necessary, for the officers and men of the 97th Regt. to act up to their motto, 'Quo fas et gloria ducunt,' in days to come, as they have done in days gone by. The regiment, I regret to say, is leaving Sir Patrick M'Dougall's command in a very few days, but we shall always remember with very great pleasure the many acts of kindness we have received both from you, Lady M'Dougall, and Sir Patrick, and last, but not least, will always look back with pride to the honour which you have this day conferred on the regiment by presenting us our colours." The 97th is a comparatively young regiment, having been raised at Winchester in 1824 by the then Duke of York, who was also the Earl of Ulster.

100th Regiment. Lieut. Carr, a candidate for the Indian S.C., attached to the 7th Bengal Cavalry, has passed the higher-standard examination in Hindostanee. 2nd Lieut. Vaughan sailed on Wednesday for India in H.M.S. Malabar.

Rifle Brigade. A Reuter's telegram from Gibraltar, dated the 15th inst., says:—"H.M.S. Himalaya, with the 2nd Batn. Rifle Brigade on board, left yesterday evening for England." The battalion on arrival is to be landed at Queenstown, and stationed at Cork. Capt. Maberley, 4th Batn., has applied for permission to retire from the Service. Capt. Howard, 4th Batn., has been granted leave from India to England for 15 months. 2nd Lieut. Kerr, 1st Batn., left England on Wednesday for India in H.M.S. Malabar.

THE VOLUNTEERS.

3rd Middlesex Artillery. There was a very large gathering of the members and friends of this model regiment at the Cannon Street Hotel last Saturday, when the prizes won at Shoeburyness and Plumstead were distributed by Col. Waller, commanding the Royal Artillery, Home District. The statistics were in keeping with those of most of the other regiments, London and Middlesex, the enrolled falling off from 938 to 901, and the efficients from 896 to 865. Lieut.-Col. Ray had plenty of material on which to dwell in his address respecting the events of the year, and of course made particular mention of the conspicuous part which the brigade took in the Easter Review, with their 14 guns and 100 horses. Then, again, they went into barracks at Sheerness for five days, and at Shoeburyness won five of the prizes. Since 1872 they have won 22 prizes at the School of Gunnery, and twice carried away the Queen's prize. Col. Waller bore his testimony to the efficient condition of the regiment, and speaking of the Easter review, said the manner in which they moved and handled the guns upon that occasion led one to suppose that they were used to that sort of work every day.

1st Middlesex Engineers. Col. Dawson-Scott, Commanding Engineer, Home District, presented the prizes on Saturday, at the head-quarters, South Kensington, in the presence of a very large company. The guard of honour was composed of two boat's crews of the pontooning companies, clad in the light rig of sailors of the Royal Navy. Lieut.-Col. Bell's statement showed that there was a decrease of 69 in enrolled members and 46 in efficients. Col. Dawson-Scott said that though the numbers of the corps had decreased—a fact which was to be regretted—the corps was in a satisfactory condition. There was not much to show of the work in time of peace, but in war their services would be invaluable. The best shot of the battalion is Serjt. G. Barnes.

1st Middlesex (Victoria) Rifles. We are glad to note that the enrolled strength of the premier Middlesex regiment is showing a gradual increase from year to year. Four hundred of all ranks is the present record, as against 385; but the non-efficients (78) are still too many.

3rd Middlesex Rifles. Lieut.-Col. Warner's battalion—one of the few in the Metropolis which now wears the wretched grey uniform—suffers a loss this year in strength from 705 to 671. Only four men, however, have failed to comply with the Government requirements.

4th Middlesex (West London) Rifles. This battalion has lost way during the year, both as regards enrolled strength and efficients. The former are 531 as compared with 561, and the latter 567 as against 579, but it has been fortunate in securing the service of an excellent commanding officer in Lieut.-Col. Somers Lewis, late of the Royal Marines.

5th (West) Middlesex Rifles. Major-Gen. Cameron, C.B., hon. col., to whose brigade, it will be remembered, a strong detachment was attached at Aldershot last August, will inspect the battalion, and afterwards distribute the prizes, at St. George's Hall next Thursday.

7th Middlesex (London Scottish) Rifles. There is a slight decrease in the returns of this battalion for the year. Enrolled, 635, as against 634; and efficients, 565, as against 569.

11th Middlesex Rifles. The returns of Lieut.-Col. Gore-Browne's battalion exhibit a falling-off from 658 to 621 enrolled, and from 646 to 591 efficients. The regiment, however, was never in a better condition as regards efficiency.

12th Middlesex (Civil Service) Rifles. In this batn., which has for many years been considerably below its maximum, the falling-off is serious. The enrolled are 461 against 481, and efficients 393 against 409.

13th Middlesex (Queen's Westminster) Rifles. Like many other regiments in London, this has also lost way, enrolled from 916 to 895, and efficients from 883 to 881.

14th Middlesex (Inns of Court) Rifles. No batn. in the Home District shows so marked an improvement as the late 23rd Middlesex, the enrolled advancing to 480 from 435, and efficients to 375 from 280, the latter showing the large and much-desired increase of 95.

16th Middlesex (London Irish) Rifles. The Lord Mayor presented the prizes of this fine batn. at St. James's Hall on the 10th inst., and in the absence of the veteran commander (the Marquis of Donegall), through illness, and

Lieut.-Col. Ward, the usual statement was made by Major Furnivall. There was, he said, a loss both in enrolled and efficients, the former now standing at 882 as against 896, and the latter 829 as against 866. Serjt. Carrington is the best shot in class-firing, and besides receiving the badge of rifle and three stars, won the Marquis of Donegall's gold medal. The prize list included gifts from the Duke of Connaught (hon. col.), Sir Richard Wallace, the Duke of Abercorn, the Marquis and Marchioness of Donegall, and Gen. Sir H. Daubeney, K.C.B., the latter presenting a handsome cup, which it was stated was "originally presented by H.R.H. the late Duke of Cumberland to his Volunteer regiment of sharpshooters in 1811." The battalion efficiency prize was awarded to B (Capt. J. Hind's) Company.

17TH (NORTH) MIDDLESEX RIFLES. Lord Enfield, Under-Secretary of State for the Home Department, and hon. col., distributed the prizes of this regiment last Monday evening. The statistics show 732 efficients out of 733 enrolled. Last year the 785 on the strength were all returned efficient. The marksmen are 64; 19 officers and 43 serjeants hold certificates of proficiency, and the capitation grant earned amounts to £1,253. After Col. Brown had referred to the work of the year, specially remarking on the experimental camp of instruction at Ealing last Whitsuntide, the prizes were distributed, Qrmr.-Serjt. Field receiving the gold badge as best shot in the battalion. Col. Logan, C.B., and Lord Enfield addressed the company, the latter, in his remarks, stating that the returns of the force for the year showed 206,410 enrolled, and 196,101 efficients.

18TH MIDDLESEX RIFLES. Lieut.-Col. Gordon-Ives's smart battalion now, it appears, numbers 1,000, with 918 efficients. Last year the enrolled were 931, with 929 efficients.

19TH MIDDLESEX (BLOOMSBURY) RIFLES. The Hon. Mrs. Higginson, wife of Major-Gen. Higginson, C.B., commanding the Home District, presented the prizes of this always excellent regiment last Saturday evening, at Freemasons' Hall. The returns show 1,000 enrolled and 994 efficients, the latter being an improvement on last year, when the total was 989. Lieut.-Col. Richards gave a good account of the year's work, referred particularly to the four days' outing at Easter, 380 of all ranks marching to Brighton; to the camp of instruction at Hampstead; the attendance of a detachment at Aldershot, and to the inspection, when 806 of all ranks were on parade. Twenty men, he said, had left the regiment to join the Army. Among the long list of prizes presented by the Hon. Mrs. Higginson was the Bedford Challenge Cup, value £100, presented to Corpl. Prebble. No. 4 (Capt. Ellis's) Company took the prize for drill, and No. 6 (Capt. Rivolta's) Company the Volley-firing Challenge Cup. At the close of the distribution, Gen. Higginson referred to the desirability of a close run for drill between the Regulars and the Auxiliaries, and, respecting his command, said he hoped next year to have a field-day near London that would be no disgrace to any Army in Europe.

20TH MIDDLESEX (ARTISTS) RIFLES. The returns of Sir Frederick Leighton's battalion show an increase in strength from 746 to 766, but a decrease of efficients, 671 as against 685.

21ST MIDDLESEX (FINSBURY) RIFLES. The last return gives 906 enrolled, all efficients, a loss of 18 in the strength.

22ND MIDDLESEX (CENTRAL LONDON RANGERS). This is one of the few battalions in the metropolis which has suffered no loss during the past year. On the contrary, the enrolled have advanced from 661 to 678, and equally satisfactory is the increase in the efficients from 625 to 657, a result on which Lieut.-Col. Malet, all the officers, and especially the indefatigable adjutant (Capt. Higgins, 25th Foot), and staff, are much to be congratulated. The regiment has made steady progress for the last four years.

23RD MIDDLESEX (LONDON AND WESTMINSTER) RIFLES. The Countess of Lytton presented the prizes of Lieut.-Col. Routledge's smart and efficient regiment at St. James's Hall last Tuesday evening, great interest being attached to the proceedings by the presence of Lord Lytton (late Viceroy of India), Sir Frederick Roberts, General Ross, and Lord Chelmsford. On no previous occasion, probably, was the hall the scene of such a demonstration as that accorded to the distinguished visitors, rounds of cheering greeting their appearance on the platform, the band striking up, "See, the Conquering Hero Comes." Lieut.-Col. Routledge—than whom there is no more energetic officer in London—had a good account to give of the regiment, both enrolled and efficients having increased, —the former to 788, and the latter to 771,—and in the course of a long address referred with pride to the attendance of the battalion at Aldershot, where, he said, they learnt more of a soldier's duties in eight days than in all their ordinary drills during the year. Capt. Bearne received the Hawkshaw, Silver, and Ladies' Challenge Cups. Col. Routledge's prize for efficiency went to H (Capt. Collins's) Company; and the Adjutant's Cup, for highest per-centage of attendances at company and battalion drill, was also awarded to the same company. The best shot is Lance-Corpl. Holloway. Lord Lytton, Sir Frederick Roberts, Gen. Ross, Sir Chas. Russell, and Gen. Burnaby addressed the meeting, and the proceedings, which were followed by a ball, were not over till a late hour. In the course of the evening, Gen. Roberts presented a bronze medal to Mrs. Routledge in the name of the officers, in recognition of her kindness and increasing interest in the regiment.

24TH MIDDLESEX (POST OFFICE) RIFLES. Lieut.-Col. Du Plat Taylor's battalion, according to present returns, now numbers 730 (a loss of 9), with 747 efficients (a loss of 6).

25TH MIDDLESEX (BANK OF ENGLAND) RIFLES. The returns of this corps—one company attached to the Civil Service Rifles—show 73 efficients out of 74 enrolled.

3RD ESSEX RIFLES. Lieut.-Col. Birt presided on Wednesday evening at the distribution of prizes at West Ham, and in the course of his address said that they had now more efficients and marksmen than at any former period. The colonel wisely condemned the proposals recently made in some quarters for the bestowal by the Government of long-service medals, and then presented the prizes. The best shot is Bugle-Major Smith.

LANARKSHIRE RIFLES. The annual efficiency returns of the 1st Lanark show 1,252 efficients as against 1,234; 2nd Lanark, 935 as against 902; 3rd Lanark, 1,032 as against 1,027; 4th Lanark, 670 as against 678; 6th Lanark, 803 as against 804; 7th Lanark, 783 as against 784; 9th Lanark, 499 as against 442; and 10th Lanark (Glasgow Highland), 846 as against 810.

3RD KENT RIFLES. The prizes of the Blackheath detachment were presented on Wednesday evening by Mrs. Drury, wife of Capt. Drury. There are, it appears, only 4 non-efficients, the strength being 177.

A special general meeting of the National Rifle Association will be held on Wednesday, Jan. 19, at 2 p.m., at the Royal United Service Institution, Whitehall Yard.

Bombay Sappers for India, the Major-Gen. commanding Southern Afghanistan has much pleasure in recording his high sense of the services rendered by the company since its arrival under his command at the close of 1878. The late Lieut. Rice Henn, R.E., was then in command, and aided by Lieut. Jones, R.E., the present commanding officer, commenced the Jacobabad and Dadur road in the difficult country in Kuchi between Nowra and Tunkur, which was soon rendered possible for carts by the erection of temporary bridges, raised roadways, &c. From March, 1879, to Jan. 1880, the company worked admirably in the Bolan Pass and near Durwaza, after which it was transferred to the Nari Valley Railway Line, and subsequently to Candahar. At Girishk, Maiwand, and in the Deh Khoja sortie (especially the two latter), the company did excellent service. The loss in officers, non-commissioned officers, and men has been severe. In Lieut. Rice Henn the public service lost an officer of highest promise. Major-Gen. Phayre tenders his cordial thanks to Lieut. Jones for the prompt and efficient manner in which he carried out his duties. He also has much pleasure in expressing to the non-commissioned officers and men of the company his full appreciation of their bonâ fide hard work and excellent conduct whilst under his command."

J. Waudby, with Privates E. Bux and S. Tannak, fell, whilst heroically defending the post against overwhelming odds on April 16 last, the commanding officer feels sure that all ranks desire to pay to these gallant soldiers the last military honours the regiment can pay them. Three hundred rank and file, with band, under the command of Major W. Jacob, will parade this evening at 4.30 p.m., and will fire three volleys over their graves; the remainder of the regiment will parade with side-arms.—By order, F. BREVET PROMOTIONS.

[TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."]

SIR,—Is it too much to ask that the War Office should now act honourably and fairly to the Purchase officers, in favour of whom, after a hard struggle, Mr. Childers suspended the Warrant of 1878, Clause 21 (f)? In your last impression you gave a list of the vacancies which have taken place among the General officers since Jan. 1, 1880, and proved that several colonels, majors, and captains have already been deprived of the steps to which they were entitled. The officers interested were fully aware of the injustice done to them before you called attention to it, but are not the less thankful for the exposure. Has it, then, come to this, that the Authorities, who meekly crouch to the lawless, and give everything demanded by unruly agitators, stoop to filch from their hard-working, loyal, and devoted servants the promotion which they have earned by years of toil, privation, and disappointment? And must the screw again be put on them in Parliament to make them do their duty and keep their promises? To them it may signify little whether a half-dozen patient claimants are promoted between this and April 1, 1881, or consigned to disappointment; but it is a serious matter to be the victims of breach of faith, disregard of Warrants, or general laxity of principle. Surely Mr. Childers not aware of these doings. If not, he must be informed through the Press and Parliament.—

I am, &c., MILES OLIM.

A Dresden telegram in the Standard says that the Chinese Government have made a contract with the Vulcan firm in Stettin for the construction of an ironclad of 7,500 tons.

INDIA.

The Times' correspondent at Calcutta telegraphs:—"It is announced that the star to be given for Gen. Roberts's march will be made from the guns captured at the battle of Candahar, and will be attached to the Candahar clasp. Some of the guns have been ordered to be sent to Calcutta for the purpose. The Candahar clasp will be confined to the troops actually engaged in the action of Sept. 1. The claim to the star made on behalf of his division by Gen. Phayre has been rejected. It will be given only to the troops who marched with Gen. Roberts from Cabul. The Cabul clasp will be confined to the troops actually engaged in operations at and near that place between Dec. 10 and 23 last, including Gough's column, which joined Gen. Roberts on the 24th."

The following movements of troops are ordered in the Madras Presidency for the present relief season:—Royal Artillery—No. 4 Baty. 9th Brig., from England to Rangoon; No. 11 Baty. 8th Brig., from Rangoon to Aden. British Infantry—Detachment 2nd Batn. 13th Regt., from Bangalore to Kamptee; detachment 2nd Batn. 13th Regt., from Bellary to Kamptee; detachment 2nd Batn. 16th Regt., from Madras to Cannanore; 24th Regt., from Poona to Secunderabad; 48th Regt., from Secunderabad to England; 67th Regt., from Cabul to Bangalore; 77th H.Q. Wing, from England to Madras; 77th Wing, from England to Bellary; 89th Regt., from Rangoon and Port Blair to Belgaum; 77th Regt., from Madras and Bellary to Rangoon. Native Cavalry—Detachment 4th (P.W.O.) Light Cavalry, from Trichinopoly to Bellary. Sappers and Miners—A Company, from Afghanistan to Bangalore; C Company, from Afghanistan to Bangalore; half E Company, from Rangoon to Bangalore; F Company, from Theyetmyo to Rangoon; I Company, from Afghanistan to Bangalore. Native Infantry.—1st Regt., from Afghanistan to Secunderabad; 2nd Regt., from Kamptee to Moulmein and Tonghoo; wing 3rd Regt., from Jubbulpore to Kamptee; 4th Regt., from Afghanistan to Bangalore; detachment, 6th Regt., from St. Thomas' Mount to Trichinopoly; 11th Regt., from Doranda and Calcutta to Tonghoo; 12th Regt., from Cuttack to Doranda; 13th Regt., from Meean Meer to Jubbulpore; 15th Regt., from Afghanistan to Bangalore; wing, 19th Regt., from Theyetmyo to Calcutta; 21st Regt., from Mooltan to Trichinopoly; detachment, 22nd Regt., from Rangoon to Andamans; 23rd Regt., from Andamans to Kamptee; wing, 25th Regt., from Bellary to Vellore; 26th Regt., from Quilon to Palamcotta; 27th Regt., from Morar to Bellary; 30th Regt., from Dera Ghazi Khan to Trichinopoly; 32nd Regt., from Thyetmyo to Cuttack; 33rd Regt., from Moulmein and Tonghoo to Mangalore; wing, 34th Regt., from Mangalore to Cannanore; 27th Regt., from Bangalore to Bellary; 41st Regt., from Tonghoo to Quilon.

The Candahar correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette writes, Nov. 22:—"Some disappointment is felt by the troops which marched under the command of Major-Gen. Phayre to the relief of Candahar from Southern Afghanistan, because their claims for the bronze star have not been recognised. Should Government adhere to this decision, it will tend to create a jealousy in the Army. It should not be forgotten that Major-Gen. Phayre's force had equal, if not greater, difficulties to surmount than those encountered by Gen. Roberts's force in their march from Cabul to Candahar. The roads were worse, the transport scarce, and what there was of the very worst description; food was insufficient, so much so that baggage bullocks were killed and eaten, the carts being used for fuel; the distance traversed was nearly equal, and was marched at the same rate. They had continually to be on the alert in expectation of attacks, and in some cases had to make counter-marches, and though not harassed like the Cabul force, yet they suffered hardships which they fairly consider entitle them to better treatment. Endeavours will no doubt be taken to induce the Government to change its decision on the subject."

The following farewell order was issued by Major-Gen. Phayre, previous to his departure from Candahar:—"Gen. Phayre, in taking leave of the Second Division, tenders his acknowledgments to all ranks for the prompt and efficient support which he has invariably received from them since the organisation of the division in August last. It has afforded him sincere pleasure to bring specially to the notice of his Excellency the Commander-in-Chief the admirable energy and zeal which actuated all during the trying and memorable march from Sibi to Candahar for the relief of the garrison in direct co-operation with the Cabul-Candahar column under Sir F. Roberts. Although the division was not fortunate enough to arrive at Candahar in time to participate in the glorious victory of Sept. 1, yet the General believes he may quote from the Viceroy's speech on parade at Lahore on Nov. 13, the following passage, as applicable to the Sibi-Candahar line of communication equally with others:—'But, Sir, if we recall with pride these gallant and stirring deeds of war and victory, there have been other incidents in these operations which we cannot in justice overlook. We cannot forget the services which have been rendered by those officers and regiments who were set to guard the lines of communications, and I hold, as I have already had occasion in this country to state, that our gratitude is equally due to those who performed that duty with such unvarying patience and such firmness in difficulties and trials quite as great as those which were undergone by their comrades who had the better fortune to be engaged in the front.' Let these words," remarks Gen. Phayre, "from the highest authority in India, convey to all ranks the assurance that their distinguished services on the occasion under reference are recognised and appreciated."

The directors of the Rye Vale Distilleries Company, Limited, invite application for the unissued portion of the 10-per-cent. preference shares of the Company. The Company is in full operation, and is now selling its manufacture of pure Irish whisky, both wholesale and direct, to shareholders and the public generally.

THE MILITARY SITUATION IN IRELAND.

The Irish Times says:—"In consequence of the continued disturbed state of the country, the resources of the military authorities in Ireland are being subjected to considerable pressure. Staff officers and heads of departments are compelled to devote unremitting attention to their onerous and important duties, and the executive officers and subordinates, while occupied on their several functions, are kept on the qui vive, speculating as to the probable nature of the next alarm. Meanwhile troops are continuously arriving, and are being distributed throughout the small stations in the South and West of Ireland. Detachments of Infantry, each consisting of two officers and fifty non-commissioned officers and men, are to be sent at once from the Cork district to Nenagh and Tralee; and the Dublin district is to furnish a contingent of equal strength to proceed immediately to occupy a portion of the workhouse at Ballina. Orders to be in readiness to take over the barracks at Roscrea and Millstreet on receipt of route have also been issued to parties of infantry in the Cork District. The furnishing of these numerous detachments, with others that are to follow, but have not yet been decided on, will obviously necessitate an increase of military force in the country, and it is very probable that, failing the despatch of troops from England, the 83rd Regiment, on its arrival from India, will be stationed in the south. Complete arrangements have been made with regard to the commissariat services,—a consignment of groceries, medical comforts, biscuits, and tinned meats having been sent from Woolwich to Dublin, while a reserve of biscuits and preserved meat is now held at the principal military stations in Ireland, including Cork, Queenstown, Kilkenny, Limerick, Fermoy, Clonmel, and Templemore. The Ordnance Store Department has been equally active as regards the services appertaining to that branch of the Army. Camp equipment has been forwarded to every station likely to require its use, and everything is in perfect readiness for a flying column, should the necessity for such an undesirable contingency arise. The dilatoriness and state of hesitation ascribed to other quarters cannot, it is clear, be imputed to the Army in Ireland."

THE NAVY AND THE SLAVE-TRADE.

A Blue-book of official correspondence relating to the Slave-trade has just been issued. In a despatch referring to Zanzibar and the East Coast of Africa, Mozambique, and Madagascar, Rear-Admiral Corbett says:—"The state of the trade in slaves may be thus summarised:—As a trade, it is extinct in all parts of the station, except the Red Sea. It is confined to many petty attempts at smuggling, which are frequently unsuccessful. In this contraband traffic the Arab dealers are known to embark their slaves in small numbers in three or four dhows at the same time, and run the gauntlet of our cruisers. One of these dhows will often be taken while the others escape, and the dealer, having means of buying cheaply on the mainland, can recoup his losses and make a high profit out of the slaves which he can land safely. In the Red Sea the trade flourishes, notwithstanding the exertions of our ships. The Turkish territory is a market where slaves are always in demand, and the extinction of the traffic must depend more upon the good-will of the Turkish authorities than on our efforts at suppression. There is little doubt that both combined would effectually stop the trade. I do not propose the increase of the force of her Majesty's ships either on the coast of Africa or in the Red Sea at present; but if we could act in harmony with the Turkish officials in the latter region, the ships in the Red Sea might well be increased by another cruiser. In concluding my report, it is my pleasing duty to highly commend to their Lordships the energetic and zealous conduct of the captains, officers, and crews of her Majesty's ships employed in suppressing the slave traffic in different parts of the station, and my thanks are due to Capts. T. B. M. Sulivan and Hamilton Earle, of the London, and to Capt Richard E. Tracey, of the Spartan, who have superintended the operations on the coast of Africa. I can speak in sincere praise of all engaged in the laborious and trying duty of cruising in a hot and unhealthy climate, performing their various services with vigilance, perseverance, and cheerfulness. The following ships have been engaged in the suppression of the slave traffic, and all share my praise and approval, namely, her Majesty's ships London, Sparton, Rifleman, White Swan, Arab, Vulture, Lynx, Ready, Dragon, Vestal, Beacon, and Daphne." Before giving up his command in the East Indies, Rear-Admiral Corbett wrote:—"The slave traffic in Zanzibar and Pemba appears now to be decreasing steadily, but the demand for slave labour is greater than ever." Subsequently the naval Commander-in-Chief in the East Indies reported that by latest accounts he had heard that no fresh captures of slave-dhows had been made by the cruising boats of H.M.S. London, and that on the Governor-General of Mozambique visiting Zanzibar in the Portuguese man-of-war Rainha de Portugal, and being waited on by the captain of the London, his Excellency expressed his desire that the British and Portuguese should cordially co-operate in their endeavours to exterminate slave traffic in Portuguese territorial waters.

The Naval and Military umpires who were chosen to decide upon the results of the grand night attack upon Fort Monckton so long ago, have not yet quite completed their labours. Their reports have, of course, been in office some time, and have been digested by the higher authorities. But they are to be called upon to make further reports upon what they consider to have been the weak points both in the attack and the defence. As there was considerable outlay attending the torpedo attack, it is satisfactory to find that the administrative departments of the Services have not allowed the results to pass without due consideration, and from the close manner in which the whole manœuvre has been inquired into, it is probable that the next night attack will be conducted on improved lines.—Hampshire Telegraph.

LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 18, 1880.

IT needs considerable aplomb, to say the least, for an official who has to deal with one civil war and two famines in India, to deliver himself before a public meeting of such a rosy-hued picture of peace and happiness as Sir R. Temple threw off the other evening. Even the Times was startled by the rich oils and distempers of the artist, and was obliged to suggest that they were a little too bright and thick. But after all, it comes from the sanguine nature of the man that his eyes see everything in the most vivid colours; and he had, moreover, much to say of India which was true and interesting. There is one fact connected with the Empire which men like Sir R. Temple do not ignore, though our public writers and speakers of less account frequently do so,—and that is the difference between the "India" consisting of dark-coloured Princes and populations, and the "India" of official life which consists of the white-coloured Feringee rajahs and their civilian and military followings, by whom the work of governing is carried on. It is almost laughable to read in an English newspaper that "India" would feel much hurt if the British Government were to retire from Candahar, or that "India" made war against Shere Ali in order to secure a safe frontier and break the prestige of Russia. In all such relations, the phrase should be "the Indian" or the "Imperial" Government. We are informed that great changes are at hand in the whole system of our Indian Military administration. Great changes are certainly proposed, and, we believe, some of them are inevitable; but it must be admitted that very grave authority is brought to bear against some of them, such as the proposal to amalgamate the three Presidential armies into one Indian army. "The water-tight compartment" system is regarded with favour by very high persons, whose experience and knowledge entitle their opinions to deference, but we fear the arguments founded on any analogy between the Indian Empire and an ironclad will not be sufficient to silence the guns on the other side. It is quite certain that the armies of Madras and Bombay must be prepared for considerable reductions in their establishments, whether the new Army Corps system be adopted or not. Among the many eminent "Indians" opposed to amalgamation are Lord Napier of Magdala, Sir N. Chamberlain, and Sir F. Roberts; but all these and others are in favour of, or at least not opposed to, considerable changes in the organisation of the Army. The amalgamation is mainly urged by Bengal officers.

It has been decided to bring home the 1st Batn. 20th and the 97th Regiments from the Mediterranean, the latter regiment to be conveyed from Gibraltar to Queenstown in H.M.S. Tamar, which was to have sailed yesterday to carry out this service, the 20th being conveyed to Queenstown in H.M.S. Himalaya, which will leave England on January 1, with drafts to the number of 850 for Gibraltar and Malta.

His Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief has issued an order to the district inspectors of Auxiliary Artillery and the lieutenant-colonels of Brigade Depôts that the new Dress Regulations extend only to officers of the Regular Army, and that officers of the Militia and Volunteers are not to have their uniform altered until they receive further directions on the subject. Some officers, unfortunately, do not seem to have any souls above buttons, and any change which may be introduced in the arrangement of a shoulder-cord is a signal for them at once to see their tailors and get the alteration effected, regardless of expense, or of the feelings of brother officers who are content to wait the issue of direct orders. We hope the order which his Royal Highness has found it necessary to promulgate will have the effect of protecting the pockets of officers of the Militia and Volunteer who are content to serve with a higher aim than that of parading themselves as tailors' dummies.

They evidently take a more sensible view of things in Canada than we do here, for we find in a Militia order issued from Head-quarters, Ottawa, on the 26th ult., the following:—"It not being considered expedient to authorise the use by the officers of Militia of the new pattern shoulder-straps recently adopted for the officers of the Imperial Army, officers of the Militia of Canada are to adhere to the pattern prescribed in the Militia Dress Regulations, 1879, until changed by order."

We hear of one Militia commanding officer who, when the new order came out as to shoulder-straps and badges of rank, at once sent round a letter to his officers calling upon them to get their uniforms altered without delay. Most of them have done so, and now a higher authority directs them to get the shoulder-straps removed. This officer, however, has acted fairly, for he has sent round a second letter stating that accounts may be sent in to him, and that he will hold himself responsible for any expense that has been incurred.

We trust that Mr. Childers will lose no further time in causing strict inquiry being made why in large centres of population certain Militia regiments have been unable to raise 2nd battalions, and why in one instance a notorious recruiting centre has been allowed to reduce a 2nd battalion.

A balance of £11,919 17s. 1d. has been standing in the War-Office books to the debit of the Colonial Government, Cape of Good Hope, on account of the expenses incurred by the expedition to Griqualand West, being the balance due in respect of military expenditure in 1875-76. The original debt was £19,919 17s. 1d., but with the approval of the Treasury it was agreed to accept payment by annual instalments of £4,000, commencing from December, 1876, and extending over five years. Two instalments only appear to have been paid, viz., in January, 1877, and January, 1878. On application being made in January, 1879, for the instalment due December, 1878, the Colonial Office replied that the Crown Agents for the Colonies were without funds to discharge payments on account of the colony. The War Office has since been in communication with the Colonial Office on the subject, and it has been arranged that the sum shall be considered in the general arrangements for the adjustment between Imperial and Colonial funds of the expenditure incurred in the late South-African wars.

Amongst those officers who have recently returned from Afghanistan is Lieutenant Duncan Chesney, formerly of the 58th Foot, now of the 23rd Pioneers, who was through the entire Afghan Campaign with General Roberts. Lieutenant Chesney was slightly wounded, and his health having suffered much from hardships endured during the two years' campaign, he was invalided home from Quetta. He is nephew of the much-lamented Colonel C. Cornwallis Chesney, R.E., and of Colonel George Chesney, R.E., Secretary to the Government of India. He will receive the star, the medal, and four clasps, and it is to be hoped he may ere long be restored to active employment.

Lieutenant-Colonel and Brevet Colonel J. H. Brown, Royal Artillery, retires almost immediately on a pension.

A correspondent who is altogether in favour of the recent order respecting the wearing of uniform being strictly carried out, informs us that in Dublin, which is essentially a garrison town, neither Sir T. Steele, nor any of the Staff, Head-quarters or District, pay the least regard to the Horse Guards circular. "I have," he says, "seen within the last few days most, if not all of them, in the streets at all hours, and in no case did I meet one of them dressed properly in his uniform." How, then, is it to be expected that officers will render cheerful obedience to the command of the authorities? It would be as well if it were understood that the order does not apply to the Staff. Rex sum, et super grammaticam.

A considerable portion of her Majesty's Army is likely to spend but a sorry Christmas of it in Ireland. All furloughs are stopped, all leaves recalled, the troops in readiness to take the field, and another battalion of Guards about to move for "the seat of war," where the troops will be further reinforced by the battalion of the Rifle Brigade now on its way home from Gibraltar. That is not a pleasant picture. We hope it may not assume darker colours ere long.

A "Non-Pensioner," on the permanent staff of the Militia, who has served ten years in the Regulars, for nine years and five months of which he was a non-commissioned officer, writes to us to call attention to the case of non-pensioners. He took his discharge in June, 1869, on the completion of his first term of limited engagement, in accordance with the Circular of that year. Had he remained in the Regular Army, he would have been now entitled to a pension of 2s. 3d. a day for his 21 years' service; instead of which he is now drudging for a pension of 6d. a day, which he will have after 15 years' service on the permanent staff. He suggests that half the time served in the Regulars should be allowed to count towards Militia pension. The case of these few deserving soldiers of the Militia Staff who have served so long in the Regulars deserves attention.

Among the guests of the Queen at Windsor Castle on Monday was Major-General Dillon, Assistant-Military Secretary, who returned to London yesterday.

We are requested by the Secretary of Lloyd's to state that in April, 1880, an insurance was effected at Lloyd's by a regiment for £2,000 on its mess plate, which was being conveyed from London to Portsmouth. The instruction to effect this insurance were received from the president of the mess, but the policy has not yet been handed over to the regiment interested. The regiment interested in this insurance is requested to communicate with the Secretary of Lloyd's, London.

We cannot agree with Lieutenant-Colonel Browne, R.E., in his preference for Pisheen to Candahar, but we must admit that he, as might be expected from an officer of his professional attainments and special knowledge as "Political" in South Afghanistan, gave some strong arguments in favour of his views, in the address he delivered last Wednesday before the East India Association. Candahar is to be evacuated as soon as possible, so the question of the certainty of communication between it and India, vîa Sukkim, may be dismissed for the present. The Kurum Valley is also to be abandoned, and there is no likelihood of the Indian Government proposing to make a railway to Pisheen, or even to construct "a good bridged road, to ensure easy communication between the frontier stations;" and the picture of "a railway, as a direct link along the curtain between bastions of which Pisheen to the south and Peiwar to the north would be the salients," is not one we are destined to see realised in our time. The question of a Russian advance either towards Herat or Badakshan may be solved in an easier way, if we can rely on promises and treaties; and the efforts of Lord Dufferin and Prince Lobanoff may lead to the establishment of an understanding and a policy that will set minds at rest in St. Petersburg and Simla, though they may not be quite as solacing to the chiefs of the countries between the frontiers of the two empires.

A mysterious telegram in one of the daily papers this week informed the world that "the railway from Marmagoram" had been decided upon by the Portuguese Government and our own. What was meant was that the railway which it is proposed to make from the coast near Goa, at Marmagoa, in connection with a port at that place, across the ghâts into British territory at New Hubli, had been so far approved of by the India Office here, that a narrow-gauge rail is to be sanctioned. But the Portuguese Government had arranged with the Indian Government for a railway on the Indian gauge, and our friends at Goa may call out about the "breach of faith," as it will be termed, in an arrangement which offers very great advantages to the Indian and Imperial Governments in establishing a new and commodious port on the West Coast of India, where they can send troops to and from Belgaum and Central India, and without long and toilsome marches to Bombay. There is, at present, no port with any pretensions to safety south of Bombay for hundreds of miles, and the reports of the engineers, Sir J. Hawkshaw and others, show that at a comparatively small cost, a fine and accessible harbour can be made at Marmagoa, whence the proposed railway will run to New Hubli, and complete a most important link in the chain of internal communications across India.

At a fashionable public gathering in a well known watering-place, a few weeks ago, a well-dressed serjeant of "The Buffs" was seen, with his wife and child, enjoying the music of a crack band. The cry of "Mad dog!" was not raised, and ladies and gentlemen did not feel annoyed. It is only the snob who feels hurt at a bit of scarlet coming betwixt the wind and his (s)nobility.

Considerable additions are about to be carried out in the defences of Simon's Town, Cape of Good Hope, and the War Office has made known its intention of recommending the expenditure of £3,200 on the works, in addition to a sum of £5,100 required in order to provide a depôt magazine.

Her Majesty continues to do honour to the officers who have done service in Afghanistan. On 10th inst., Major-General J. Ross, C.B., arrived at Windsor Castle, and had the honour of being included in her Majesty's dinner party. Brigadier-General R. J. Hughes, half-pay, late 63rd Regiment, and Colonel C. G. Arbuthnot, C.B., R.A., Deputy Adjutant General of Artillery at Head-quarters, also arrived at the Castle on Sunday, and dined with her Majesty on Sunday evening.

An Indian contemporary suggests that "some independent representation should be made to the Government on the subject of the twelve or thirteen lakhs of prize-money awaiting decision, before it is absorbed in the war accounts now in course of preparation." Perhaps some friend of the soldier will take the hint, and put a question on the subject when Parliament assembles.

Colonel C. M. MacGregor, C.B., C.S.I., C.I.E., Bengal Staff Corps, who commanded a brigade, under Sir F. Roberts, in the Cabul-Candahar Field Force, will arrive in England in the course of the next few days, on three months' leave. Colonel MacGregor will leave England in March next, en route to assume his new duties as Quartermaster-General of the Indian Army.

There is not the slightest foundation for the report that Major-General Lord Chelmsford, G.C.B., has been selected to succeed Lieutenant-General J. Turner, C.B., in command of the Woolwich District. Woolwich has always been the head-quarters of our Artillery, and the gunners in the district far outnumber the other arms; such being the case, it is scarcely likely that the head of the Army will favour the proposal for constituting the command an Infantry General's appointment. Nor is the change desirable. All practical soldiers, having the interests of the Service at heart, and unimbued with petty considerations of class prejudice, must see that an Artillery General is best qualified to carry out the duties of a command in which artillery predominate. An artilleryman should be able to report on the efficiency of an infantry battalion, but it is idle to deny that there are subjects in connection with the duties of an artilleryman of which an infantry officer can but possess a superficial knowledge.

ALBATROSS, Com. Errington, was at Chefoo on Oct. 30.

ALEXANDRA, Capt. Lord Walter Kerr, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir B. Seymour, K.C.B., was to be ready for sea on Thursday, last week, but it is hardly likely that she will leave Malta at present, unless the European Concert should necessitate another parade in some other waters.

ALGERINE arrived at Sheerness on Saturday afternoon from Belfast, where she has been built by Messrs. Harland and Wolff. The contractors' work will be overhauled and examined, and all the necessary work will be completed at Sheerness Dockyard. She was brought to Sheerness in charge of a navigating party from the Royal Naval Barracks.

ANTELOPE, Lieut.-Com. Hon. W. H. Jolliffe, was ordered to leave Constantinople on the 6th inst. for Malta, to undergo a refit during the absence on leave of her Majesty's Ambassador.

ASSISTANCE, Capt. C. E. Buckle, having on board a detachment of the Chatham Division Royal Marines, from Ireland, arrived at Chatham on Sunday, and the detachment, numbering nearly 200 of all ranks, disembarked and proceeded to head-quarters. On Monday morning the Assistance left Chatham for Portsmouth.

BITTERN, Com. Pusey, was to be ready to leave Malta for the Bosphorus, whither she is ordered, about the 18th inst.

BOADICEA, Comdre. Richards, C.B., was at Simon's Bay up to Nov. 22, and intended to leave for the West Coast at the end of November, but the cruise has since been postponed, and the Boadicea will await the arrival of the Dido at Simon's Bay.

COCKATRICE, Com. H. T. Grenfell, was to leave the Danube for Malta on the 3rd inst.

COMUS, Capt. East, was to leave Yokohama for Hong Kong about Nov. 20. The dramatic corps of the ship intended to give a performance on Nov. 12 for the Atalanta Fund.

CONDOR, Com. Day, which has been engaged in carrying mails between the Squadron and Brindisi, has arrived at Malta.

CROCODILE, Capt. Doughty, arrived at Gibraltar on Sunday from Halifax, with the 97th Regiment on board, to relieve the Rifle Brigade, who will go home in her Majesty's troopship Himalaya, the arrival of which vessel is hourly expected.

CRUISER, Com. Wetherall, is on the move between Malta, Sicily, and Corfu. Mails for her should be sent to Malta, where she will spend Christmas.

CURACOA, Capt. W. H. Cuming, was at Penang on Oct. 30.

CYGNET, Lieut.-Com. W. Wilson, is told off for duty at Corfu, Syra, and Cyprus.

DECOY, Lieut.-Com. Von Donop, will shortly leave Gibraltar and proceed to Malta, and have a refit on her joining the station from the West Coast of Africa.

EGERIA, Com. C. Johnstone, was at Singapore on Oct. 30.

ENCOUNTER, Capt. Hon. A. Denison. A report has been received at Hong Kong that Capt. Denison, upon landing at Chinkiang, was surrounded by the natives and pelted with stones. He was rescued from the mob by his boat's crew, and the matter has since been placed in the hands of the British Consul for investigation.

EURYALUS, Capt. King, flagship of Rear-Admiral Gore Jones, C.B., went into Bombay Harbour on Nov. 20, after a cruise of about eight months. Leaving Bombay in April last, the Euryalus called at Trincomalee, and steamed thence to Mauritius. There the Governor of the island was received on board as a passenger, and conveyed to Bourbon; after which the Euryalus returned to Mauritius, calling at the following ports in their order en route to Bombay:—Tamatave (in Madagascar), Seychelles Islands, Zanzibar, Trincomalee, Rangoon, Trincomalee (a second time), and Colombo. The cruise was not an eventful one. At Mauritius the officers of the vessel entertained the islanders at a ball which was attended by the Governor and a large number of guests; and they also gave a theatrical performance in aid of the Soldiers' Recreation Rooms. These festivities were repeated on a smaller scale at Trincomalee and Rangoon. At Rangoon, we are sorry to learn, one of the crew fell from the mizen-top mast cross-trees into the sea, breaking some of his fingers against the bulwarks and otherwise injuring himself. He was rescued by another member of the crew—a plucky young fellow named Moore—whose conduct on the occasion is worthy of substantial recognition. During the cruise the Euryalus performed a very satisfactory full-speed trial, surpassing anything on record in the commission. She is not expected to leave Bombay before February next.—Bombay Gazette.

EXPRESS, Lieut.-Com. Hamond, was to leave Malta for her station, Gibraltar, on the 15th inst.

FAWN, Com. Aldrich, is at Malta preparing for her new crew. The recommission of the Fawn may be expected to be a short one, as she is not in a fit state to run another three years.

FIREFLY, Lieut.-Com. E. Law, has been taking an exceptional cruise, having made a trip up the Congo as far as Nodi. There is considerable activity in colonisation on the West Coast of Africa, France and Portugal having both made a determined effort of late to get a firmer footing among the natives. This being so, the British Consul thought it as well to have a look round, and the Firefly being at his disposal, he made the run up the Congo, a service which was performed by the little ship without mishap.—Hampshire Telegraph.

FLY, Com. A. St. Clair. According to the Japan Gazette, "the British ship Cilurnum, from Hong Kong to San Francisco, was passed on Nov. 8, dismasted, deck stove in, all boats lost, &c., making for Yokohama. The only vessel of H.B.M.'s Navy in that port when the news arrived was the gunboat Fly, which was said to be quite unfit for towing service of any kind. U.S. Admiral Clitz very kindly placed the Swatara at the service of the Naval authorities, but the offer was declined, the Comus, then in Kobe, being notified of the affair by telegraph. At the time of our going to press this evening, the only British ship-of-war in Yokohama is still lying in harbour. The captain of the Cilurnum wished most earnestly to be reported; of course he did, and why? Because an appeal for assistance made by a distressed seaman has never yet been disregarded when assistance could be rendered; and if H.B.M.'s gunboat Fly does not leave forthwith, we appeal to Admiral Clitz, in the name of common humanity, to despatch a vessel of his squadron in search of a dismantled ship, scarcely fit to contend with ordinary weather, attempting to beat up to this port, under jury-masts, during the north-east monsoon. The time has been when the vessels of the British Fleet were foremost in obeying the calls of the distressed. Probably, however, the rules have been changed, and positive orders issued to stop securely at anchor under all or any circumstances, for in no other way can we account for the Fly remaining in harbour. Should the Cilurnum be lost for want of timely aid, a heavy responsibility will rest somewhere; and we repeat that if the British gunboat is unfit for the service, or is prevented undertaking it by regulations of which we are ignorant, or, from any other cause, does not move, the assistance of any other nationality will be a graceful act of kindness the British public will know how to estimate at its true value." "In response to inquiries made on board the U.S. flagship Richmond, we were courteously informed that on the receipt of the Japan Gazette, conveying the first intimation of the distressed condition of the Cilurnum, Admiral Clitz at once placed the Swatara at the disposal of Com. St. Clair, the senior British naval officer in port, but for reasons sufficiently satisfactory the kind offer was declined for the present, Com. St. Clair having telegraphed to Capt. East, of the Comus, then in Hiogo, full particulars, and it is probable that vessel has gone in search of the Cilurnum. For the ready and valuable assistance offered by Admiral Clitz, the best and warmest thanks of the British public are due; and it is reasuring to know from so good an authority as Capt. Benham, of the Richmond, that the Cilurnum is not in a position sufficiently grave to render assistance absolutely necessary, and with weather usual to the season, she should make slow but steady progress to some Japanese port where telegraphic communication can be had with Yokohama; but the probability exists that she will eventually make her way to the entrance of the Gulf of Yedo, where steam assistance can easily be obtained."

FLYING FISH, Lieut.-Com. Hoskyn, was at Singapore on Oct. 30.

FOXHOUND, Lieut.-Com. W. Nowell, was at Hankow on Oct. 30.

HIMALAYA, Capt. Brent, arrived at Gibraltar from Plymouth on the 12th inst.

IRON DUKE, Capt. Cleveland, flagship of Vice-Admiral Coote, C.B. A letter in the Western Morning News from the Iron Duke, dated Nagasaki, Oct. 30, says:—"On Monday, Oct. 25, the Iron Duke was making the passage from the inland seas of Japan to Nagasaki. A strong gale was blowing at the time, and was what is known to sailors as a 'dead muzzler' into the bargain, so that some heavy seas were shipped from time to time. It became necessary to lash the anchors afresh; and, whilst engaged in this work, a young seaman, named Alexander Mann, was washed out of the bowline in which he was slung into the sea, and was rapidly carried astern. The second captain of the forecastle, Daniel Mutch, rushed aft to the taffrail, and, without a moment's hesitation, plunged headlong into the seething water, and succeeded in reaching Mann, who, fortunately, could swim. Mutch placed him on the life-buoy, and remained by him until a boat came and took them both inboard. This is the second time that Mutch has jumped overboard to the assistance of a comrade, and it is to be hoped that the proper authorities will be communicated with and some notice taken of his gallantry. On the following day, whilst the ship was under all plain sail, and going about eight knots, another case of falling overboard occurred, and this time with a melancholy result. The watch was piped to set the lower studding-sail; John Irish, an able seaman, was over the ship's side with the sail-tack block in one hand, whilst with the other he had hold of a piece of wood scarping, which was nailed to the gunwale of the ship. His weight proved too much for this, for it broke away, and Irish fell into the water. Scarcely had he reached it when a leading seaman named Joseph Summers, was overboard after him and did his utmost to keep him afloat. But Irish was unable to swim, and Summeos, becoming exhausted, had let go his hold of the drowning man, who soon sank to rise no more. He had made several clutches for life at Summers, who at last found it necessary to look after his own preservation. It was with difficulty the ship was stopped, for she had great way on her. Everything, however, was done that could be; but the lifeboat arrived too late, and Summers, much exhausted, was brought on board. Search was made for the body, which, however, did not rise; and as nothing further could be done the ship made the best of her way to Nagasaki. This is the first case of drowning at sea that we have had, and has cast a gloom over the ship's company, for Irish was a man much respected. I may mention that both Mutch and Summers are West-country men.

KESTREL, Com. W. M. Lang, was at Singapore on Oct. 30.

LAPWING, Com. W. G. Scott, was at Tientsin on Oct. 30.

LILY, Com. S. Grove, was at Hong Kong on Oct. 30.

MAGPIE, Capt. R. H. Napier, was at Amoy on Oct. 30.

MALABAR, Capt. J. Grant, left Portsmouth on Wednesday morning for Bombay with Indian reliefs, including four batteries of Artillery and drafts for cavalry and infantry regiments, numbering altogether 67 officers, 1,048 men, 100 women, and 107 children. At the time the Malabar put to sea a moderate gale was blowing, accompanied by a drenching rain.

MERCURY, sister-ship to the Iris, has made a trial at sea of a new crank shaft, fitted by Messrs. Maudslay, in lieu of the original shaft, which was condemned after the full-power trials. The new shaft, unlike the old one, is cast hollow, and is made of Whitworth steel compressed when fluid. The trial was intended to last for a couple of hours, but the full time was not completed in consequence of the heating of the bearings. So far as the shaft was concerned, it gave satisfaction. The total power developed amounted to a mean of 6,603 horses, resulting in the extraordinary speed of 18 knots. This result will compare favourably with those obtained at the six hours' trial, when the hull was clean and the engines were worked to their full capacity.

MODESTE, Capt. J. G. Mead, was at Shanghai on Oct. 30.

MONARCH, Capt. Tryon, C.B., will probably proceed to Cyprus from Malta about the 28th inst.

MOORHEN, Lieut.-Com. W. Carey, was at Singapore on Oct. 30.

MOSQUITO, Lieut.-Com. G. E. Grey, was at Ningpo on Oct. 30.

ORONTES, Capt. R. G. Kinahan, left Portsmouth on Wednesday afternoon for Plymouth, en route to Malta, with new crews for the Téméraire, Helicon, and Fawn. After embarking supernumeraries, the ship proceeded on her passage, calling at Queenstown and Gibraltar.

PEGASUS, Com. Hon. H. N. S. Hood, was at Shanghai on Oct. 30.

SERAPIS, Capt. Twiss, arrived at Portsmouth on Saturday from Bombay, bringing the 6th Regiment from Aden, and numerous drafts, the total complement being 56 officers, 10 ladies, 11 children, 72 men, 68 women, and 172 children. Six deaths occurred on the voyage. After leaving Malta, during the night, a very heavy shock was felt, and it was found by a diver that two blades of the screw had been knocked off, apparently by coming in contact with some wreckage. Fortunately the weather for the remainder of the voyage was very fine. The body of General Brooke, who was killed in the sortie from Candahar, was brought home for burial in Ireland, and was landed in the afternoon with full military honours. The deceased officer is the first British General killed in action since the battle of Waterloo.

SHELDRAKE, Lieut.-Com. M. Bridger, was at Foochow on Oct. 30.

SUPERB, Capt. Ward, sailed from Gibraltar for Malta on the 6th inst.

SWIFTSURE. Orders were received at Devonport on Saturday, that all work on the Swiftsure was to cease, and that the date of her commission by Admiral G. O. Willes as flagship on the China station would be delayed for some little time. The Admiralty also requested to be informed of the number of petty officers intended for the Swiftsure who could be appropriated in recommissioning the Téméraire, Helicon, and Fawn, on the Mediterranean station; the men to be ready to leave in the Orontes, troopship, on Wednesday next. It is understood that this demand for petty officers has necessitated the delay in the commission of the Swiftsure.

SWINGER, Lieut.-Com. O. Tudor, was at Amoy on Oct. 30.

TAMAR, Capt. Royse, arrived at Portsmouth on Monday morning with troops, the relieved crew of the Flamingo, and a number of naval supernumeraries. She left Barbadoes on the 6th, Jamaica on the 12th, and Bermuda on Nov. 29. The Tamar arrived in Plymouth Sound early on Wednesday morning from Portsmouth, bringing around the late crew of the Flamingo. The crew were transferred to the Royal Adelaide during the afternoon to receive pay, &c., previous to going on leave of absence. The Tamar is to have defects made good as rapidly as possible, to enable her to leave for another trooping tour by the end of January.

TORCH, Com. Selby, was to leave Constantinople for Malta as soon as she was relieved by the Coquette, which has been ordered to Constantinople from Smyrna.

TRIUMPH, Capt, Markham, flying the flag of Admiral Stirling, was at Payta on November 8. She was to proceed next day to Chimbote to coal, and thence go on to Callao.

TURQUOISE, Capt. Medlycott, was at Tahiti on Oct. 15, about to leave for a cruise, and would return by Nov. 8.

TYNE, Com. John E. Stokes, has been docked at Chatham to have defects made good, which will cost £1,100. The 15th prox. is the date fixed for her to leave with new crews and stores for the Fly, Foxhound, Magpie, and Vigilant, on the China station. She will call at Portsmouth and Plymouth en route, to ship parcels for officers and men serving in China. The relieved crews and time-expired men and invalids from the China Squadron will return by her to Plymouth.

VALOROUS, Capt. Morant. Before despatching the Valorous on her special service on the West Coast of Ireland, the Admiralty directed that she should be provided with a steam cutter, and as there was not one of the required class unappropriated at Devonport, she was supplied with one belonging to another ship. It is a little indicative of the nature of the duty that may devolve upon her, says the Hampshire Telegraph, to find that it was distinctly ordered that the boat should not alone have a 7-pounder rifled gun, but should also be fitted with a Nordenfelt gun. As yet it has not been found necessary to use anything in Ireland larger than buckshot, but the Government must have good reason for fearing that matters may grow worse, when a ship ordered to the West Coast is thus specially provided with our latest type of mitrailleur.

VERNON, Capt. Gordon. Mr. Thomas Miller, chief engineer of the Vernon, who has for so many years been connected with torpedoes, and has been to Woolwich more than once in connection with the manufacture of Whiteheads, has brought forward a plan which will add to the efficiency of the weapon. Of course the idea is to a certain extent kept a secret, but one effect of his improvement is that the buoyancy of the torpedo is materially increased. By becoming identified with torpedo warfare, Mr. Miller has probably provided for himself a home billet from which he will not be disturbed so long as he holds his present rank, and though some may be inclined to grumble at a snug berth being thus monopolised, it is just one of those few cases in which the retention of one man is really for the good of the Service.—Hampshire Telegraph.

VIGILANT, Lieut.-Com. Annesley, was at Shanghai on Oct. 30.

WYE, Staff Com. H. D. Sarratt, has arrived in the Medway from Rio Janeiro. She has on board stores from the Naval depôt there, the establishment having been broken up.

The following men have been awarded medals for long service and good conduct:—Henry Snedden, leading stoker, of the Malabar; Thomas Miall, caulker, of the Asia; S. Gingall, gunner's mate, of the Charybdis; W. S. Martins, leading seaman, of the Cambridge; Edward Hender, capt. of the maintop, of the Impregnable; G. J. Warden, writer, and J. J. Barnicott, ship's corpl., of the Royal Naval Barracks; Alexander M'Donald, sailmaker, of the Modeste; W. Folkerd, serjt. R.M., of the Comus; J. Owen, capt. of foretop, of the Téméraire; J. A. Creal, ward-room steward, of the Jumna; Samuel Philps, commissioned boatman, of the Coastguard.

It is officially announced in New York that Mr. Thompson has tendered his resignation as Secretary of the Navy, in order to accept the chairmanship of the American Panama Canal Company.

Admiral Popoff, being satisfied with the behaviour of the Livadia, intends to build an ironclad on a similar plan. The new vessel, to be called the Catherine II., will be protected with 20 inches of armour, rising three feet above the water line. It is undecided yet whether the vessel will carry her guns in three turrets, as represented in the model in the St. Petersburg Admiralty, or whether they will be fired en barbette behind an oval armoured breastwork. The latter plan is said to be the latest idea of Admiral Popoff. The ironclad will be constructed in segments at the Galerni Dockyard at St. Petersburg, and afterwards put together at Nicolaeff; the vessel being intended for service in the Black Sea. The engines will be made at the Baltic Iron Works on the Neva, and the armour-plates will be rolled in England. The vessel will be armed with 80-ton guns.

The Foochow correspondent of the London and China Telegraph says:—"The revenue cruiser Fei Hoo, which arrived here on Oct. 24, has an undertaking in hand which, if successful, will reflect discredit upon the surveying abilities of the vessels employed for that purpose in the British Navy. The Fei Hoo is to survey the waters in the vicinity of Foochow, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth in relation to a hidden reef of doubtful existence. This barrier to navigation is supposed to be the 'Hebe Reef,' which was searched for without success some two or three years ago by H.B.M.'s surveying-vessel Nassau. The existence of the reef was reported in Shanghai by one of the Foochow pilots as being a veritable fact.

The annual dinner of No. 5 Battery, of the London Brigade of Naval Artillery Volunteers, took place on Tuesday evening at the Holborn Restaurant. The chair was taken by Lieutenant C. E. Seth Smith, who was supported by Lord Ashley, Mr. Pender, M.P., Lieutenant Foote, R.N., Surgeon-Major Cowie, Mr. Mindry, R.N., &c. The Chairman, in giving "The Army, Navy, and Reserve Forces," regretted the absence of Mr. Thomas Brassey, M.P., who had sent a telegram stating that he was detained on Admiralty business. Lord Ashley, in responding to the toast of "The other Batteries of the Brigade," stated that No. 5 Battery held its place, both in numbers and efficiency, as compared with any other. A great future was before the Naval Volunteers, and he trusted to see batteries established in every sea port in the United Kingdom. He urged that every battery should be instructed in torpedo drill, and hoped that they would soon obtain the capitation grant.

The Russian ironclad the Duke of Edinburgh has arrived at Kiel on her way to the China waters, where she will join the Russian Squadron already stationed there.

The German corvette Victoria, which formed part of the European Squadron in Teodo Bay, is ordered to Bombay, en route for the China station.

THE INFLEXIBLE TRIALS.

The series of trials on board the Inflexible began on Thursday. More than six years have elapsed since she was commenced, and she has been afloat more than four. The experiments were attended by the Controller of the Navy, the Director of Naval Ordnance, the Director of Naval Construction, and the members of the Heavy Gun Committee, and were carried out under the direction of Rear-Admiral the Hon. F. A. Foley, Admiral-Superintendent at Portsmouth. The guns are of the Woolwich Service pattern, but of the four which are to constitute the armament of the Inflexible only three have at present been mounted in the turrets, the one to occupy the left of one of the turrets having been detained for additional trials at Woolwich. By the trials in the Inflexible the point to be determined is not the actual capabilities of the 80-ton guns, but whether their discharge would cripple the ship carrying them. The Inflexible got under weigh from Spithead shortly after 10 o'clock, and the firing began at noon, there being a fresh westerly wind. There was fortunately a clear atmosphere, and throughout the trials care had to be taken that there was an unobstructed range of six miles, the projectiles used traversing some five miles before ricocheting, and their weight being 1,700 lb. With the object of clearing the grooves of the guns, three scaling charges were fired, and the hydraulic loading-gear having been set in motion, but little time elapsed before the gun in the fore turret was ready for use, but as the hydraulic arrangements of the ship are not complete, no calculation was made of the time in which one of the weapons could be loaded, moved to the required angle, and fired. As a precautionary measure progressive charges were employed, and the maximum charge was not reached by 50 pounds, although the weapons were fired nine times by means of electricity from the citadel, the charge increasing in weight from 300 to 400 lb. Each turret has an internal diameter of 28 ft., and an external diameter of 33 ft. 10 in., and without guns weighing 320 tons, being constructed with compound armour plates, specially manufactured by Messrs. Cammell, of Sheffield. They were revolved on Thursday the same as they would be in action, motive-power being furnished to each turret by a pumping-engine, working up to 170 horses, and instead, as has hitherto been the practice, of the guns being placed on carriages supported by trunnions, each gun is supported on three points, the trunnions resting on brass blocks, which slide on fixed beams bolted down to the floor of the turret, while the breech rests on a third block, sliding, like the others, upon a beam or table. Behind each of the trunnion-blocks are two hydraulic presses for checking recoil and running the gun out, and a third press is fixed vertically beneath the beam on which the breech rests, by which means the muzzle of the gun, which pivots on its trunnions with a large preponderance towards the breech, can be easily raised or lowered. The nine shots were fired on the beam, and at slight angles to the beam, and while the guns were pointed horizontally in the first seven, during the two final rounds the weapons were slightly depressed to the extent of two degrees. The hydraulic buffers answered their purpose admirably, the maximum recoil being 3 ft., and the heel of the ship not being sensibly affected, although she was, during the trials, kept moving under very easy steam. The concussion arising from each charge was tremendous, but the privileged visitors on board were kept out of harm's way by being ordered below, the only persons in the turrets being Capt. Hopkins and the crew from the gunnery-ship Excellent, specially trained for the trials. The ship withstood the charges most satisfactorily, the list of defects returned being practically nil. Some shots were fired on the beam, and some just before it. The simultaneous firing of the three guns may, perhaps, cause a greater shock, but Thursday's experiments tend to show that they can be worked under any conditions without danger to the ship or the crew. No casualty of any kind occurred during the day, and at 6 p.m. the Inflexible returned to her anchorage at Spithead. Yesterday the charges of powder were to be increased to 450 lb.

In continuation of the competitive trials between the Nordenfelt and the Hotchkiss guns, an important series of experiments was made last week with a $1\frac{1}{2}$-in. weapon of the former description, on Whale Island, under the direction of Capt. Hopkins and the officers of the Excellent. The first round, with a chilled shell, filled, was fired direct at a 2-in. iron plate, through which it passed. A round was next fired at two 1-in. steel plates in contact, with a $\frac{1}{2}$-in. plate 2 ft. 6 in. in the rear, in close contact with which was a $\frac{1}{4}$-in. plate. The result was that the projectile passed through the first plate, its point being a $\frac{1}{4}$in. beyond the bulge made in the second plate. An empty chilled shot was then used against a similar target, and it went through the first plate, and, missing the second, was stopped by the $\frac{1}{2}$-in. plate, which was badly cracked, while the $\frac{1}{4}$-in. plate was slightly dented. On this charge being repeated, the shell, after penetrating through the outer plate, had its point left projecting half an inch beyond a bulge in the second plate, which was much cracked. Three charges with chilled shells, filled and empty, were afterwards directed against a $1\frac{1}{2}$-in. iron plate, the gun being pointed at an angle of 45 degrees, and two of the shots glanced off the target, while one, striking a weak point, got through. Other experiments against the series of plates followed, and on a charge being fired at a $\frac{5}{8}$-in. iron plate, in front of a 2-in. iron one, the shot passed through the first, and cracked in the rear the second plate. Another projectile went clean through a $1\frac{1}{2}$-in. iron plate, with the gun at an angle of 60 degrees, and with a direct fire another projectile went through a $\frac{1}{4}$-in. steel plate in front of a 2-in. iron plate. The range was uniformly 300 yards.

The Rev. James White, M.A., head master of the Oxford Military College, and formerly mathematical instructor at the Military Academy, Woolwich, has been appointed head master and chaplain of the Royal Naval School, New Cross, vice the Rev. E. B. Slater, resigned.

THE INTERNATIONAL FLEET.

The following account of the breaking-up of the Fleet, under the command of Vice-Admiral Sir F. B. Seymour, is from the correspondent of the Standard, who says, writing on the 5th inst.:—"The long looked-for permission to leave Teodo Bay having arrived, Vice-Admiral Sir F. Beauchamp Seymour, the Commander-in-Chief of the United European Fleet, at half-past 7 in the morning of Sunday, the 5th, made the general signal, 'Admiral requests ships will part company when convenient.' The various officers in command had previously received orders from their respective Governments to leave when the British Admiral should give his sanction, and the signal, therefore, found all ships ready to weigh their anchors. And up they came with willing heave of many hands, each one individual lending his aid towards attaining some preferable port, where society or recreation in town or field might be found for officers and men. First of all, weighed the Monarch, bearing Admiral Seymour's flag, and looking the perfection of a man-of-war, with her low hull and lofty spars; and the other ships—viz., Thunderer, Condor, and Helicon—having formed in her wake, proceeded slowly up the gulf, so as to turn in the broad part of the Bay, passing en route the French ships Suffren (flag), Reine Blanche, and Hirondelle. No sooner had the Monarch started on her course than the French flagship greeted our Admiral with a salute of fifteen guns, which the Monarch returned. On the way down the Gulf our crews heartily cheered the Frenchmen, who responded with a will, the rigging of all ships being manned. Meanwhile, both Italian and French ships had weighed, and the Italian Roma (flag), Maria Pia, and Marc Antonio Colonna, proceeding also up the Gulf, greeted our ships on meeting with cheers, the flagship saluting. Both the salute and cheers were promptly returned. The French ships then took up their station astern of the British line, the Italians forming astern of the French. The line of ten vessels thus formed proceeded down the Bay, where the Austrian, Russian, and German ships had been anchored. When the Monarch appeared round the point, the Svetlana, bearing the Russian Admiral's flag, received the Commander-in-Chief with a salute, which the Monarch returned as she rounded the stern of the Svetlana, and the mutual cheers given as the ships passed showed the perfect friendship existing between the representatives of the Bear and the Lion. The Svetlana and Ascold had now shortened in their cable ready for weighing. The Austrian ships Custozza and Prinz Eugéne, and the German ship Victoria, were by this time (10.25 a.m.) under weigh, and Comdre. Nauta saluted our Admiral as the Monarch approached, which salute was speedily returned—noisy tokens of mutual regard and esteem—the German Victoria following with a similar demonstration. The cheering was resumed in passing, and our men being by this time fairly hoarse, were not sorry to pipe down, having vented in cheers their excitement at leaving this unattractive harbour. The Austrian and German ships accompanied us for a short distance to sea, when the Commander-in-Chief made the signal for the ships to proceed independently. He then wished all 'Adieu,' which the Austrians replied to with 'Bon voyage,' and the different squadrons then proceeded on their separate courses. Probably so varied a Fleet has never before assembled, and with the pleasure felt at having achieved an object, and at return to kindlier ports, is mingled a feeling of regret at parting. Great unanimity, hospitality, and entente cordiale have prevailed among all; and the intimacy thus induced, and the greater knowledge thus obtained by each of his neighbour, has increased the good-will which always prevails among sailors. Of our Admiral there is but one opinion—well expressed by a distinguished foreign officer, who remarked that notwithstanding his many years' service, he would willingly spend the remainder of his lifetime under the orders of Admiral Seymour."

THE LATE LIEUTENANT HEYLAND.

We have received from the Admiralty the following extract from a letter from Vice-Admiral Hood, C.B., commanding the Channel Squadron, dated November 30 last, reporting the death by drowning of Lieutenant W. P. L. Heyland, R.N., of the Minotaur, in saving the life of an able seaman who had fallen overboard at sea:—"At 9.50 a.m. on the 25th, whilst getting the jibboom in, Joseph Marston, A.B., was washed overboard from the bowsprit. The sea was far too heavy to lower a boat, and I decided at once not to do so. The engines were stopped, and, as the man floated slowly by the ship, a life-buoy was thrown to him, which he reached. A grass line was veered away from the stern, in hopes that he might get hold of it, and be hauled on board. At this moment Lieutenant W. P. Heyland, who was officer of the watch, jumped overboard, got hold of the grass line, and succeeded in giving it to Marston. Both were then holding on by it, and were slowly drawn up towards the stern, and a Jacob's ladder lowered to the water for them to get hold of. A second line, with a life-buoy, was also veered astern to them. When Lieut. Heyland had been hauled up near the stern, he let go of the grass line and endeavoured to get hold of the Jacob's ladder, but failed to reach it. At this time a very heavy sea washed over him, and from that moment he became quite motionless, and apparently insensible. Arthur Triggs, torpedo instructor, went down the Jacob's ladder, and, dropping into the water, got hold of the second line and life-buoy and put them close to Lieut. Heyland who, however, remained motionless with his head down, in which position he went down and was lost. Marston was eventually hauled on board by the grass line, as was Triggs after Lieut. Heyland sank. It was a most gallant act on the part of Lieut. Heyland to jump overboard in such a heavy sea, when he must have known it was impossible to lower a boat; and his death has been deeply felt by all on board. This officer was in possession of both the silver and bronze medals awarded for saving life at sea on two previous occasions. Great credit is due to Arthur Triggs who at very considerable risk endeavoured to save Lieut. Heyland."

UNIFORM IN PLAY-HOURS (!).

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—In a leading article in your last number, on the subject of wearing uniform, you do not, I think, represent the sentiments of most officers on the subject, and this is all the more remarkable, as the Army and Navy Gazette generally expresses in the happiest manner the ideas of the class that furnishes its most numerous readers. Uniform, you say, should always be worn, because, first, foreign officers always wear it, and have even been known to use it as a hunting costume; 2nd, because newly-fledged subalterns like strutting about the streets in their fine feathers; 3rd, because, in the long run, it is cheaper than plain clothes; 4th, because the Queen's Regulations say it should be done; 5th, because any man who is ashamed of his cloth should not stay in the Army. Now, with regard to the first reason, it must be remembered that most foreign officers employ their leisure-hours in a very different manner to their English brethren; and whereas the former spend most of their playtime lounging about cafés or ogling pretty girls, the latter will more probably indulge in some violent exercise,—riding, rowing, or a long cross-country walk, for which uniform is utterly unsuited. The second is not a very important reason. The third is, I regret to state, a fallacy, for nothing is more expensive to wear than uniform. My bill for repairs and new uniform averages over £30 a year, while a third of that sum is sufficient to pay for my plain clothes. Were uniform to be worn on all occasions, it would double an expense that is already absurdly out of proportion to our meagre pay. No doubt, the Queen's Regulations say that uniform is invariably to be worn, but practically this regulation has always been a dead-letter, and few officers can see the wisdom of disinterring it. I admit some do, but they are mostly men who never leave the barrack square, whose ideas are bounded by the barrack walls, and who think the National Debt is of less importance than the canteen accounts. With regard to your fifth reason, I can only say that in all my service I have never met an officer who was not proud to serve his Queen and country, and who did not glory in his uniform, but for these very reasons most officers do not like to thrust in other peoples' faces a dress that of itself implies a superiority to those who may not wear it. Do you suppose the Commander-in-Chief (honoured and beloved by every soldier) will walk about London in uniform? or will the Household Brigade lounge in the Park in the trappings of war? And yet what is sauce for the goose ought to be sauce for the gander. The spirit of fair-play that has ever distinguished the Army and Navy Gazette will, I am sure, admit a protest even from those with whom it does not agree.—I am, &c.,

ONE WHO DIFFERS.

[Our correspondent, we admit, represents the views of a considerable number of officers, but for all that, we must hold that however weak our arguments may be in favour of obedience to the recent re-enforcement of the standing orders of the Army in regard to the wearing of uniform, there is one which cannot be gainsaid, and that is the fact that the Commander-in-Chief has issued an order which all soldiers are bound to obey. It is a great fallacy to suppose that most foreign officers are more addicted to the amusements "One Who Differs" describes, than our own young gentlemen; and the "pretty girls," at all events, would not be a bit more displeased at being ogled by gallants in uniform than by admirers in pot-hats and shooting-jackets. The object of the order is, we take it, to be a stricter observance of existing regulations in the streets of garrison towns, by officers who now seem to regard wearing of uniform in public when off duty as a nuisance. London is not a garrison town, and the Head-quarters' Staff there do not wear uniform, unless they are on duty. There should be no difficulty, with a properly framed code of rules, in allowing officers who are inclined to ride, row, or walk, to go out of barracks in a suitable dress, though we think, for horseback, uniform undress is as good as any that can be devised, except for the hunting-field.—ED. A. & N. G.]

With one or two trifling exceptions, the course at the Royal Naval College for the past year has flown smoothly enough, and Sir Charles Shadwell has received from the Admiralty a complimentary letter on the annual report. Misconduct on the part of junior officers is becoming more and more rare, and rejections are also becoming fewer as the Service is getting into the groove of Greenwich, and knows what to expect when the course has to be gone through. The greatest errors committed of late appear to have been in attempts to dodge the examiners in some way or the other; but anyone with an atom of common-sense, which, by the way, is a rare quality, should know that the examiners are quite equal to combat with any attempts at getting the weather guage of them. They are the examiners, constantly at the work, and the examinee must indeed be verdant if he imagines he can get the blind side in his small experience. One sub-lieutenant has just been deprived of six months' time for trying the little game on.—Hampshire Telegraph.

Tent-Work in Palestine. By Claude Reignier Conder, R.E. (R. Bentley and Son.)

This highly interesting record of discovery and adventure in Palestine has just been published for the committee of the Palestine Exploration Fund, by the officer in command of the Survey Expedition. It may be remembered that the survey of Western Palestine was commenced under Captain Stewart, R.E., in the early part of 1872, and that on his return to England, in consequence of ill-health, the completion of the work was entrusted to the author of this volume, who returned to England in 1875, having surveyed 4,700 square miles; the remaining 1,300 miles were finished by Lieutenant Kitchener in 1877. The work is intended merely as Lieutenant Conder's personal history of what he did and saw, while the conclusions he arrives at and the identifications he proposes are entirely his own. The scientific results of the expedition will be published with a large map, in the form of memoirs, 26 in number, one to every sheet. The volume now published by Lieutenant Conder is intended as an introduction, or résumé, calculated to afford the general public a facility in understanding and appreciating the magnitude of the work accomplished by the survey party. In its introductory pages the author observes that the main object of the survey of Palestine may be said to have been to collect materials in illustration of the Bible, inasmuch as no stronger confirmation of the historic and authentic character of the sacred volume can be afforded than that of a comparison of the land and the book. A work such as this is, carefully prepared under the personal direction of the writer, and treating of a subject so profoundly interesting, not only to the scientific professor, but to the most humble student of Bible history, will, no doubt, attract attention. It would be a pleasing task to transcribe at length several of the author's vivid descriptions of the scenes he witnessed during his sojourn in Palestine, but we must be content with mentioning one—the description of the scene in the "Wailing Place" of the Jews, where they congregate to bewail "our people that are wanderers, our priests that are defiled, our temple that is cast down." There, in a narrow street, the Jews assemble, crowding round the great wall that bars them from their temple, and uttering piteous lamentations. "The scene is striking from the great size and strength of the mighty stones which rise without the door or window up to the domes and cypresses above, suggesting how utterly the original worshippers are cast out by men of alien race and faith. The emotion of those who pray is affecting in the extreme. Here an aged woman in a white veil stands mute, her eyes fixed on the great stones of the Eternal House. Here an elder leans his tearful face against the wall, his lips moving, his prayer-book unheeded." Before closing this attractive volume, it is right to mention that it is embellished with numerous illustrations by J. W. Whymper.

Handbook to the Mediterranean. Part I. (John Murray.)—Now, here is an idea worked out in admirable style by Lieut.-Col. R. L. Playfair, which ought to bring much grist to the mill of the great publisher of Albemarle Street, and prove a source of thankfulness to the general travellers and yachtsmen, for whose use it is intended. It is astonishing—only for that old story about Columbus and the egg, we would say quite unaccountable—that the book was not thought of and worked off in many editions years and years ago. Why, all the world has gone, or is going, or will go, to the Mediterranean, the classic sea of the world; and yet for travellers and yachtsmen there were only local guides and miserable manuals, and how they got on without this Handbook seems marvellous. But here it is at last, teeming with information, bristling with points of interest, splendidly furnished with maps and tables—estimates of the cost of yachting, provisions, ports, anchorages, transports—full of details about Morocco, Algiers, Tunis, Egypt, Syria, Asia Minor, the Greek Archipelago, Cyprus, Malta, Greece, the Coast of Albania, Dalmatia, Italy, Sardinia, Corsica, and so round to Spain and Gibraltar, crammed with plans, and admirable in all respects. The public which travels—and is there any other now which reads or buys books at all?—are under a weighty obligation to the publisher and author of this brilliant handbook, which is a sort of Pharos for those afloat or on shore.

Messrs. Sampson Low and Co. have recently published two additional illustrated biographies of "The Great Artists," selecting for the purpose Fra Bartolommeo and Andrea del Sarto, by Leader Scott, and Fra Angelica, by Catherine Phillimore. They are quite as interesting as any of their predecessors, and will afford valuable aid in effecting the main object of the series, which is to bring the Great Masters in an appreciable form before the minds of those who are interested in art.

Christmas and New Year's Day Cards.—What lucky people we are, after all, to be living in this year of grace, instead of a hundred years ago! In the first place, except there were a few favoured old specimens to disturb good Mr. Timbs, we should be most of us dead, and in the next place, we should have none of the pleasant courtesies and amenities which come from Fatherland to soften the trials of Christmas bills and to add grace to the opening of another year in this aggravating climate. If any of our soldier or sailor friends, or their relatives, male or female, want to be remembered and to give agreeable souvenirs of their existence, we counsel them to lay out a few shillings on Christmas and New Year Cards, which save a deal of writing, yet are pretty and convenient substitutes for the longest letter. Between those published by Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswood, the Queen's printers, and by Messrs. Marcus Ward and Co., there is much difficulty in choosing. Both these firms have published and sent to our office very charming little selections of real works of art by masters of no mean order, fitted for all sorts and conditions of men, women, and children; and now and then there are flights of poetical illustration attaching to them, which are full of good-feeling and friendliness, at all events. We must not forget to say a word of the snatches of song by Mr. R. F. Harvey to Mr. Langbridge's words, or of Mr. E. Hooper's poems, or of the "almanacs," which form part of the attractions of these cards. There are subjects of all kinds, religious, sentimental, moral, facetious, convivial; and fairy-land, folk-lore, natural history, have been ransacked by the artists and the poets who have been engaged to secure for Messrs. Eyre and Spottiswood, and for Messrs. Marcus Ward and Co., the gratitude, and we hope the liberal favour of the public, to whom their Christmas cards are offered at very moderate cost.

Mr. John Banting Rogers has sent us a very ingenious game, called "A Voyage Round the World," the only objection to which is the size of the chart, and perhaps the amount of attention to details exacted from the players, who must have marine aptitudes or inclinations to enable them to enjoy the amusement to the fullest. But the game appears to be not only amusing, but useful. There is a landsman's game for beginners, a seamanship game, and a game of navigation; and we can fancy even old salts, as well as the boys who have a hankering after the sea, will find a pleasant way of passing a long shore evening with Mr. Rogers's very ingenious invention. It is published at St. Clement's House, Lombard Street.

Amusements.

The only theatrical event of the past week is the marked success attained by Madame Modjeska at the COURT THEATRE, where the Polish actress has achieved a remarkable triumph by her powerful rendering of the heroine of the impressive drama of "Adrienne Lecouvreur." This play, first produced at the Théâtre Français on April 14, 1849, gave Rachel the first prose part she had ever played; and it was the last she ever performed. Mrs. Stirling, in Mr. Oxenford's adaptation, known as "The Reigning Favourite," made a great hit in the same character at the Strand Theatre shortly afterwards; and Madame Ristori, for whom the piece was translated into Italian, and more recently Mdlle. Sarah Bernhardt at the Gaiety Theatre, have revived the memories of the sad fate of the French tragedy actress, whose brief stage career closed in 1730. Under many disadvantages Madame Modjeska has raised herself to the high artistic position achieved by the most distinguished of her predecessors, and there can be little doubt the drama will retain possession of the play-bill through the remainder of the season.

A slight comedietta written by Mr. W. Ellis, and produced at the OLYMPIC THEATRE, under the title of "Our Relatives," needs nothing more than a passing mention. The story is, indeed, almost identical with that of the old French vaudeville translated half-a-century since for the Lyceum, and called "Is He Jealous?" The adaptation of "Delilah" keeps its place in the programme, and Mr. J. C. Cowper now appears with advantage as the cynical bachelor, Major Bond. It is rumoured that soon after Christmas the OLYMPIC will be taken for a season of comic operas.

At a morning performance at the GAIETY on Wednesday next will be produced Mr. Robert Buchanan's poetical play, entitled, "The Nine Days' Queen," in which Miss Harriet Jay, the novelist, will make her first appearance in London as Lady Jane Grey. The only play which has hitherto made this interesting historical period familiar to the stage is Rowe's tragedy of "Lady Jane Grey," brought out at Drury Lane in 1715.

This (Saturday) evening Mr. Coghlan s English version of the Italian play, by Giacometti, called "La Morte Civile," will be produced at the PRINCE OF WALES'S THEATRE, under the title of "A New Trial." Mr. Coghlan plays the hero Corrado, originally acted by Salvini.

A grand spectacular comic opera, in three acts, called "Mefistofele II.," music by Hervé (adapted by M. Jacobi for the ALHAMBRA), and libretto by Mr. Maltby, is announced for Monday night. The description of the piece leads us to expect much in the way of scenery and dresses, and the Brocken Peaks, Paris en fête, Walpurgis nights, the Rhine, and Hades will furnish the inventive powers of Mr. Ryan and Mr. Calcott with full room for splendid effects; whilst Miss C. Loseby, Miss R. Bell, and Mr. L. Brough may be expected to revel in a piece in which sylphs, demons, witches, Brocken and un-Brocken spirits, and material creatures like cabmen, barmaids, &c., are let loose to amuse the public.

What has been long anticipated has come to pass. The once famous Covent-Garden Hotel and Supper-rooms, long known simply as "Evans's," is to be turned into an artistic library and club-house, for which the title of "The Falstaff" has been suggested.

Most of the Christmas novelties will be produced in the course of next week. On Boxing night only two pantomimes will be produced in the Metropolis, DRURY LANE and COVENT GARDEN alone remaining true to the old traditions.

THROAT IRRITATION.—Soreness and dryness, tickling and irritation, inducing cough and affecting the voice. For these symptoms, use Epps's Glycerine Jujubes. Glycerine, in these agreeable confections, being in proximity to the glands at the moment they are excited by the act of sucking, becomes actively healing. A letter received:—"Gentlemen,—It may, perhaps, interest you to know that, after an extended trial, I have found your Glycerine Jujubes of considerable benefit (with or without medical treatment), in almost all forms of throat disease. They soften and clear the voice. In no case can they do any harm.—Yours faithfully, GORDON HOLMES, L.R.C.P.E., Senior Physician to the Municipal Throat and Ear Infirmary."

ADJUTANTS OF INFANTRY.

"Necessary Reform" writes:—"Will you kindly insert this letter in your next issue, as I am given to understand his Royal Highness the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief and the Secretary of State for War are now busy with a scheme for the reorganisation of the Army, and I consider this point should be brought to their notice, in order that they may consider it with other alterations about to be made? The number of subalterns to a regiment having of late years been very much reduced, there is a great difficulty in filling the post of adjutant efficiently, more especially since promotion has been greatly accelerated by the greater number of officers seconded in regiments, and the formation of the new Army Pay Department, and also other causes. In many regiments there are no subalterns having more than five or six years' service (there are forty-one battalions of Infantry in which the senior subaltern joined in or since 1874), and as the appointment of adjutant is a most important one, it requires to be filled by an officer of a certain amount of experience in the 'custom of the Service,' which certainly cannot be gained much under four or five years' service. Then, after the officer has been appointed adjutant, no matter how smart he may be, it will take him at least another year to pick up the office work and feel at home in his position,—this is supposing him to be fortunate enough to commence his adjutant's career with a good clerk, which, by-the-bye, is becoming more and more scarce with the present short-service system; then by the time he is beginning to see how things are done, it comes to his turn for promotion, and some one else has to be taught the trick. Under these circumstances, it is absolutely necessary for the efficiency of the regiment, the comfort of the commanding officer, and also that of all ranks, that the adjutant should be an officer of experience, and the only safe way to arrive at this is by making an officer attain the rank of captain before he can be appointed adjutant of an infantry battalion. In the Artillery, most, if not all, the adjutants are captains, and also in the Auxiliary Forces the adjutants are captains. The adjutant is the confidential Staff officer of the commanding officer, but the latter could scarcely take an officer of three or four years' service so entirely into his confidence as he could an adjutant who has already risen to the rank of captain. There are many other reasons I could bring forward in support of this change, but I have already transgressed too much on your space, and so will conclude with the hope this may meet the eye of some authority at the War Office, who will bring the subject forward for consideration."

The massive desk or writing-table made from the timbers of the Arctic ship Resolute, as a present to the President of the United States, was received at the White House on the 20th ult. It is elaborately carved, and altogether is a magnificent specimen of workmanship. Upon a smooth panel is the following inscription:—"Her Majesty's ship Resolute, forming part of the expedition sent in search of Sir John Franklin in 1852; was abandoned in latitute 74 deg. 41 min., longitude 101 deg. 22 min. west, on May 15, 1854. She was discovered and extricated in December, 1855, in latitude 67 deg. north by Capt. Buddington, of the United States whaler George Henry. She was purchased, fitted out, and sent to England as a gift to her Majesty, Queen Victoria, by the President and people of the United States as a token of goodwill and friendship. This table was made from her timbers when she was broken up, and is presented by the Queen of Great Britain and Ireland to the President of the United States as a memorial of the courtesy and loving kindness which dictated the offer of the gift of the Resolute."

Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil.—Its Unequalled Efficacy in Consumption and Wasting Diseases.—Dr. Hardwicke, Coroner for Central Middlesex, writes:—"I have great pleasure in adding my testimony to the already well-recognised virtues of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, having prescribed it many years, and being satisfied that it is a pure Oil, very palatable, and more easily digested than the Pale Oils. It possesses medicinal properties which also render it more efficacious than other kinds of fatty Oils. In the class of Tubercular Diseases, including Consumption, so prevalent in our great centres of population, the use of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is attended with manifold advantages; and I know of no therapeutic agent which, in connection with judicious sanitary measures, is better calculated to stay the ravages of these great consuming plagues of the British Islands. The Iodine, Bromine, and Phosphorus in Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Oil are undoubtedly efficacious, and being naturally combined with the most easily assimilated fatty substances, make it act both as food and medicine for many invalids, who take it periodically with great benefit to health." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature, and the signature of his sole consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

WEARING UNIFORM.

"General Officer" writes:—"Now that H.R.H. has given an order with regard to the above subject, I hope it will be honestly enforced by all General and other officers in command, as it has ever occurred to me that officers should wear their uniforms as much, or nearly so, as the non-commissioned officers and men. A liberal reading of 'the Order' provides for all recreation and strong, healthy exercises, and commanding officers should be called upon to note in their reports that the rule has been observed or otherwise. So also with regard to the Royal Navy—the uniform of which Service is quite as much put on one side as in the Army, though in days gone by it was not so. The sword, however, I think need not be worn except on duty. Whilst on this subject I should like to suggest that the First Lord of the Admiralty and H.R.H. the Commander-in-Chief together should devise some distinctive badge to be worn, at pleasure, by officers unemployed or retired, such as a riband in the button-hole of the coat, &c. Look at the number of Admirals, Generals, and other officers who have served many years, and now are quite lost, as it were, in the vast crowd of humanity for want of some such mark, whereby they shall, or can be, known as one of our country's old servants."

Amongst the guests present were—Lord Vernon, Sir Brandreth Gibbs, and Mr. Jacob Wilson, members of the Council of the Royal Agricultural Society; Dr. Voelcker, consulting chemist to the Royal Agricultural Society; Mr. H. M. Watson, Mr. James Rice, Mr. G. A. Sala; and Mr. G. Smith and Mr. G. Mander Allender, directors of the Company. The guests were shown over the premises under the guidance of Mr. Allender, who called special attention to the great care taken to ensure a supply of pure milk in the first instance, and then to its delivery to customers without being in any way deteriorated. It was also pointed out that there was a well-fitted laboratory under the management of a competent chemist, where careful analyses of the milk supplied are daily made and the results recorded. It was stated that recently Mr. Allender has been collecting statistics relative to the proportionate profit to farmers who fed their cows liberally and those who either stint them or give them inferior food, and these figures (which in all probability will be laid before the leading agricultural authorities) show conclusively that what may be called "high farming" and feeding the cows well pays infinitely better than the old system of poor feeding.—Morning Post.

ELEYS' "BOXER" AMMUNITION, for Snider, Martini-Henry, and other Rifles.

British Government Pattern. Merchants, Gunmakers, and others are warned against buying Inferior Cartridges of the above description, now being offered in the market at low prices. We have examined samples of these Cartridges, and find that they are of an obsolete pattern, made many years since; and that the powder in them, through long and defective storage, has become so decomposed as to render them absolutely worthless for any practical purpose.

We have also to warn merchants and others against buying Cartridges manufactured at the Royal Arsenal, which are sold to the public by serjeants and storekeepers. The traffic in these Cartridges is illegal, and all persons concerned in the buying or selling of the same are liable to prosecution, and severe punishment on conviction.

Having laid down special machinery for the manufacture of Cartridges on the "BOXER" principle, we are prepared to submit Samples, with all the latest improvements, at special prices for large quantities.

WATCHES.—JEWELLERY.—

WATCHES.

The Rev. Robt. Cass, Settle, Yorkshire, writes February 19, 1880:—"The Ladies' Gold Lever Watch received from you for 70s in size, workmanship, and beautiful appearance, resembles a watch usually sold at £10. It gives entire satisfaction."

The Rev. James Arthur Kemp, Lew Down, North Devon, also writes, March 8, 1880:—"The watch I ordered of you at 25s, for my servant, arrived quite safely, and I am exceedingly well pleased with it in every way. It is an excellent timekeeper, very neat and handsome in appearance, and in my opinion worth far more than those that cost treble the money. I do not think anybody should be without a watch, when they can obtain from you such an excellent article at so reasonable a price."

From Mr. J. J. HARRIS, Schoolmaster, 2nd-18th the Royal Irish Regiment, Aldershot, Sept. 22, 1880.

"I am very much pleased with everything I have had from your Company. The watch (25s) has proved to be an excellent one, and is a marvel of cheapness. It is fully equal to, or indeed superior to, many I have seen purchased by regimental clubs for treble the money. I am positive your Company will prove itself a boon to Army men at home and abroad, particularly the latter, who are often compelled to pay enormous prices for very inferior articles indeed. Your Company is deserving of every success, and I deem it a duty, to you and the Army, to become an amateur agent, unpaid."

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES WATCH COMPANY supply their celebrated Watches direct to wearers, at very lowest wholesale cash prices. They guarantee watches supplied by them to be most perfect timekeepers, and honestly assert their price to be under one-half those charged by watchmakers; and as a guarantee of good-faith they undertake to return the full amount paid for any Watch if not to the satisfaction of the purchaser.

The Company's chief manufacture are their celebrated Crystal Glasses, which dispense with all risk of breakage. Their LADIES' and GENTLEMEN'S SILVER WATCHES, at 25s, and their LADIES' GOLD LEVERS, at 70s, are acknowledged to be the cheapest Watches in the world.

Catalogues, containing list of testimonials, and beautifully illustrated descriptions of more expensive watches, gold and silver jewellery, electro-plate, &c., are sent gratis on application. We may safely assert that the prices in same will be a surprise to all who see them.

GENTLEMEN'S FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, heavy cased, superior movement, 25s.

LADIES' FINE SILVER, handsomely engraved, flat crystal glass, highly-finished movements, 25s.

YOUTHS' FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, highly-finished movements, 25s.

LADIES' very heavy cased GOLD LEVERS, in exquisitely chased cases, with highly-finished extra-jewelled movements, 70s.

These watches are frequently sold for treble the money.

Cheques or Post-Office Orders must be made payable to the Company's Manager,

Mr. S. HISSEY, Vyse Street, Birmingham.

On receipt of which any watch will be registered post free to any part of the United Kingdom, and for 2s 6d per watch extra to any part of the postal world.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Directors of the Rye Vale Distilleries Company, Limited, invite application for the above unissued portion of the 10-per-cent. Preference Shares of the Company.

The Company is in full operation, and is now selling its manufacture of pure Irish Whisky both wholesale and direct to Shareholders and the Public generally.

The Company was originally formed in order to supply pure Whisky, absolutely free from Fusel Oil, or admixture with any other Spirit, direct from the Distillery or London Bonded Stores, thus avoiding intermediate profits, effecting a considerable saving in the cost to consumers, and affording Shareholders the benefits of the true principal of co-operation.

The distinguishing feature in the manufacture of Whisky at the Rye Vale Distillery is the total elimination of the poisonous Fusel Oil by means of a simple mechanical and physical process during the distillation, the effect being to render the Whisky remarkably pure and wholesale, and to give it, even when first made, all the soft and mellow qualities of old matured spirit.

It is obvious, therefore, that this Company can produce Genuine Irish Whisky, fit for immediate consumption, at a considerably less cost than any other maker, and none but first-rate materials being used, the Whisky is of most agreeable odour and flavour.

The Company has acquired the very valuable patent rights for the exclusive manufacture of whisky under this process for Dublin and 50 miles round, and the agreement under which these rights are secured also provides that no other licences shall be granted by the Patentees, except to this Company, for a term of which 18 months are unexpired, and the Company has then, or within that time, the option to purchase the entire patent rights for the whole of Ireland on very moderate terms.

The sole consideration given for these patent rights is £5,000 in Deferred Shares, which are only entitled to one-fourth of the balance of profits, after payment to the Preference Shareholders of 10 per cent. per annum, and after due provision be made for a Reserve Fund.

The Rye Vale Distillery is of an extensive character. It is constructed on the most approved scientific principles, is fitted with modern and complete plant of every necessary kind, and is one of the most compact and perfect in the United Kingdom. It is in complete working order, and is already capable of producing 250,000 gallons per annum.

The property comprises sixteen acres of land, through which runs a stream of excellent water, peculiarly suitable for distilling purposes, and affording considerable water-power. It is near canal and railways, and being outside the City of Dublin boundaries, is exempt from City taxation. The Company has acquired a lease for an unexpired term of over 84 years on exceedingly favourable terms.

The process adopted at the Rye Vale Distillery has been most carefully examined and tested by Professor Cameron, the Public Analyst of Dublin, and exclusive arrangements have been entered into with him, by which he exercises supervision over the Company's manufacture. The whisky is also Bottled in Bond, under the control of the Inland Revenue; thus an absolute guarantee for its purity and quality is insured.

In addition to the Preferential Dividend of 10 per cent., and the participation in further profits, the Company offers special privileges to its Shareholders as follows:—

The Company will issue annually to every Shareholder, for each Share held by him, a ticket (transferable) authorising him or his nominee to purchase direct from the Distillery or Bonded Warehouse in London, at the current wholesale price, two cases, each containing 12 bottles or two Imperial gallons of the whisky—the present price being 30s. per case (retail price 36s. per case), equal to a saving of 12s. on the two cases to the consumer,—which would alone be equal to a dividend of 30 per cent. on the price of his Share.

With respect to the profits resulting from the general operations of the Company, the Directors are able to state, that, on account of the specially favourable terms on which they have acquired the Rye Vale Distillery, and the advantages they otherwise possess, an annual dividend considerably in excess of the 10 per cent. may confidently be anticipated, even if the quantity sold should only amount to one-half of that which the present Distillery is capable of producing.

From Dr. Arthur Hill Hassall and Otto Hehner, Esq., F.C.S., Public Analysts:—"We have very carefully examined and chemically tested a sample of the Rye Vale Whisky. We find it to possess a highly fragrant, ethereal, and characteristic odour, to be soft and mellow as from age, without the least smokiness, to be of great alcoholic strength, and free from the smallest trace of Fusel Oil. We are of opinion, therefore, that this Whisky is of remarkable purity, and in consequence of its freedom from fusel oil, particularly well adapted for consumption in all cases where a specially pure and genuine spirit is required."

From Professor Charles A. Cameron, M.D., F.R.C.S.I., Professor of Chemistry and Hygiene in the Royal College of Surgeons, Ireland, Public Analyst of the City and County of Dublin:—"I find that the Whisky manufactured at the Rye Vale Distillery is remarkably pure, and of very agreeable odour and flavour. It is quite free from fusel oil, but at the same time it is rich in the ethereal and other principles to which the flavour and odour of good whisky are due."

The following certificate from Dr. Hassall and Mr. Hehner bears testimony to the completeness and perfection of the process of manufacture:—"We have made ourselves thoroughly acquainted with the various details—practical and scientific—of the manufacture of the Rye Vale Whisky, and we are of opinion that they are of so perfect and complete a character as to insure the production of a Whisky of excellent quality and purity, and particularly free from fusel oil and aldehyde."

Applications must be forwarded to the Secretary, George Walter, Esq., at the Offices of the Company, Albert Buildings, 51 Queen Victoria Street, London, E.C., where Samples, Prospectuses, and Forms of Application can be obtained.

THE SOUTHWARK and DEPTFORD TRAMWAYS COMPANY.

ABRIDGED PROSPECTUS.

The Directors have much pleasure in announcing the opening for public traffic of the first section of this Line of Tramway, which runs through the important Metropolitan districts of Bermondsey, Rotherhithe, and Deptford, and they are now prepared to receive applications for the remaining Share Capital, to complete the construction and equipment of the other Sections of the Lines authorised by their Act of Parliament.

These Lines traverse one of the most thickly inhabited districts of London, and will afford direct accommodation to a resident population of considerably over 200,000 persons, of a class specially requiring the service of Tramways, beside the large numbers whose business calls them daily to the district.

The Directors will apply in the coming Session for important Extensions, including one from their Tramway now working, to a point near London Bridge Railway Stations, to which they believe the full support of the authorities will be given. The present Lines and these Extensions are shown on a Map, copies of which can be had on application.

The Directors can but repeat what they stated in their Report in August last, that they feel more than ever assured that the enterprise must prove a success; that the project is warmly supported; and the population is essentially one to whom a Tramway will be of service, and is increasing rapidly. The Directors would only further remark that when the extensions are obtained, the value of the Line, and of the Shares as an investment, must be largely increased; and there is no reason to doubt that this will become one of the best paying lines in the Metropolis.

The works have been carried out to the satisfaction, not only of the Directors, but also of the Local authorities, and the solid manner in which the Line has been constructed has met with the strong approval of the Inspecting Officer of the Board of Trade.

The whole of the Works, including Cars, Horses, Stabling, and other equipment, will be completed within the authorised Capital of the Company.

Copies of the Act of Parliament and of the Contract for Construction can be inspected at the Offices of the Solicitor of the Company, and copies of this Propectus may be obtained at the Company's Offices, and from the Bankers and Brokers.

THE SOUTHWARK and DEPTFORD TRAMWAYS COMPANY.

Issue of the remaining Share Capital, £25,000, in 2,500 Shares of £10 each.

NOTICE is hereby given that the Subscription List will CLOSE on FRIDAY, December 24th.

Prospectuses and Maps of the Metropolitan Districts through which the Tramways pass, can be had on application to

A. J. DAVIS, Secretary.

HOLLOWAY'S OINTMENT and PILLS.

INDISPUTABLE REMEDIES.—In the use of these medicaments there need be no hesitation or doubt of their cooling, healing, and purifying properties. The Ointment stands unrivalled for the facility it displays in relieving, healing, and thoroughly curing the most inveterate sores and ulcers, and in cases of bad legs and bad breasts, they act as a charm. The Pills are the most effectual remedy ever discovered for the cure of liver complaints, diseases most disastrous in their effects, deranging all the proper functions of the organs affected, inducing restlessness, melancholy, weariness, inability to sleep, and pain in the side, until the whole system is exhausted. These wonderful Pills, if taken according to the printed directions accompanying each box, strike at the root of the malady, stimulate the stomach and liver into a healthy action, and effect a complete cure.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original introducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty. In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural. Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480).—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' 'Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'

Teeth from 5s; sets, 5 to 30 guineas. Only addresses, 312 Regent Street, opposite the Polytechnic; and 49 Moorgate Street. Established 1820. Consultation free.

From Lord FRANCIS CONYNGHAM, Mount Charles, Dec. 11, 1868.

Lord Francis Conyngham, who this time last year bought some of Dr. J. Collis Browne's Chlorodyne from Mr. Davenport, and has found it a most wonderful medicine, will be glad to have half-a dozen bottles sent at once to the above address.

 Earl Russell communicated to the College of Physicians that he had received a despatch from her Majesty's Consul at Manilla, to the effect that Cholera has been raging fearfully, and that the ONLY remedy of any service was CHLORODYNE.—See Lancet, Dec. 31, 1864.

CAUTION.—BEWARE of PIRACY and IMITATIONS.

CAUTION.—Vice-Chancellor Sir W. Page Wood stated that Dr. J. COLLIS BROWNE was undoubtedly the INVENTOR of CHLORODYNE; that the story of the Defendant, Freeman, was deliberately untrue, which, he regretted to say, had been sworn to.—See Times, July 13th, 1864.

AT THREE SHILLINGS a POUND, the FINEST TEA the WORLD PRODUCES is Recommended to the Public.

COOPER COOPER and CO. undertake to answer the oft-heard question,— Why is Tea so dear? and they say that it is simply because the public in this, as in other matters, are powerless to insist on having their share of the advantages which result from falling markets. Tea, in fact, was never so cheap to buy since it was first imported into England, as may be easily ascertained by a reference to the current market reports, and yet relatively the retail price was never so exorbitant. Now Cooper Cooper and Co. have resolved to rectify this discrepancy, and to this end they undertake to SELL the BEST TEAS that can be purchased at their respective prices at a small commission only on the actual prices paid to importers. This system of business is specially intended to bring the public into partnership, as it were, or at all events to enable them to become participators in the great margin of profit which lies between the wholesale and retail price of tea. COOPER COOPER and CO.'S prices will be found to be ninepence per pound less money than those usually charged for identical qualities.

POST-OFFICE ORDERS should be made payable at the General Post Office and cheques crossed National Provincial Bank of England.

FAMILIES residing in the country can, by joining together to divide the expense of railway crrriage, save 9d a pound in the price of their TEA, by sending to COOPER COOPER and CO.; or Cooper Cooper and Co. will pay railway carriage on parcels of the value of £2 and upwards to any station in England, on receipt of 9d in addition to the cost of the tea.

THE correspondence between Mr. Childers and Lord Lytton is not calculated to strengthen the confidence of the country in the wisdom of the present Government. It is obvious that though it might have been desirable or necessary to make the military regulations on the subject of political demonstrations quite clear to the Volunteers, the Secretary of State for War was guilty of grave indiscretion in addressing himself, as a preliminary to the action of the Authorities, to a private person, whose only connection with the Force arose out of the accident that his wife had been giving away the prizes to a distinguished corps. Lord Lytton lets Mr. Childers off very easily. The Secretary of State for War asks him for an assurance that he spoke "inadvertently and in ignorance of the Volunteer Regulations," failing which he must have a General Order issued; and the ex-Viceroy craftily and caustically replies that he does not feel called upon to give the assurance that he was ignorant or inadvertent "as the condition of your not taking any further action in the matter." Lord Lytton might have referred the Secretary of State for War to Lady Lytton, for it was only as her spokesman in returning thanks for her that he addressed the Volunteers on the occasion, and no doubt Lady Lytton quite approved of the speech and of the sentiments expressed in it. But as it is, he has put his "dear Mr. Childers" into a hole quite wide and deep enough to cover him, till he emerges on Estimate day. Why should the Volunteers be left to attend political meetings in uniform, if Lord Lytton could have assured Mr. Childers he addressed the 23rd Middlesex "inadvertently, and in ignorance of Volunteer Regulations?" Why, if Lord Lytton could not give that assurance, was the Commander-in-Chief, as Mr. Childers styles his Royal Highness, to be moved to issue a General Order, directing that meetings of Volunteers be at once dissolved when political speeches are addressed to them? The inference is that, if Lord Lytton had replied, "Why, my dear Mr. Childers, I can't give you the assurance you require, for I know quite well what the Volunteer Regulations are, only I thought I should like to let the 23rd Middlesex know what my wife thought about the Afghan business, and the retention of Candahar, and all the rest of it," Mr. Childers would not have requested the Duke to issue any order at all, and that the Volunteers might have been left in darkness as to their obligations in the hour of danger, when an orator, under the guise of "returning thanks for a lady," treated any of them to what Mr. Childers calls "a public discussion or demonstration." But we doubt very much if there was on the occasion in question either "a discussion" or a "demonstration" of a public kind. A discussion in that sense needs more than one to make it, and Lord Lytton had it all his own way. The giving away of prizes was not public, admission was by ticket. It may be subject for consideration whether some better mode of regulating such ceremonies cannot be devised than the haphazard fashion which obtains at present; but it is a matter which needs very delicate handling, and we need not now deal with it further. Suppose that instead of Lord Lytton, whose zeal certainly outran his discretion that night, it had been some strong supporter of the present Government, who was returning thanks for Mrs. Gladstone, and who took occasion to expound his views about the worthlessness of Candahar or the folly of a scientific frontier, is it quite certain that Mr. Childers would have been so vigilant, and that he would have called on the orator to confess his ignorance of Volunteer Regulations, under the pains and penalties, not of the orator being made to know what the Regulations were, but of the Volunteers being subject to the issue of a General Order, to tell them their duty when wolves in sheeps' clothing—politicians in petticoats—or their spokesmen appear before them, and air their theories or principles on the platform? The Order in itself is a very proper one, or, to speak more plainly, the rule that soldiers and volunteers are not to take any part in political demonstrations, or to listen to political discourses when they are in uniform is of the first and most stringent necessity. The National Guard, and it was easily moved as a political lever, constituted a real danger to every French Government, and never gave the smallest strength to France. Hitherto, the behaviour of the Volunteers has been admirable. Not only that, but they have shown no disposition or tendency to figure as a political body or element, one way or other. But it is, nevertheless, very evident that if speakers at Volunteer gatherings were generally to take up the line of Lord Lytton, and assume that, as their hearers could not know what they intended to say, Volunteers might listen without any responsibility to political orations, it would be necessary to enforce the Regulations most rigorously, though we can conceive of situations in which there would be a good deal of difficulty. How about Volunteer guards of honour at railway stations and public occasions for distinguished statesmen? How about a lecture on strategy or military topography, in which the policy of a Government or of an Opposition may be praised or condemned? It would be very mischievous, indeed, if it were supposed that Volunteers should be allowed to continue to listen "to political addresses," if they believed on good faith and upon reasonable grounds that the speaker was ignorant of the Regulations in force on the subject. Speakers, under such circumstances, would consult the interests of the Volunteers as well as the dictates of good-taste and the eternal fitness of things, if they abstained from the slightest allusion to politics, but all men are not gifted with judgment and good-taste. Indeed, a crass commanding officer, or one with strong party views, might fail to order his men away where another would see treason and the necessity for immediate dissolution of the meeting. On the whole, it is rather a matter for regret that Volunteers should be reminded of their duty by the Authorities, not on the ground that they did anything wrong, but because Lord Lytton, who is not a Volunteer, could not assure Mr. Childers that he spoke inadvertently and in ignorance of Volunteer Regulations, when he treated the 23rd Middlesex to a lecture on the Afghan War, and the retention of Candahar.

According to an abstract received from the Admiralty of the returns of prize-firing on board her Majesty's ships in commission with rifled guns and small arms for the year 1879, it appears that there has been a falling-off in the figure of merit of the Fleet in respect to great guns; while there has been nearly a proportionate advance in the figure of merit in small-arm practice. With regard to prize-firing with heavy guns, we must be prepared to find the figure of merit vary from time to time, and not accept it as a proof that there is actually any deterioration in the efficiency of the guns' crews. To judge by the different surroundings under which the practice was made, one would naturally come to the conclusion that commanding officers do not choose their weather for the prize-firing, but take it as it comes. Thus, while one ship had the advantage of fine weather, light air, and scarcely any motion, another fired with a strong wind and choppy sea, with seas being constantly shipped in the battery, and the deck flooded. As it may so happen that in one year a larger number of ships may fire under adverse than favourable circumstances, so the relative order of merit may be expected to fluctuate. In the case of small-arm practice, the men in many cases being landed for their prize-firing, more steadiness is to be looked for, and it is therefore gratifying to find the figure of merit advancing from 80·78 in 1878 to 82·86 in 1879. To the Modeste belongs the honour of taking the first place among all her Majesty's ships's in commission for excellence in handling her guns, she having fired her eight rounds in five minutes and four seconds, and scored 78 points, the average corrected points for all guns in the ship having reached the figure 82·10. The Euryalus followed her very closely, having fired eight rounds in less time with an increase in points, making 81 to the Modeste's 78; but her average was 82·04, and she therefore had to take the second place on the list. The next best ship was the Bellerophon, whose best gun made as high a score as 88 points, but her average fell to 80·10. These ships are employed on the China, East Indies, and North America station respectively; but that is not the order of merit of the stations, the East Indies standing first, North America second, and China, which boasts of the prize ship, third. Then follow the Channel, Mediterranean, South-east Coast of America, Australia, ships on particular service (represented by the Newcastle), the Coastguard, the Pacific, and the Cape and West-Africa station. The little Gannet had the unenviable position of coming out of the competition the very last, but it must be some consolation to her officers and crew to find themselves in such excellent company as the Hercules. Neither of these ships had much to complain of in respect to the weather under which the practice was conducted, but they certainly failed to score many points, the Hercules making but 17·22 (which, by the way, was but a few points below another Coastguard ship, the Belleisle), and the Gannet dropping to the extraordinarily low figure of 14·54. A few performances such as these are sufficient to reduce very materially the average corrected points of all guns in the ships competing, and may account for the figure of merit having dropped from 55·65 to 52·01. We hope that the Hercules and Belleisle have done better in the present year's competitive firing, but we understand that the armament of the Hercules is not considered satisfactory, and that there is some idea of introducing modifications. In small-arm firing, the harbour ships, as might be expected, take the first place, and the Excellent provides the best shot of the year in Edward Hampton, a leading seaman, who scored 141 points, the average in individual firing by the ship being 96·35. So much for the merit in individual shooting, but for average shooting the Cockatrice came out first, her average points reaching the respectable figure of 102·64, being thus more than six points above the average of the Excellent. This is highly creditable to the little ship which has spent so much of her time up the Danube, and shows that the crew was not idle while stowed away on that detached duty. The Squadrons stand in order of merit in small-arm practice in the following order viz,, Harbour Ships, Mediterranean, Channel, East Indies, Particular Service, North America, Cape and West Africa, China, Pacific, South-east Coast of America, Coastguard, and Australia. The Channel Squadron will be noticed to have done well, being fourth in gunnery and third in small arms; the East Indies, which was first in gunnery, came out fourth in small arms, and the Mediterranean fifth and second, respectively. The gunnery-ships did not take quite so high a place as might have been expected in the small-arm competition, for although the Excellent found the best shot, the Cambridge was fifteenth on the list in that respect, while their relative order of merit in average shooting was—Cambridge, four; Excellent, nine. Still, it was to those two ships that the harbour vessels owed their position as first in order of merit, for of the other six ships classed under this head some took very low places, the three last coming out 64, 66, and 71 out of the 74 competitors. In concluding our remarks on this interesting return, we think it but fair to place on record in these columns the names of the six best rifle-shots for the year 1879. They were:—Edward Hampton, Excellent; R. Waugh, Plover; John Charles, Torch; William Borlace, Cambridge; W. Penfold, Bittern; and L. Gallehawk, of the Rupert.

It is not possible to read the accounts of the operations against the Basutos without a sense of pain. "Baker completely routed Umhlonhlo. Loss, 300 men. Lieutenant Paxton, three men Native levies killed, ten wounded." Such is a type of the "victories" reported on the side of the Colonial troops. We feel regret to see the names of such officers as Colonel Clarke, late 57th, Colonel Carrington, late 24th, Colonel Wavell, late 9th, and other good soldiers engaged in operations of the kind, but they are not to be blamed for doing their duty. It is their misfortune to be obliged to command forces engaged in work which is very like wholesale butchery. It is all very well to say that "the war is simply one of barbarism against civilisation;" but according to the results it would appear as if barbarism and civilisation had changed sides. "A successful patrol was made from Clarkesburg on the 26th by 409 Colonials. Seventeen of the enemy were killed. The patrol had only three natives wounded." On the 10th, again, "two Colonists, with 700 natives, killed 70 Basutos; the allies lost two killed and wounded." None of the enemy are ever "wounded" it is to be observed. They are always killed. There is only one comfort in the miserable business—and how long that is to endure it is hard to say—no British regiments are called upon to appear in the field and to take part in such operations against such an enemy.

The Detached Squadron, under the command of Rear-Admiral the Earl of Clanwilliam, C.B., will await at the Falkland Islands the mail despatched for the ships on Tuesday last, which will be due at the Falklands on January 26, 1881.

Vice-Admiral Sir Beauchamp Seymour, K.C.B., has been making his return to Malta felt, and has been maintaining his reputation for hospitality. While in the Adriatic, it fell to him to constantly entertain the officers of the various foreign ships-of-war, and on his return to Malta he has given a succession of dinners to the commanding officers of the ships of his own squadron and to the officials on shore.

Vice-Admiral Hood, with the Channel Squadron, consisting of the Minotaur, Agincourt, Achilles, and Northumberland, has arrived at Lisbon, to spend Christmas. We regret to hear that on the passage a fatal accident occurred to a man on board the Achilles, who was killed by being jammed between a gun and the ship's side.

The Admiralty has been pleased to approve of the Naval recreation-room at Jamaica being furnished with a ship's library. This grant on the part of their Lordships will, we feel sure, be appreciated by those doomed to spend much of their time at Port Royal.

Admiral Sir Cooper Key would not, we believe, by any means object to an early transfer from office at Whitehall to the more congenial duties of Commander-in-Chief at a home port. Devonport has been selected for the First Sea Lord, should it be possible to spare his services when the vacancy arises.

We understand that the report of the Atalanta Committee has been presented to the Admiralty this week. The evidence taken, together with the drawings, will probably be in their Lordships' hands by January 1. The report condemns the construction of ships of the old Juno class as faulty, and unfit for service for training purposes.

It is a matter for congratulation that the trials of the Inflexible were such a success, and that she so well withstood the effects of the discharge of her guns. Her machinery was also in excellent working order, and we are glad to hear that the Controller of the Navy did not fail to remember those to whom the merit was in a great measure due, and conveyed an expression of his satisfaction to the engine-room staff. There was a falling-off in the speed of the vessel, but that was easily accounted for, as the Constructor's department has been trying experiments with her screw, and has again shown a remarkable ignorance of the science of screw-propulsion. We had hoped, after the thousands of pounds spent in experimenting with screws in the case of the Iris and other lately-equipped ships, that the department would have managed to pick up an idea or two, and not be still fumbling in the dark.

Captain Domvile, of the Dido, may expect to hear something from the Aborigines Protection Society, for he is reported to have taken an active part in trying a West-African king, and sentencing him to sixteen years' imprisonment. It was, we doubt not, the shortest way to deal with the troublesome obstructionist, who was threatening the Europeans at Accra with serious consequences for being white. But the fact of the king being black will stir the hearts of the Aborigines Society to the quick. If we pursue our present mode of making African kings into convicts, we shall soon want a royal Pentonville.

Irish candidates for entry in the Royal Navy, as boys, are now being received on board the Revenge at Queenstown. The number accepted is not to exceed 200 per annum.

The new crew of the London has not been long at Zanzibar without experiencing the excitement of a capture, for by the last mail news was received of her boats having seized two dhows, with a sufficient number of slaves on board to make their calling beyond doubt, and the prizes are confidently looked upon as good ones.

Their Lordships have approved of Lieutenant Graham Bower, R.N., accepting the post of secretary to Sir Hercules Robinson, the Governor-Elect of the Cape of Good Hope, who will probably leave England on the 30th inst.

Captains Gordon and Wilson, of the Vernon, have been instructed to inquire into a newly-proposed method for increasing the accuracy and deadliness of the Whitehead torpedo.

The manifest care with which her Majesty's ships are navigated must be recognised, when the number of misadventures is compared with the number of ships of the Royal Navy constantly on the move in all portions of the globe. We regret to hear, however, that there is just room for doubt whether the Orontes was as carefully navigated as she should have been on her last homeward passage, when she found herself in unpleasantly close proximity to the French coast in thick weather.

It is but natural that Liverpool should have been the first of our mercantile ports to meet with attention from the Home Defences Committee, and a sub-committee of naval and military officers has been instructed to visit the Lancashire port, to inquire into the fortifications which would be needed to place it in an efficient state of defence, in case of attack from the sea.

A slight epidemic of fever has recently visited the training-ship Cruiser in the Mediterranean, and she has consequently been kept constantly at sea for some weeks past, to prevent any further spread of the disease. On her last visit to Malta, she landed several cases for hospital treatment, and altogether there are nearly a score out of her small complement in hospital. She was to return to Malta to spend Christmas Day.

Lieutenant Hugh C. D. Ryder has been appointed flag-lieutenant to Admiral Ryder, Commander-in-Chief at Portsmouth, in succession to Lieutenant Hugh C. Gough, appointed to the command of the Express.

The recent Admiralty Circular laying down the scale of mess-traps to be allowed to Warrant officers in ships where no mess-place for them is provided, may possibly lead to complications. It may therefore be as well to state that should there be any differences of opinion as to priority in the use of the solitary frying-pan or tea-kettle, commanding officers will be expected to decide in favour of the gunner first, boatswain second, and carpenter third. The Warrant officers will also be expected to make arrangements so as not to have their meals at one and the same hour, as the Board cannot under any circumstances sanction the supply of two frying-pans to any one of her Majesty's ships. This may be taken as authoritative.

All is not peace and goodwill in the Secretariat Department at the Admiralty, and unless their Lordships find some means of easing the friction now existing, it is likely to materially interfere with the efficient working of the office. More than this it is needless to say to those who are in the thick of the turmoil, and know where the shoe pinches.

We are informed by the Secretary of the Admiralty that their Lordships have decided that the entry of naval cadets shall in future take place by means of limited competition. The limits of age will remain as at present. Details of the examination, the subjects of which will not materially differ from those at present in force, will be published, so soon as decided on. The examination in June next will be held under these regulations. We announced a month ago the probability of this course being adopted.

It is with regret that we hear that the injuries received by Commander Darwin, of the Alexandra, through slipping down a ladder and fracturing his knee-cap, are likely to prevent his rejoining his ship. His recovery is but slow at Malta Hospital, and it is feared that he will have to be brought forward for invaliding home.

Captain the Hon. Edmund Fremantle, C.B., who, as we stated last week, is to succeed Captain Edye as Senior Officer at Gibraltar, has been ordered to proceed to that place in his ship, the Invincible, from Malta, to take up the appointment.

The flagship on the East Indies station does not appear to be a fortunate ship. Some time ago she had to leave her station for a lengthened period for the purpose of being docked at Malta, her screw-shaft having become incrusted with shell-fish to such an extent as to impede the action of her propeller. That circumstance was due to a want of forethought on the part of those responsible on board. But now we hear that she is not free from mild fever cases, which are attributed to the unhealthy exhalations from her bilges. During her recent long cruise to Mauritius, Zanzibar, &c., the odour from her bilges was at times almost unbearable.

A meeting of all the commanding officers of the Royal Naval Artillery Volunteers was held in London on the 20th inst., to take united action in moving for the capitation-grant, and on the 21st they were received by H.R.H. the Admiral-Superintendent of Reserves, and stated their views to him, who promised to forward the case to the Admiralty for their consideration. We hope this may be the means of obtaining for the Volunteers that support which they so truly deserve.

In consequence of the continued strained relations with China, the Russian Government has given orders for placing in commission next summer the clippers and corvettes of the Reserve. These constitute the vessels displaced by the eight clippers of the Kreutzer and Razboinik class, all of which are at the present moment in the Pacific, or on their way thither. Details of the Razboinik will indicate the series:—Length, 214 ft.; breadth, 32 ft.; displacement, 1,334 tons; composite hull; engines, 250 nominal and 1,500 indicated horse-power; speed, 14 knots; armament, three six-inch guns, four nine-pounders, and some Gatlings; crew, 18 officers and 148 men. The older vessels are slower than this, and the latest one, the Opritchnik, is constructed of steel. The clippers which they surpassed were built between 1860 and 1870, and are therefore obsolete in many respects. The Vitiaz, which is having fresh engines placed on board, is armed with six-inch guns, and is a very slow sailer. Her new engines will give her an increased speed of 10 or 11 knots. The Gaidamak and Bayan, replaced in the Pacific in 1878 by the Kreutzer and Djigit, steam at nine knots, and have each four six-inch guns on board. These vessels are said to be in very good condition, and the small repairs aboard can be easily finished to enable them to proceed to sea the moment the ice breaks up in the spring.

The Russian Admiralty has decided to dispense with teak in the backing to the armour of the new frigates of the Minin type, and to use, instead, larch-wood. The reason for the alteration is the dearness of teak, the distance it has to be brought to Russia, and the variable qualities of the article imported. Larch-wood, it is believed, will answer the purpose equally well, and besides being a cheap native article, is more elastic and very considerably lighter than teak. The latter point is of some importance, as Admiral Popoff's vessels invariably turn out very much heavier than designed. The frigate Generel Admirel, of the Minin series, for instance, is 500 tons heavier than Popoff intended her to be.

The torpedo class at Cronstadt, for the officers of the Baltic Fleet, consists of 20 persons. The course lasts six and a half months, and is divided into three terms,—(1) Experimental electricity, magnetism, and galvanism; (2) the study of the composition of mines; and (3) practice afloat. Decorations are conferred upon officers who, after completing the course, actively and successfully prosecute their studies, and keep apace with improvements abroad.

We learn from the Commercio de Portugal, that there is every probability of a general adoption of the Nordenfelt gun in the Portuguese Navy, as a result of the recent competitive trials. The Vasco da Gama, Guiné, and Nathalie have been ordered to be fitted with these guns.

Germany is not a great Naval Power, notwithstanding the strides she has been making of late years, but she appears to have the confidence of China, for, in preparing for a possible struggle, the Chinese Government has given a number of orders for ships and arms to German manufacturers. A yard at Stettin has concluded contracts for the construction of several vessels-of-war, and the gun manufactories of Mauser, at Oberhof, and of Löwe, at Berlin, have been commissioned to provide small arms on the newest and best system. The Chinese Government intends to retain at Berlin a commission of officers, who shall be entrusted with the inspection of all arms before they are sent to China.

The Italian Chamber of Deputies, after a prolonged debate, agreed on Monday to the construction of two ships-of-war of 10,000 tons' displacement, at a cost of 15,000,000 lire, according to designs submitted by Admiral Acton, the Minister of Marine.

We are glad to learn that the Committee of the Royal Cambridge Asylum for Soldiers' Widows have enlarged the house at Kingston-on-Thames, and it is now capable of containing seventy inmates; but the present subscriptions, we regret to say, are quite insufficient to meet the additional expense, and more money will be required if the new rooms are to be occupied. It is calculated that if every regiment would subscribe annually, thirteen additional inmates could be received at once.

We trust that when Mr. Childers brings forward his scheme for the reorganisation of the Army, he will include in it some modification of medical unification. Theoretically, the arrangement had much to recommend it, but practically it works very badly. Almost everybody concerned condemns it. The chief Military authorities, commanding officers, other officers, men, and the majority of Army surgeons themselves revile the present system. The only people who have a word to say in its favour are its originators. They urge that it does not fully answer because it has never been fully carried out. Really, however, what is needed is that it should be even less thoroughly carried out; and all regimental officers are most anxious that there should be at least one surgeon attached to every regiment. Sufficient time has been already granted for the experiment, and we unhesitatingly maintain that the experiment has signally failed.

The London Sunday paper which takes such a curious and "disinterested interest" in Egypt this week, suggests that the only way to put an end to slavery in Egypt is by "virtually" (and, we may add, virtuously) "taking possession of the country." Perhaps, the Egyptians would object—if they did not, others certainly would—to the process, and recognise in the zeal for the extinction of slavery merely a lust for the flesh-pots. But this virtuous possession would have to be extended a good way towards the Equator. The real nostrum for the suppression of the slave trade is the extirpation of the Mahommedan institution of the harem. Indeed, we might begin at the British settlements on the Gold Coast.

Several correspondents draw attention in the Standard to the present state of promotion in some Militia regiments, and suggest that the five years' rule should be rigidly enforced in the case of Militia commanding officers. We do not go so far as these Militia officers do, for it would not be desirable to draw a hard-and-fast line, and displace men after so brief a spell of command. In some cases, no doubt, a bad lieutenant-colonel would be got rid of by the introducing of the five years' limit, but in most instances the Service, we believe, would suffer. But there is reason in all things, and ten years might fairly be fixed as the limit of command. To allow a man to hold on to an appointment for a quarter of a century, as has been done in some cases, and this in spite of all regulations as to age-disqualification, cannot fail to be highly injurious, for it naturally damps the ardour of juniors, who quit in disgust a Service in which there is no prospect open to them. The best Militia officers are by this means lost, whilst the indifferent ones remain, not caring how things go so long as they can enjoy an easy training and the company of agreeable companions.

A correspondent in our regimental columns draws attention to the claims of a distinguished regiment—the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers—to retain its present title, which, as a paragraph he has copied from its records shows, was conferred upon it under circumstances which ought to command respect. It is all very well to reform, but all practical soldiers must see how dangerous it is to sweep away those regimental landmarks which have served in many a battlefield to rally our soldiers, and turn what might have been a defeat into a victory for British arms. Are all the grand old institutions of the past to be demolished at the caprice of a few agitators? Our correspondent puts the matter forward in a fair spirit, and the Committee now sitting at the War Office to carry out the proposed reorganisation would do well to take notice of the arguments adduced by him in favour of the retention of the present title of a regiment which has done its duty in the past most nobly, Many of the county titles may be misnomers, and no great disappointment would be felt were such regiments as the 28th North Gloucestershire or the 29th Worcestershire to be called upon to give up their present names. To take from a corps like the Royal Irish Fusiliers, or the Duke of Wellington's, the 33rd, titles which have a history attached to them, would, however, be a crying injustice, and it is earnestly to be hoped that a distinction may be drawn between those honours which have been conferred for services, and others obtained merely by chance.

Brevet Major C. E. le M. Cherry, 32nd Light Infantry, was in January last appointed an inspector of Volunteers at the Cape of Good Hope. How comes it that this officer has never yet been seconded in his regiment? Captain A. G. Wavell, 9th Regiment, received a similar appointment at the Cape in March last, and he was seconded months ago. Yet the 32nd is one of the most unfortunate regiments in the Service as regards promotion. One would have imagined that the Authorities would have shown a readiness to help on its senior subalterns, seeing that Lieutenant Clarke, who heads the list, has already passed nearly fifteen years in the Army. Of course it is by an oversight that Major Cherry is still allowed to remain on the establishment, but the next Gazette we hope will contain an announcement of Lieutenant Clarke's promotion, which is now nine months overdue.

Another regiment, the 55th, would appear to be suffering an injustice. One of its captains, Captain Pitt, was appointed on the 26th of June last to the adjutancy of the Cumberland Rifle Volunteers, and should have been seconded three months ago. The subalterns of the regiment, however, are still denied the benefit of the step, although officers in other corps who joined the Auxiliary Forces long after Captain Pitt, have made way in due course for their juniors.

It would appear that the clause in the Royal Warrant which lays down that a major on full pay shall retire on completing twenty-seven years' service, and seven in the substantive rank, will not interfere to any serious extent with the prospects of officers. In the next twelve months, only six officers on the whole list of the Cavalry and Infantry of the Line—six out of some 320—will come within the ruling of the Warrant. These are:—(1), Colonel G. D. Barker, 64th Regiment, on January 21; (2), Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel F. Knatchbull, 9th Regiment, on February 15; (3), Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel F. Eteson, 3rd Buffs, on March 28; (4), Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel R. H. Vivian, 49th Regiment, on April 15; (5), Brevet Colonel T. D. Baker, C.B., 18th Royal Irish, on August 15; and (6), Major G. Bayley, 31st Regiment, on August 24. Of these only four, viz., Colonels Barker, Knatchbull, Eteson, and Vivian, will be affected by the Warrant, for Colonel Baker and Major Bayley both of them have "boy's service," and this does not reckon for retirement. Both these officers will be allowed to hold on if they wish until 1884, and there is nothing to prevent Colonel Baker succeeding to the command of a battalion if he has any desire to do so. Major Bayley could not hope to get his regimental command under ordinary circumstances until Colonel Swettenham retires, on March 15, 1884; but the Compulsory Clause will remove him a few weeks before Colonel Swettenham goes, viz., on January 27. It will be seen from the foregoing that the seven years' rule is not so very great a hardship, after all; at any rate, it does not operate to the detriment of a large number of officers, though it will, of course, prove most unacceptable at times to an old soldier to find himself shelved just as the goal is being reached which it has been the aim of his life to attain. But the field-officers have not the grievance which the captains have, who are daily being turned out of the Service after twenty years.

Owing, we presume, rather to the rising of the Boers in the Transvaal than to the Basuto war, the 93rd Highlanders, as well as the 97th Regiment, have been ordered to proceed at once from Gibraltar to South Africa.

Major-General J. Ross, C.B., lately second-in-command of the Cabul-Candahar Field Force, has been awarded the distinguished-service reward vacant by the appointment of Lieutenant-General A. T. Heyland, C.B., to the colonelcy of the 14th Regiment. General Ross served with the Rifle Brigade in the Eastern Campaign, including the battles of Alma and Inkerman, and siege of Sebastopol, until February, 1855 (medal with three clasps, brevet of major, 5th Class of the Medjidie, and Turkish medal). Served also in the Indian Campaign of 1857-8, including the action of Cawnpore, siege and capture of Lucknow. Commanded the Camel Corps at the capture of Calpee and during the subsequent campaign in Central India (mentioned in despatches, brevet of lieutenant-colonel, C.B., medal with two clasps); commanded the Bengal troops during the operations in the Malay Peninsula in 1875-6 (mentioned in General Orders of the Government of India); commanded the Indian Expeditionary Force sent to the Mediterranean in 1878. He joined the Army April 14, 1846, and became a major-general March 1, 1870.

We may point out for the information of our non-military readers that the Irish garrisons now consist of seven regiments of Cavalry and 26 battalions of Infantry, viz.:—The 2nd and 3rd Dragoon Guards, 1st and 2nd Dragoons, 7th, 19th, and 20th Hussars; the 1st Battalion Coldstream Guards, 1st Battalion Scots Guards, 2nd Battalion 1st Foot, 1st Battalion 9th Foot, 1st Battalion 15th Foot, 1st Battalion 16th Foot, 2nd Battalion 20th Foot, 1st Battalion 22nd Foot, 2nd Battalion 25th Foot, 28th Foot, 36th Foot, 37th Foot, 47th Foot, 48th Foot, 57th Foot, 1st Battalion 60th Foot, 64th Foot, 76th Foot, 80th Foot, 84th Foot, 104th Foot, 105th Foot, 106th Foot, and 107th Foot, and 2nd and 3rd Battalions Rifle Brigade, besides Artillery, Royal Engineers, Army Service Corps, and the depôts (two companies each) of 16 Line battalions,—the 18th, 27th, 83rd, 86th, 87th, 88th, 89th, 94th, 100th, 101st, 102nd, 103rd, 104th, 108th, and 109th.

We learn from private sources that Herr Krupp has arrived in Russia to confer with the Government with regard to a project of the Minister of War for manufacturing Krupp cannon at home. The efforts of the Russians themselves to manufacture heavy steel ordnance at the Obouchoff and other Governmen works at St. Petersburg have ended in failure, after an immense outlay on workshops and plant. General Milintine wishes to utilise these resources by the formation of a Russian Essen, under the control of Krupp's agents, and conducted as a branch establishment of the famous German business. How far the negotiations are likely to succeed, we cannot yet say, but we understand that Russia is willing to pay very heavily for the manufacture of all her steel cannon at home.

A correspondent in another column draws attention to the great injustice which the captains of reduced regiments suffer under the operations of the Royal Warrant of 1877. His statement is in no way exaggerated, and the subject is one that demands the consideration of the Secretary of State for War. The officers in question have been so seriously injured by the action of the Government in disbanding their regiments, that it is hard indeed that they should be compelled to take a less rate of retirement than other officers of their rank who retire under the present Regulations. They did not seek the promotion that was conferred upon them as compensation for the loss of position. There was no alternative but for them to accept the offer made to them by the War Office, and it is in the very height of injustice to include them in the same category as those who were on the Half-pay List at the time Purchase was abolished, and who had accepted half-pay to suit their own convenience. No officers have been more seriously injured, as a result of the abolition of Purchase; and as the number of those affected by this rule is small, it would be a gracious act on the part of Mr. Childers were he to reopen their case, and arrange for some special provision being made for them. We are aware that there are difficulties to be overcome, but these ought not to be unsurmountable.

Reviews.

The Ships of the Royal Navy. (Griffin and Co., Portsmouth).—In this second volume of Ships of the Royal Navy those ranging from 1872 to 1880 are chiefly given, in a series of twenty-five most truthful illustrations, admirably lithographed in colours from original drawings by Mr. W. F. Mitchell, who holds so high a reputation as a marine artist. As regards the descriptions of the vessels, they have been obtained from official sources, and we believe we are correct in saying that the introduction is from the pen of our Director of Naval Construction. A more perfect work of its kind it would not be possible to obtain, neither could a more suitable book for the library of a naval officer be found.

The Agricultural Gazette and Almanac, 1881.—To any of our naval and military friends who have beaten their swords into ploughshares, or have had the weapons forced into that form by official action, we recommend, as a good investment for 6d., the above excellent publication, which may be had at the office of the Agricultural Gazette, Catherine Street, Strand.

Among other useful publications to be noticed at this time of the year must be included The Professional Pocket-Book and Daily and Hourly Engagement Diary, published, under the direction of Sir Julius Benedict, by Rudall, Carte, and Co., which musicians, bandmasters, and others, with engagements of a professional nature, will find very handy, cheap, and serviceable.

Illustrated Price-list of Masonic Clothing, &c. (George Kenning, Aldersgate Street).—This is merely a price-list, but it is certainly a peculiar one, from the excellence of the illustrations attached to the several articles included in the term masonic clothing and jewels. It treats of everything connected with masonic clothing, &c., giving the fullest particulars as to the prices of the several articles, as well as some general information.

The Central News correspondent telegraphs:—"The Customs authorities have taken possession of the ship Juno in the Clare river, near the mouth of the Shannon. She had on board a cargo of American arms, and three waggon-loads have already been removed from her. A force of Marines now have charge of the vessel, and a body of artillery have been sent from Scattery Battery to accompany the vessel up the river. A number of young men who have recently arrived in the district from America are under the surveillance of the police. There is great excitement in the district. It will be remembered that the Juno was the name of the vessel from which some arms were taken in Cork harbour a short time ago, but it has not been ascertained whether the vessel now seized is the same."

THE CASE OF "REDUCED OFFICERS."

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—At the present time, when general attention is drawn to the subject of the compulsory retirement of officers, it is well that the case of a few, who think that from another point of view they have been hardly dealt with, should be considered. These are the senior subalterns of corps disbanded in 1870, who, at that time, obtained unsolicited promotion to the Half-pay List. In the course of debate on the Army Bill in 1871, Government emphatically declared that no officer should suffer in person or pocket by the abolition of Purchase, and from time to time reference was made in this regard to the hardship entailed on the old subalterns of the Army by their daily supersession in peace-time by their wealthier juniors. On the other side, it was argued that the officer so purchased over did not suffer materially; in the junior grades of ensign and cornet, he himself, perhaps, had purchased over others; that his steps to the head of his present grade had been paid for by his seniors; that even if superseded a few times, still a large number of vacancies in all grades were reserved for him; and that finally, when promoted, his new commission so gained was as valuable in every sense, pecuniarily and otherwise, as if he had paid for instead of serving for it, which was, in the main, true; a company earned by service was worth exactly the same to its holder as if he had paid for it in money. And in this just confidence—just, because it rested on many Royal Warrants and the custom of 150 years—the senior subaltern, often a regimental staff officer, was content to wait for his promotion. Now, in 1870, four regiments were ordered to be disbanded. No shadow of reproach was there against them; on the contrary, the record of the Cape corps is a glorious one, and that of the Military train most honourable, while of the Canadian Rifles and the West India Regiments, nothing has been said but good. Howbeit, for public reasons they were disbanded, and certain of the senior lieutenants found their names in the Gazette as half-pay captains, without being given the chance of refusing the step. Doubtless they would not have refused, their regiments being broken up; and, arguing that, as they were also promised a speedy restoration to full pay, they would, in a short time, in a new regiment, be able to realise the value of their commissions, if they should so choose. For nobody dreamed of the imminent abolition of Purchase. Had these officers declined promotion and been reduced as lieutenants, they would have done better, for they would have been brought back to full pay in a few months. But by accepting the half-pay captaincy, each officer's pay was reduced from seven shillings and sixpence to seven shillings per diem, besides his losing staff, and lodging, and fuel allowances, amounting to at least five shillings more, and this, not for a few months, but for four to six years. They were promoted in 1870, but none were employed until 1874. To their credit be it said that this long interval was not wasted; they maintained themselves at the daily rising level of professional knowledge, and, as a rule, gained the warm approbation of their new battalion chiefs on their rejoining the colours. But the time arriving when one of these officers wishes to retire, to his surprise he receives the pension—not of the Purchase officer, whose rights and privileges he had shared since he joined as a lad, perhaps 25 years ago, but of the officer of the new system, who has joined under the changed condition of things. That is to say, he receives some £50 per annum less than he should receive. And why is it so? Because he was not on full pay on Oct. 31, 1871. But was that the officer's fault? Surely not. Can it be that his case is confounded with that of one who applies for and obtains a half-pay company for private reasons? It was for public reasons, on the other hand, and contrary to his desire, that this officer was on half-pay for years, at a serious loss of pay and of seniority. Why, then, add to his ill-fortune by reducing his pension one-fifth? To sum up, it would appear:—1. That certain privileges were, by warrant and custom, existing under the old system which the new officer does not inherit. 2. That, in the case of the older subalterns, these amounted to a "reversion" of a company without purchase, equal in money value to one by purchase. 3. That, in accepting promotion on the Half-pay List, these officers accepted no other promotion than that for which they had been already content to wait so long; i.e., a company equal in value to one paid for in money. 4. That they find, on restoration to full pay, that the company accepted in 1870, a year before (and in entire ignorance of the abolition of Purchase), is of no money value, but that it is classed with those of the new system; and that instead of being on the same footing as their old brother-officers, they are, as regards pension, to receive £50 per annum less, although some of them had purchased in one or both of the subaltern grades. 5. That their having been on half-pay in October, 1871, is no valid reason for this, it not being enforced in the case of those who, having purchased their companies, were on half-pay at that time, such half-pay having been compulsory, and not voluntary. 6. That the officers in question deserve special recognition both from length of service and their proved merit; they are now serving nearly as junior of their grades regimentally, while in Army standing they are not seldom the seniors, the period of half-pay having made a great difference to them. The restoration of its legitimate value to each of these companies would seem to be not only just, but desirable, enabling them to retire at once, with the satisfactory feeling that no invidious distinction has been drawn between them and their brother-officers of like standing. This concession would not be a costly one, as there are but very few officers to whom it would apply. To the candid mind, it must be evident that Article 99 of Royal Warrant of May 1, 1878, should meet the case of those officers to whom half-pay promotion was given, instead of the companies in their own regiments for which they had so long and patiently waited.—I am, &c.,

A FRIEND IN NEED.

THE REORGANISATION OF OUR FIELD ARTILLERY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I was much surprised, on taking up to-day the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE of the 11th inst., to read in it such an ill-considered and misleading article as that on "Our Field Artillery;" especially ill-considered, when it is remembered that it throws blame upon those who, from their position, are denied the opportunity of replying to it. That our field-artillery equipment, as it is at present, compares unfavourably in power with that of other nations, no one can deny. The writer of the article in question proves, to his own satisfaction, that the blame of this rests mainly with the Royal Carriage Department, but not to the satisfaction of those who understand the subject. He omits, in the first place, to state that when the 9 and 16-pounder M.L.R. guns were introduced into the Service, they were second to none abroad, and that their being now surpassed by any is simply due to the rapid growth of science and improvement in manufacture of the present day. In the next place, he quite forgets, or does not understand, that a definite muzzle velocity may be imparted to a given projectile in two ways,—namely, as it were by a blow, or by a gradually increasing pressure. In the former case, the maximum strain (which is that which mainly does the mischief) thrown upon the gun and carriage will be very much greater than in the latter. In our present field guns, which are now comparatively old, the strain is produced more as a blow; in the foreign guns, which are comparatively new, as a pressure; hence the result which is deplored, namely, greater strength, or what is the same thing, greater weight, to meet the greater strain. To prove the point incontestably, not very long ago a carriage was made exactly after the German, and of the same scantling of material, and the English 9-pounder fired from it. It gave way the second round.—I am, &c.,

FIELD OFFICER, R.A.

THE ESTABLISHMENT OF GENERAL OFFICERS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—I see in Tuesday's Gazette that the vacancy caused by Gen. Irwin's retirement has (so far as the Colonels are concerned) been absorbed, although by the carefully compiled and accurate table which appeared in your impression of the 11th inst., Col. Morant was certainly entitled to that step. That table includes all vacancies from Jan. 1, 1880, up to Jan. 11, 1881, but I will endorse its accuracy by going back to Dec. 21, 1878, presuming that, as the War Office had absorbed Gens. Norcote and Trollope's steps in Oct. 1878, they had squared the promotions up to Gen. Garvock's death on Nov. 10, 1878. From Dec. 21, 1878, to Dec. 31, 1879, the following 15 vacancies took place, viz.:—Raymond (r.), Dec. 21, 1878; Kelly (r.), Dec. 22, 1878; Webber-Smith (d.), Dec. 31, 1878; Brown (r.), Feb. 5, 1879; Staunton (r.), March 15, 1879; Russell (r.), May 17, 1879; Stannus (r. on full pay), June 23, 1879; Fellowes (d.), July 10, 1879; Lawrence (r.), July 14, 1879; Hagart (d.), July 30, 1879; Pocklington (d.), Aug. 10, 1879; Lockhart (d.), Sept. 17, 1879; Bell (d.), Nov. 10, 1879; Robertson (r.), Nov. 14, 1879; and Goodenough (d.), Nov. 29, 1879. These 15 vacancies, taking them per se, were correctly enough filled up by the ten following promotions of Cols. Sarel, Feilden, Palmer, Blane, Harene, Gubbins, Goodlake, Monck, Rattray, and Randolph; and so far, there is nothing to complain of. This confirms the correctness of the statement in your number of the 11th inst., showing that up to Jan. 10, 1881 (the date of Gen. Hill's anticipated retirement), the Colonels, to J. H. Dunne inclusive, are, or rather will be, entitled to promotion; consequently, as stated by you, Cols. Gall, Young, Henning, Wombwell, and Morant ought to have been majors-general on or before Dec. 3, 1880, the date of Gen. Irwin's retirement. Several promotions of lieutenants-general and majors-general are also due, consequent on deaths and retirements of Generals. Unless any deaths take place, Gen. Hill's retirement on Jan. 10 next is the last step to be calculated on before the new régime comes into force; and it seems cruel and unfair to rob the seniors on the Colonels' List of promotion due to them by Clause 31 of the Royal Warrant of Aug. 13, 1877, which has not yet been cancelled.—I am., &c.,

EXPENSE AMMUNITION.

Surgeon-Major W. S. Oliver writes from Halifax, N.S., Nov. 30:—"I beg you will permit me, through your columns, to bring to the notice of the Military Authorities a simple device for the supply of "expense ammunition," which will facilitate rapidity of fire, and compensate in some measure for one great defect our soldiers' rifle possesses, as compared with "repeating" rifles of the present day. These latter are undoubtedly about to become the weapon of the future for all cavalry and infantry soldiers, and to save Government the cost their adoption would incur, and to render our present rifle as nearly similar to them in efficiency, in this respect, as it is possible, I would suggest that its butt should be used as an "expense chamber," for the ready supply of ten or less rounds of ammunition. Half the wood nearest the heel-plate (left) of which the butt of the rifle is composed, is ample to sustain the force of recoil, &c.; and in the other (right) section might be inserted a chamber of ten or less compartments for "expense" ammunition, which would be easy of access for immediate use, without interfering in any way with the manipulation of the weapon by the soldier. I have had the butt of my sporting-rifle altered in this manner, and find it acts most efficiently in facilitating rapidity of fire; while the extra weight of the ammunition is scarcely perceptible, but acts rather as a counterpoise to the barrel-weight of the rifle, and helps in some measure to impede recoil."

A correspondent, alluding to the statement which went the round of the Press, that the late Gen. Brooke was the first British General killed in action since the battle of Waterloo, says:—'What about Cathcart, Strangeways, and another, whose name I cannot remember, who fell at Inkerman, in Nov. 1854?"

THE LATE LIEUTENANT HEYLAND, R.N.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The noble qualities of the late Lieut. Heyland, as shown in the Service to which he belonged, require no allusion from me. The fact of his possessing both the bronze and silver medals of the Humane Society, and the letter from the Admiral commanding the Channel Squadron published in your paper, speak for themselves. But having known him intimately from the time he entered the Navy, for the first four and a half years of his career, and also having been frequently brought into contact with him since, I cannot help recalling how much he endeared himself to all who knew him in private life by his unselfish and generous nature. Warm-hearted and unassuming almost to shyness, and devoted to his family, his noble qualities seemed to draw his friends nearer to him the longer they knew him, and his death has caused a void in more homes than his own. Ashore, the little children whom he loved will miss his tender ways, as much as those he served with afloat will his bright and cheery manner. He was the truest of friends, and the manner of his death was in keeping with his noble character, for, as Macaulay says of Horatius, "How could man die better than in facing fearful odds!"—I am, &c.,

NAVAL CADETS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE."

SIR,—The Service owes you a debt of gratitude for your article relative to the forthcoming competitive examinations of Naval cadets. When the Admiralty saw fit to withdraw, suddenly, the nominations from the admirals and captains, the voice of the Service was entirely against them. This new step will be still more unpopular. Her Majesty's Navy is not in want of "knowledge-crammed idiots," and it strikes me that cramming boys of tender years to the extent they will have to be crammed when the new system comes into vogue, will have the tendency of giving the Service a few. I am not one to sneer at examinations, having, perhaps, gone through more than my share of them, but I agree with you thoroughly in thinking that this new step will tend to change, to my mind for the worse, the class from which we make our future Naval officers.—I am, &c.,

LIEUT., R.N.

A correspondent, writing to a contemporary, says that he has had considerable experience in the training of boys, and adds as follows:—"The rumour gains ground that the Admiralty is still hesitating whether to throw open Naval cadetships to competition or not. I am not greatly in love with the 'competition wallah' system, especially for such youngsters as are eligible for 'Naval cadetships,' but I certainly think it will be a great hardship on old Naval officers, unless special rights, say something analogous to those reserved to Queen's and Indian cadets, if the nomination system be abolished. Besides, the present system keeps up the tone of the Service. Officers now serving look after the youths just entering, for the sake of those whose sons and relatives they are, and who have been friends and messmates of their own in their early days. If competition is to be the order of the day, officers' sons would stand little or no chance, as it is notorious, from the fact of the fathers being constantly abroad, moving from station to station, that they have little opportunity of educating their sons, so as to enable them to compete with their more fortunate civilian brethren."

There were 35 British and foreign wrecks, of which 17 were British, reported during the past week, making a total of 1,604 for the present year, or a decrease of 12, as compared with the corresponding period of last year. The approximate value of property lost was £3,250,000, including British, £1,500,000.

Mr. G. H. Beaton, chief engineer at Keyham and Devonport Yards, has been granted three months' special leave. During his absence the duties of superintendence will devolve upon Mr. R. Sennet.

They are each of 7,168 tons displacement, and are protected at the water-line by compound armour 50 centimètres thick at the top and diminishing to 40 centimètres. The Bayard, building at Brest; the Turenne, building at L'Orient; and the Vauban and the Duguesclin, building at Cherbourg, are ships of the Audacious class, and are armoured at the water-line by compound plates 25 centimètres in thickness. The Formidable, building at L'Orient, and the Admiral Baudin, building at Brest, are monster ironclads of 11,300 tons, and armoured at the sides to the extent of from 45 to 55 centimètres. The Admiral Duperrez, which is being constructed at Marseilles, is a similar vessel, but, while her side armour is of the same thickness, her tonnage is 10,500.

2nd Life Guards. Mr. Frank Buckland, her Majesty's Inspector of Salmon Fisheries, died early on Sunday morning, at his residence, 37 Albany Street, N.W., aged 54 years. The deceased, who was well known as the originator of the method of breeding salmon, as illustrated at South Kensington, and of the means of propagating and distributing various other kinds of fish, was the eldest son of the late Very Rev. W. Buckland, D.D., Dean of Westminster. Mr. Buckland was a scholar of Winchester College and a student of Christ Church, Oxford, where he took his B.A. degree in 1848. Having served the office of house surgeon to St. George's Hospital, he became, in 1854, assistant-surgeon to the 2nd Life Guards, from which post he retired in 1863. He was appointed Inspector of Salmon Fisheries for England in 1867, and in 1870 Special Commissioner to inquire into the effect of recent legislation on the Salmon Fisheries of Scotland. 87th Fusiliers. A correspondent writes:—"You have advertised the claims of several regiments in your columns to retain their old distinctive appellations, will you therefore give us your assistance in the case of the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers? The proposed change to merge the titles of such distinguished regiments as the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers and 88th Connaught Rangers into the provincial one of the 'Royal Connaught Fusiliers,' is alike hateful to officers and men of both. The former obtained their designation in 1827, on the representation of Gen. Sir John Doyle, that Ireland alone was without a Fusilier regiment, though England, Scotland, and Wales each had their national Fusiliers. I enclose you copies from the regimental records of the correspondence on the subject. To call the 87th 'Royal Connaught Fusiliers' is simply depriving them of three-fourths of their distinctive designation. It is somewhat equivalent to saying to a soldier, 'You have four medals, I must deprive you of three,' and this without any fault on the soldier's part. As regards the 88th, the title they pride themselves on is the 'Rangers.' What are they without this? When this is gone, their esprit de corps has gone with it. They have nothing to look back upon. What are 'Talavera,' 'Salamanca,' 'Alma,' 'Inkerman,' &c., to them? The title by which it was known that they fought in these glorious victories is gone, and buried in the dust of War Office innovations. If you can help us to retain our cherished old name, the Royal Irish Fusiliers will be grateful. Extract from regimental records, 87th Fusiliers:—'In a letter dated July 11, 1827, Gen. Sir John Doyle preferred a request that the 87th might be styled the "Prince of Wales's Own Irish Regiment of Fusiliers," in the following terms,—"England, Scotland, and Wales have each their national Fusilier regiments; Ireland alone is without one. The prayer of my petition is that the blank may be filled up by the Prince of Wales's Own Irish Regiment, to be honoured by the title of the 'Prince of Wales's Own Irish Fusiliers.' Thus shall we preserve the endearing title we so highly prize, retain the national colours, under which we have so long fought, and avoid collision with any regiment that might have been honoured with the name of Royal." This request was complied with, and the result was communicated to Gen. Sir John Doyle in the following letter from the Adjutant-General:—"Horse Guards, July 16, 1827.—Sir,—In reply to your letter of the 11th inst., I have the honour to acquaint you that the King has been graciously pleased to approve of the 87th Regt., of which you are colonel, receiving the title of the 'Prince of Wales's Own Irish Fusiliers,' as a mark of his Majesty's most gracious favour, and in consideration of the extraordinary distinction that has marked the career of the corps on all occasions.—I have, &c., (signed) H. Torrens, Adjt.-Gen. Gen. Sir J. Doyle, K.C.B., Col. of the 87th Regt." A further communication was made by the Adjt.-Gen. to Gen. Sir John Doyle, of which the following is an extract:—"Horse Guards, Nov. 17, 1827. Sir,—I have the honour to acquaint you that the King has been pleased to approve of the 87th Regiment assuming the title 'Royal,' and its being in future styled the '87th or Royal Irish Fusiliers,' instead of the 'Prince of Wales's Own Irish Fusiliers.' His Majesty has been further pleased to approve the patterns of facings and lace, proposed by you for the uniform of the officers, non-commissioned officers, drummers, and privates of the 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers, and to command that the same be adopted from Dec. 25, 1829, when the new clothing now in possession of the regiment shall be worn out.—I have, &c., H. Torrens, Adjt.-Gen. Gen. Sir John Doyle, G.C.B., Col. 87th Royal Irish Fusiliers."'"

88th Regiment. Capt. Bowen is about to retire on a pension of £239 a year and the honorary rank of major.

89th Regiment. Lieut. Munn sailed for India on Sunday last in H.M.S. Jumna.

90th Light Infantry. Capt. Smith sailed for India on Sunday last in H.M.S. Jumna, in charge of a draft of 91 men.

93rd Highlanders. The regiment, we understand, is to be sent to the Cape from Gibraltar. Col. Tisdall, commanding the 56th Brigade Depôt, has received orders to hold a draft in readiness to embark for Gibraltar on the 31st inst., to join the regiment. The draft will consist of 2 officers, 2 serjeants, 2 corporals, and 135 privates. This will necessitate the embarkation of the very last recruit. In Brevet Major Gordon, who has been retired, the regiment loses one of its best and most popular officers. Major Gordon having been seconded some time ago, on appointment to the Cyprus Pioneer Batn., his retirement will give no promotion.

97th Regiment. The following appeared in the Times of Tuesday:—"We understand that the 97th Regt., which was to have been brought to Ireland from Gibraltar, is now ordered to Natal, and will leave Gibraltar in the Tamar on the 23rd inst. Although Sir Pomeroy Colley did not ask for reinforcements, he intimated, we believe, that it might become necessary to send them, and it was thought better to despatch a regiment at once, without running the risk of any graver emergency. The 1st Batn. of the 60th Rifles are ordered at once from Aldershot to Ireland, in place of the 97th Regt."

98TH REGIMENT. Capt. Sparks sailed from Portsmouth on Sunday for India in H.M.S. Jumna to join head-quarters, on vacating his appointment as A.D.C. to Major-Gen. Peyton at Aldershot. Lieut. Brinkley and 2nd Lieut. Somerville also sailed in the Jumna.

99TH REGIMENT. Lieut. Whistler sailed for India on Sunday last in H.M.S. Jumna.

104TH FUSILIERS. Capt. Stokes becomes major, vice Major Spalding, retired.

105TH LIGHT INFANTRY. Capt. Huskisson obtains the majority, vice Major Darvill, retired.

106TH LIGHT INFANTRY. Capt. Parker-Jervis is about to be seconded from the 15th inst., on appointment to the adjutancy of the 2nd Durham Militia. We understand that the regiment, at present stationed in Ireland, has been so reduced by feeding its twin-battalion, the 68th, in India, that it cannot muster above 350. This is a striking commentary on the existing system.

RIFLE BRIGADE. Lieut.-Col. Seymour is transferred from the 3rd to the 1st Batn., on promotion; Major Fryer from the 1st to the 3rd Batn., and Capt. Hon. P. Sidney from the 2nd to the 1st Batn. Lieut. Pearson is appointed to the 2nd from the 3rd Batn., and Lieut. Montague-Blackett to the 2nd from the 4th Batn. The 2nd Batn. arrived at Queenstown on Sunday in H.M.S. Himalaya, under command of Col. Carr Glyn, and landed on Monday, and took over quarters at Cork.

ARMY SERVICE CORPS. Instructions have been received from the Horse Guards directing that the 14th Company, consisting of 1 officer, 1 conductor, 6 serjeants, 1 trumpeter, 54 rank and file, and 63 horses, is to proceed at once by march route to Portsmouth, there to embark in the troopship Assistance, for conveyance to Cork. The dismounted portion of the company, including 25 non-commissioned officers and men, 9 women, and 23 children, has proceeded by railway to Portsmouth, for embarkation.

MEDICAL DEPARTMENT. Deputy-Surg.-Gen. J. L. Jameson, who has recently arrived home from India on promotion, has been appointed to succeed Surg.-Gen. Thompson as P.M.O. at Cork.

VETERINARY DEPARTMENT. 1st-class Vet.-Surg. J. Hammond and Vet.-Surgs. C. Phillips and S. Gillespie sailed for India on Sunday last in H.M.S. Jumna.

CHAPLAINS' DEPARTMENT. The many friends, both in Woolwich and London, of the Rev. R. H. Bullock, the chaplain attached to Herbert Hospital, will be pleased to hear that his health, which had been seriously undermined, is being restored at Gibraltar, where the reverend gentleman has been for some time on sick-leave. In a letter to a friend, Mr. Bullock says:—"There is nothing serious the matter, but the medical authorities say it would be inadvisable for me to face the inclemency of an English winter until I am better. I am allowed to work, indeed work is part of my medicine." Mr. Bullock's flock at Herbert Hospital are anxiously looking for his return.

The Auxiliary Forces.

MILITIA.

HAMPSHIRE ARTILLERY. The regiment has now been recruited up to its full establishment, and many eligible recruits are obliged to be refused. In view of the great popularity of the regiment, Col. Inglefield has applied for permission to add two batteries, which it is believed there would be no difficulty in filling up by the commencement of the training period.

The Oxford University Herald says:—"The Army College for Militia officers is to be transferred from Iffley to Abingdon during the present vacation, and will be opened at the latter place on Jan. 18. Some of our London contemporaries have been complaining of the behaviour of young men preparing for the Army at the London 'crammers,' but we can confidently say that the Iffley students have impressed their neighbours, and all who have observed them, with their gentlemanly demeanour."

THE VOLUNTEERS.

12TH LANCASHIRE RIFLES. The annual ball took place at the Town Hall, Rochdale, on the 16th inst., and was preceded by the distribution of prizes won during the year. Col. Fielden presided and distributed the prizes, and on the platform were also most of the officers. Lieut.-Col. Philippi, in reviewing the past year, said that they had gained during the year an honorary colonel by the appointment of Col. Fielden, and he could assure that officer that the news of his appointment was received with very great satisfaction by all ranks. Last year there were 685 efficients and one non-efficient, the non-efficient being a bugler under age, who, therefore, could not be returned as efficient. This year they had 653 efficients and five non-efficients. That, they would see, was a slight decrease in the number of efficients, but he did not think much of that, because the numbers would fluctuate. The corps having been dismissed, the ball commenced, and was continued till about 2 o'clock in the morning.

3RD CITY OF LONDON RIFLES. The Lord Mayor attended the Guildhall in state on Saturday evening last, for the purpose of presenting the prizes to the regiment. The regiment, which paraded under the command of Lieut.-Col. Laurie, were formed up in square fronting the dais, on which the prizes was displayed. The Lord Mayor having taken his seat, Col. Laurie laid before his lordship a gratifying statement as to the strength and efficiency of the regiment. The Lord Mayor then presented the prizes to the successful competitors. The prizes, which included the challenge cup, presented by General Lord Napier of Magdala, the hon. colonel of the regiment, as well as prizes by most of the City Companies, were of a valuable character.

5TH MIDDLESEX. The inspection of this regiment took place last Thursday by Major-Gen. Cameron, C.B., hon. col. The General, who was very warmly received, this being the occasion of his first introduction to the regiment as their hon. colonel, congratulated the officers, non-commissioned officers, and men upon their soldierlike appearance and general efficiency. After the inspection, Gen. Cameron presented the prizes to the successful competitors. Many officers of distinction were present who expressed their satisfaction at the general appearance of the regiment.

18TH MIDDLESEX RIFLES. The annual distribution of prizes took place in St. James's Hall, on Monday, before a numerous gathering of members and friends of the corps. Amongst those present on the platform were Gen. Sir F. Seymour, K.C.B., and Lady Seymour, Col. Sir E. Y. W. Henderson, K.C.B., and Lady Henderson. Major Barrow (who is in temporary command of the regiment), in opening the proceedings, after referring to the recent change in the numbering of the corps, said he was happy to say that the regiment was now in a very efficient condition, for it had a total of 1,000 men against the 937 on the roll last year. Sir Edmund Henderson, who said that he, as Chief Commissioner of Police, had some official acquaintance with the Volunteers, and he could testify that the force of men sent down to Wimbledon at the occasion of the yearly meetings there had very little difficulty in maintaining peace and good order among so well-disciplined and orderly a body as they were. He might claim for himself an hereditary interest in this branch of auxiliary forces, for his grandfather had commanded a Volunteer regiment in the days when there was a watch fire blazing on every hill on the South Coast. He had never seen anything but good in the Volunteer force, and he was certain that if the time ever came for their services, the men of the force would be found ready.

19TH MIDDLESEX (BLOOMSBURY) RIFLES. The annual winter route-march was held on Saturday, a strong detachment, under the command of Lieut.-Col. Smith Richards, parading for the purpose at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, at the Bow Station of the North London Railway. All ranks were completely equipped in marching order, and, preceded by the drum and fife band, the little column took the road shortly before 5 for Romford, which was reached, after a sharp march over muddy roads, soon after 8 in the evening. On the way advance and rear guards were formed with the proper connecting links, and every means taken to render the march thoroughly instructive. Head-quarters were established at Romford at the White Hart Hotel, and guards having been mounted and sentries posted, the men were billeted for the night in the town. There was a special parade for Divine service on Sunday, and the detachment returned to London on Monday morning.

7TH SURREY RIFLES. Colonel Cochrane, 1st Royal Lanark Militia, presented the prizes on Saturday night in the great hall of the City Terminus Hotel. Lieut.-Col. Porter, in opening the proceedings, referred to the changes in their constitution by the amalgamation with them of the 26th Surrey Rifles. In replying to a vote of thanks for presiding, Col. Cochrane, who has lately occupied the post of Adjutant-General of the Volunteers at the Cape, recounted a few of his experiences, and gave his testimony to the willingness and the ability of the Volunteer force in that portion of her Majesty's Dominions.

According to the returns received at the War Office, the enrolled strength of the Volunteer Force for the official year which terminated on Oct. 31 was 206,410, out of a maximum establishment of 243,546. This, compared with last year, when the enrolled strength stood at 206,250, is only a small increase, but at the same time it is the largest total which has been recorded in the history of the organisation during the last twenty-one years. The efficients have fallen to 196,901, as against 197,485, or a decrease of 584. The non-efficients are thus represented by 9,509, as compared with 8,765. The proficients are also less—17,395, as against 17,411—the loss in this respect being under the head of officers, 5,545 of whom hold certificates, as against 5,586. The certificated serjeants show the slight advance of 25, viz., 11,850, as against 11,825. There is a falling off in the number who attended the annual inspection from 174,646 to 172,464.

The following General Order has been specially issued by the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief:—"Referring to paragraph 422 of the Volunteer Regulations, which directs that members of corps will not individually or collectively attend political meetings, or join in public political discussion or demonstrations, in uniform, the Field-Marshal Commanding-in-Chief desires it to be understood, that if at any meeting of Volunteers in uniform political matter of a controversial nature is introduced into any speech delivered to the meeting, it will be the duty of the senior officer present to take steps to prevent a breach of the above regulation. It will probably be sufficient to call the attention of the speaker to the position in which the meeting is placed by the nature of his address; but if this course does not avail, it will be the duty of the senior officer to dissolve the meeting, and to direct the officers and men who may be present in uniform to withdraw."

The Dublin Mail thinks that "the South-Sea Islanders must take the Dublin papers regularly, or they could hardly have imitated the fine art of assassination and outrage so perfectly. Murders have been allowed to go unpunished for so long now that licence and impunity have begotten further audacity and daring. A gentleman lately returned from the South Sea reports of the Solomon Islanders that they said they did not care for an English man-of-war, as there was only talking and no fighting done; whereas with French and German men-of-war, there was no talking, but plenty of fighting. It is quite patent, therefore, that Liberal rule is, at all events, consistent in principle and policy at home and abroad. The British flag is kept flying, but there the matter ends. Action is an exploded idea, and liberty, fraternity, and equality pure and simple are the order of the day."

ASSAULT-AT-ARMS.

A grand assault-at-arms took place on the 17th inst. in the Gymnasium, Chatham, under the patronage of Brigdr.-Gen. Sir Evelyn Wood, V.C., K.C.B., commanding Chatham District, and Rear-Admiral Brandreth, Superintendent Chatham Dockyard, in aid of the funds of the Soldiers' and Seamens' Home. The entertainment was given by the Superintendent and Instructors of the Gymnasium, assisted by Mr. McCaffery (formerly an instructor in the 2nd Batn. 5th Fusiliers) and men of the garrison. The performance opened with the infantry sword-exercise by Superintendent and Instructors, followed by a stout fencing contest between Serjt.-Major Broughton, Gymnastic Staff, and Serjt. Walker, 75th Regt. Corpl. Howe, 75th Regt., and Corpl. Sellers, 52nd Light Infantry, next made some good play with the single-stick. The Superintendent and Instructors then went through a series of difficult and daring feats on the pair of flying rings, amid loud applause. A number of other events followed. Great praise is due to Capt. James and the Instructors for the way in which the arrangements were carried out, their efforts to make the entertainment a success being untiring.

As the newly-passed Naval cadets will not appear in the Navy List for next month, and as the list published by the Admiralty gave only some of the initials of the successful candidates, it may not be amiss to give a complete list of the fresh entries, from which it will be seen that, happily, as yet, there are many old Naval names among them. The following is the order in which they passed into the Service:—Sydney Robert Fremantle, Michael Culme-Seymour, Arthur Cavenagh Leveson, Brian Herbert Fairbairn Barttelot, Claude Preston Buckle, Arthur Hepburn Walsh, Philip Howard Colomb, Cecil John Fiennes, Sydenham Gordon Douglas, Warren Hastings D'Oyly, George Ernest Stapleton Petch, Thomas Hudson Foster, Douglas Egremont Robert Brownrigg, Henry Bertram Pelly, Edwin Veale Underhill, Harold Christian, William Burgoyne Cowper-Coles, Henry Blacket, George Ellis Cave, Judge D'Arcy, Gilbert Charles Hutton Wintle, Charles Frederick Corbett, Frank Osborne Creagh Osborne. — Hampshire Telegraph.

We understand that the Russian Government has given an order to an engineering firm at Abo, in Finland, for 12 torpedo cutters, on a new system, constructed of wood, and provided with engines of six nominal horse-power. Each of the cutters will cost 7,500 roubles, and together 90,000 roubles, or about £10,000. They are intended for Admiral Lesovsky's fleet in the China seas.—Globe.

Mr. Clarence Hearsey, a midshipman of the Royal Naval Reserve of some seven years' standing, has been ordered to be received on board the Excellent, to pass through a short course of gunnery.

The Seamew, Coastguard cruiser, belonging to Portland, while on her way down on Saturday, carried away her mainshaft, and was compelled to put back to Spithead under sail.

There are Few, if any, Medicines more Troublesome to Administer than Cod Liver Oil, and it is often grievous to find that patients whom it would most certainly benefit will not take it. It is, therefore, a great boon to get such an Oil as the present. We have tried it, and find it is exceedingly bland to the taste, and causes no eructations or nausea afterwards. It well deserves the name of "Perfected."—The Practitioner. See also the Lancet, British Medical Journal, &c., &c. All who have difficulty in taking Cod Liver Oil should insist on having Allen and Hanburys' "Perfected" Oil. Sold only in imperial quarter-pints, 1s 4d; half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s. Trade-mark, a Plough. Of all Chemists.

The NAVAL AND MILITARY STATIONS are published by the ARMY AND NAVY GAZETTE on the first Saturday in each month.

Army and Navy Gazette.
LONDON, SATURDAY, DECEMBER 25, 1880.

IN this world, occasionally, there is a Nemesis to be seen dogging the steps of the wrongdoers among the nations, and sometimes inflicting visible, if not swift, punishment for the doing of the wrong. The twaddling philosophers of the moribund Saturday Review treat with the utmost scorn the notion that injustice and oppression provoke the injured and oppressed to dislike and, if possible, injure the authors of their sufferings; but outside the narrow and narrowing circle of the select Sunday readers (who cannot be accused of amusing themselves as they peruse their Saturday Reviler in their clubs or closets, or of incurring any of the penalties of Sabbath enjoyment as they study the pompous oracle), no one pays the least attention to the opinion of the "West-End Reynolds." It is quite true that Germany has not lost any of her power or prestige by the annexation of Alsace and Lorraine, but the price she has had to pay for her acquisition has been and is enormous, and there will be more to be paid hereafter. And that annexation was a legitimate exercise of the rights of the conqueror, and the conquered made peace on the terms that the annexation was acknowledged. In the case of the Transvaal Republic, there was no war, and there was no previous conflict at all. The transaction reads like the story of a bad dream. Sir T. Shepstone, over-persuading a dreamy, amiable, Colonial Secretary in Downing Street that he might become the Clive and Warren Hastings of a South-African Empire, and that if he did not, Bismarck would step in, or that France would put a finger in the pretty pie, procured his assent to the annexation of the territory of the South-African Republic, without the smallest reason or cause shown; that is, any reason or cause which would be allowed as valid in any Court of arbitration, or in the judgment of any national tribunal. All kinds of pretexts were trumped up for the wrong, and have been reproduced since, the favourite plea of the annexationists being that the Republic was bankrupt, and that it could not keep the peace with its "neighbours." But it was said, moreover, as it is said now, that the Boers are ignorant, that they are credulous, that they are incredulous, and that they are cowards. To be sure, it lately became rather buzzed about that they were good people enough; that they were fast becoming in love with our rule, that they were burning to pay their taxes, and that they would all turn out good subjects; but that agreeable theory has been very rudely knocked on the head by the uprising in which, if the reports of the numbers engaged be true, the mass of the Boers must have taken part. The intelligence, so far, from the Transvaal is not very clear. Some time last month, the editor of the Volksstein, the chief organ of the Boers, which is published at Pretoria, was arrested on a charge of sedition, because he had published a notice in his paper that the Volksraad—the old Republican Parlhaas—is the only body authorised to impose taxes, and that the Government of the South-African Republic was the only lawful Government of the Transvaal. There was no Volksraad, nor was there any South-African Republic in existence at the time, but it would seem that after Mr. Alliers had been arrested, that the Boers held a meeting at Heidelberg, which is about thirty miles from Pretoria, and proclaimed a national Government, and had taken measures to constitute a Valksraad. They appointed Mr. Paul Krüger and Mr. Joubert the President and Commandant of the Republic, and were, apparently, awaiting the action of the British Authorities when the mail left; but as the telegraph wires from Pretoria had been cut, there was no news of the proceedings of Sir Owen Lanyon, the Administrator, beyond the fact that he sent a detachment of infantry and two guns from Pretoria to Porchefstroom, where the Boers had resisted the Landdrost and the Sheriff, who had seized a Boer's waggon for the non-payment of taxes. There is now a report from Durban, dated December 23, that there has been an action with the Boers at Middelburg, in which 200 soldiers have been killed and 50 taken prisoners, but we are not inclined to credit such a serious piece of intelligence. It is to be hoped that it is quite untrue. The defeat of a British detachment would be a national calamity, for it could only lead to a struggle in which the Boers would be crushed, and the Dutch element in the Cape Colonies arrayed against the British for ever. It is scarcely possible that the Boers could have been in force both at Middleburg and Heidelberg, and the idea of their "attacking" Porchefstroom, which is a Boer town, and had no garrison, mentioned in one of the daily papers, is quite ridiculous. Sir O. Lanyon, who is Administrator, is a soldier of skill and courage, and his management of the Griqualand campaign, when he was at the Diamond Fields, showed that he knew his business thoroughly; but the force he had at his disposal was small and scattered, and the Boers, most if not all of whom are mounted and armed with Westley-Richards and other breech-loading rifles, though credited with little personal courage of late days, may prove to be very formidable antagonists, if they are driven to desperation. So far as we can make out, the main body of the Boers are at Heidelberg, where they cut the road between Pretoria and Natal. Sir O. Lanyon, at Pretoria, would not be able to co-operate with Sir G. Colley, who was hurrying up from Natal with all the troops he could spare, till the Boers at Heidelberg were defeated; and it may be that the action at Middleburg occurred in an attempt to turn their flank, or in a collision between the troops from Leydenburg and a body of the Boers sent to intercept them on their way to Pretoria or from Standerton. The aspect of affairs in South Africa becomes grave indeed, under the influence of this new complication; but we cannot believe that the Boers will be able to resist the regular troops, or that their temporary success will win for them the acknowledgement of their independence from the Government which they have set at defiance. The contest is, nevertheless, deplorable from every point of view, and the triumph of our arms in such a contest is only one degree less to be lamented than a defeat. It is to be feared that, in spite of all that has been said to the contrary, the Kafirs and the black races in the Transvaal would be inclined to side with rather than against the Boers. Those who were acquainted with the country and the people never doubted for one moment that the Boers would strike a blow to recover their independence, whenever they had a chance, and the Colonial Office has now to take account of such falsified prophecy and valueless assurances of the growing loyalty and contentment of the Dutch citizens, whose country we annexed, and whose government we destroyed.

The forthcoming Afghan gazette will be a very large one, as it will include all who have distinguished themselves since the organisation of the Cabul relief expedition, under General Roberts's command, in the autumn of last year.

We understand that it is probable that the 25th Regiment will be allowed to retain its present title of the "King's Own Borderers." If this is so, we congratulate Mr. Childers upon the good-sense which he has displayed in having yielded to the wishes of the officers and men of this distinguished regiment. But we hope yet to learn that the War Minister has gone a step further, and that when the new scheme sees the light the Borderers may be found to have been given a change of locale, and have changed their recruiting ground from York to some more congenial atmosphere north of the Tweed. A corps with such grand traditions has a right to expect that the fullest consideration should be shown to its antecedents, and as it is the desire of all those who represent the regiment that it should be again associated with Scotland, the War Office would be acting wisely in so arranging matters, that this point may be conceded.

We learn from Cyprus that the Local Pioneer Corps has now been amalgamated with the Island Military Police, the whole under the command of Brevet Lieutenant-Colonel A. H. A. Gordon, 65th Regiment, who has selected the following officers from the combined forces to assist him, viz.:—Captains the Hon. E. J. Chetwynd, 61st Regiment, and E. W. D. Croker, 93rd Highlanders; Lieutenants A. Gilmore, 61st Regiment; C. A. Hadfield, 98th Regiment; J. H. Bor, R.M.A.; and Lord John Kennedy, Royal Ayr Militia; and Mr. L. Olive.

We understand that Colonel H. R. L. Newdigate, C.B., half-pay, late of the Rifle Brigade, is likely to be offered the command of the Rifle Depôt at Winchester, in recognition of his services in command of a brigade in Afghanistan. Colonel Newdigate has the strongest claims, and his appointment would occasion general satisfaction in the brigade.

No promotions will take place in the Army Veterinary Department at present, consequent upon the retirement of Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon J. Tatam. It has been arranged to allow an officer of the Local Indian Service to enjoy the emoluments of the Inspectional grade for a few months, when he will take retirement, and be succeeded by Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon C. Steel, now at Dublin, who will be relieved by First-Class Veterinary Surgeon J. Lambert, from the Professorship of the Veterinary School at Aldershot, who will be promoted to the rank of Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeon. Only one retirement will take place during the ensuing year among the Inspecting Veterinary-Surgeons. Mr. A. J. Owles attains the prescribed age on June 21 next, when he will be retired. Mr. F. F. Collins, Principal Veterinary Surgeon in India, is put down in the official Army List as being 55 years of age on the 24th prox.; but this is an error, as the baptismal certificate and other records—a reference to which has been made—show that he is a year younger than he has been returned in official documents. He will, therefore, not be liable to retirement until January, 1882.

Six brigade-depôt commands fall vacant during the year 1881, under the five years' rule. These are the 68th, Galway, vice Colonel G. Bagot, on January 8; the 47th, Kingston-on-Thames, vice Colonel J. Sprot, on February 1; the 1st, Newcastle-on-Tyne (temporary at Berwick-on-Tweed), vice Colonel G. C. Lambert; and the 65th, Armagh, vice Colonel the Hon. B. M. Ward, on May 10; the 55th, Inverness (temporarily at Fort George) vice Colonel D. J. Baillie, on November 11; and the 21st, Shrewsbury, vice Colonel F. M. Colvile, C.B., on December 9. In addition to this, there will shortly be several appointments vacant in consequence of the promotion of the present incumbents. Among others, the following ought, in the ordinary course, to have to be given away between this and the 1st of April next, not to go further, viz.,—the 39th (Dorchester), vice Colonel S. Henning, C.B., the 51st-54th Rifle (Winchester), vice Colonel A. Wombwell; the 28th (Warwick), vice Colonel J. H. Dunne; and the 49th and 50th (Hounslow), vice Colonel R. A. Logan, C.B. In making these calculations we presume that the authorities will accord the steps already due to the senior Colonels, and that there will be a certain number of deaths among officers on the "fixed establishment," before the sweeping change is introduced which the head of the War Office has it in contemplation to carry out next year, as regards the promotion of officers to General's rank.

The following officers attain the age of seventy in the course of the ensuing year, viz.:—General J. T. Hill, Colonel 75th Regiment, on January 10; General Sir R. Wilbraham, K.C.B., Colonel 88th Regiment, on April 12; Major-General J. H. C. Robertson, on April 22; Lieutenant-General J. A. Cole, on May 8; General H. Rigny, Royal (late Bengal) Engineers, on May 10; General J. R. Stuart, C.B., Colonel, 54th Regiment, on June 18; General W. H. Askwith, Royal Artillery, on September 7; Major-General A. W. Murray, C.B., on October 15; General W. N. Custance, C.B., Colonel 11th Hussars, on October 24; and Lieutenant-General J. H. Wingfield, on November 11.

Five steps will fall to the senior officers of the Army Medical Department in the course of the ensuing year, under the operations of the age clause in the Royal Warrant. The first vacancy will occur on the 9th prox., when Surgeon-General H. Kendall, M.D., attains the prescribed age. Deputy Surgeon-General T. O'Leary, M.D., will retire on May 5; Surgeon-General D. R. Mackinnon on May 21; Surgeon-General G. A. F. Shelton, M.B., on October 23; and Surgeon-General J. A. W. Thompson, M.D., on November 13. As the appointment of Director-General will have to be vacated by Sir William Muir on April 1, there should be in all five promotions for the deputy surgeons-general, which would take up Deputy Surgeons-General S. H. Fasson, M.D., M. F. Manifold, A. Smith, M.D., C.B., R. Gilborne, and J. S. Furlong, M.D., leaving Deputy Surgeon-General J. L. Holloway, C.B., the senior of his rank.

The Range-finder Committee at the War Office has been called upon to report on a new range-finder submitted by the Macrometer Company, Limited. The instrument is very portable, and report speaks most highly of its accuracy both at long and short distances.

Lieutenant-Colonel Abbot Anderson, late 18th Foot, resigned his appointment as instructor in military surveying at the Royal Military College, on the 15th inst. Colonel Anderson's connection with the College dates from 1862, since which time he has fulfilled his duties in such a manner as to earn the thanks and praises of the several governors under whom he has served. Before separating for the vacation, his brother-officers entertained him at dinner, and through the commandant expressed their sorrow at parting with one who for so many years had exerted himself to maintain the high credit of the institution.

By an oversight, a statement that General Brooke was the first British General killed "since Waterloo" was allowed to appear without correction in last week's paper. It should have been "since the Indian Mutiny." In the Crimea, General Strangways, Sir G. Cathcart, Brigadier Goldie, and Brigadier Yea were killed or died of wounds; and General Churchill, Sir R. Dick, and Sir J. McCaskill, and Sir R. Sale were killed before that war, in the Sutlej campaign. Cureton was killed at Ramnuggur, and Penny was killed at Kukrowlie in the Mutiny.

When we read that such a weapon or such an invention has been adopted by any particular nation, after a series of experiments, we are puzzled to account for the results in each case, as one country will take a system which another has rejected, and a third will select one which has been passed over by the other two, and so on. The question resolves itself into one of actual confidence in the ability and honesty of those who make the experiments; and in the case of British officers, no one, thank Heaven! questions professional skill or personal integrity. We are led to these reflections by the announcement that the Hotchkiss revolving cannon has been chosen for the Russian Navy, after two years' experiments, in which the Nordenfelt—which has been selected for the British Navy—the Engström, and the Baranoffsky systems were tested. In a trial with the last-named system, the inventor, who gave it his name, was killed, by the breech blowing out; but we do not know the reasons why the Russian officers preferred the Hotchkiss to the Nordenfelt. The first is a cannon, the second is a mitrailleur.

ALEXANDRA, Capt. Lord Walter Kerr, flagship of Vice-Admiral Sir B. Seymour, was at Malta up to the 13th inst. The Alexandra was to be ready for sea on the 24th inst.

ASSISTANCE, Capt. C. E. Buckle, received sudden orders on Friday, last week, to hold herself in readiness for the conveyance of troops to Ireland, but no information was afforded as to whether they would be likely to be infantry or cavalry. It had been settled that she should be taken in hand at Portsmouth to make good defects and have her boilers overhauled. Arrangements had been made for some of the officers to proceed on leave, but these arrangements had to be countermanded, and last night the ship was officially reported ready for service. The Assistance sailed on Thursday.

BITTERN, Com. Pusey, leaves Malta for Constantinople about the 27th inst.

BRUISER, Lieut.-Com. L. Fanshawe, which left Plymouth on Thursday of last week for Queenstown, met with a heavy gale going down Channel, and had to put into Falmouth in the evening for shelter.

COCKATRICE, Com. H. T. Grenfell, arrived at Malta last week from Constantinople.

CONDOR, Com. E. Day, which arrived at Malta on Dec. 12 from Brindisi, experienced very heavy weather before leaving the Adriatic; lost a jibboom, and had to batten down.

CROCODILE, Capt. Doughty, arrived at Malta on Dec. 17 from Gibraltar. After disembarking 14 officers and 330 men of the R.A., she proceeded for Bombay.

DIDO, Capt. Domvile. Intelligence from Accra, Nov. 18, states that some disagreements having taken place between the King and the Colonial Government, a very hostile attitude was assumed by the people, including the Fantees, so much so that it was considered dangerous to arrest the principals. No ships-of-war were in port at the time, a fact which made the situation more critical; but while things were in a very uncertain state, H.M.S. Foam was seen off the port, and the King was at once privately arrested by order of the Governor, and detained until the Foam was communicated with, when he was quietly conveyed on board. H.M.S. Dido arrived soon afterwards, and the King was tried and sentenced to 16 years' imprisonment. She would sail for St. Paul de Loando on arrival of outward mail.

EXPRESS. Lieut. Hugh George Gough, who is appointed to the command of this vessel at Gibraltar, dated from Jan. 1, 1881, served as supernumerary sub-lieut. in the Achilles, Capt. E. W. Vansittart, C.B., with the Channel Squadron, from Dec. 30, 1867, until Jan. 14, 1869, when he was appointed to the Juno, Capt. Edward Harding, in lieu of a navigating sub-lieut., and on July 12 following was transferred to the Ocean, Capt. C. S. Stanhope, under the flag, in China, of Vice-Admiral Sir Henry Kellett, K.C.B., and remained until June, 1870. He was promoted to the rank of lieut. Oct. 22 following, and served in the Hercules, Capt. W. M. Dowell, C.B., with the Channel Squadron, from May 21, 1872, until the spring of 1874. He subsequently served in the Royal yacht Osborne, Coms. Francis Durrant and Hugo L. Pearson, from July 11, 1874, until Sept., 1877; and has been flag-lieut. in the Duke of Wellington, Capts. the Hon. W. C. Carpenter and Sir M. Culme-Seymour, Bart., under the flag, at Portsmouth, of Admirals E. G. Fanshawe, C.B., and Alfred P. Ryder, since March 1, 1878.

FLIRT, Com. Brackenbury, C.M.G.. will assemble with the Squadron at Ascension by Jan. 9.

FOAM, Lieut.-Com. Baker, will take over duties of senior officer, Bights Division, until relieved by the Flirt or Pioneer, and will then proceed to St. Helena and Ascension.

GRIFFON, Com. Boardman, arrived on Nov. 18 at St. Croix, and would leave for St. Kitts on the 23rd inst.

HECLA, Capt. Singer, leaves Malta for Corfu about the 27th inst.

HELICON, Lieut.-Com. Morrison, will be paid off on Dec. 31, and recommissioned on the 1st prox. at Malta.

HIMALAYA, Capt. Brent. which was expected to arrive at Portsmouth on Monday, with the 2nd Batn. Rifle Brigade, and the 3rd and 8th Companies Royal Engineers from Gibraltar, was ordered to call at Queenstown and disembark the battalion, which was originally destined for Woolwich, and she did not reach Portsmouth until Wednesday.

INFLEXIBLE. When we have done congratulating ourselves on the successful trials of the Inflexible, it will be well, perhaps, to consider the policy of building such an enormous vessel from a point of view from which it has hitherto been very insufficiently regarded. However gratifying it may be to naval constructors to design and complete ships-of-war which in size and costliness immeasurably surpass those of former days, and however exhilarating to the architect may be the race which he runs with members of his profession in other countries in adding an inch or two to the armour-plating or a dozen tons or so to the guns that can be carried by his ships, the views of the persons who have to command and fight his creations deserve a certain share of attention. It may, therefore, be asked if the latter are likely to court, with the same readiness that has hitherto characterised them, the innumerable risks of war, when the value of the material at stake is so enormous. In the new number of the Revue des Deux Mondes, M. Paul Merruau, giving an account of the Navy of the Italians, who have pushed the building of gigantic ships to the farthest limit, makes a remark which is worth repeating. He says:—"These ruinously costly constructions often exert a very deplorable moral influence on the bravest captains, and may cool their courage. To have the charge and responsibility of a ship worth £600,000 or £700,000 is a thought which causes great circumspection." When ships were numerous and comparatively inexpensive and quickly built, the risk of losing one, when called on to perform a difficult service, was but little thought of. Is it the same now? Will it be the same in a future war? M. Merruau, in noticing the remarkable difference between the devoted gallantry of the French seamen in the late war before Paris and the unenterprising tactics of the same men when on board the costly armour-clads of the North-Sea Squadron off the Prussian coasts, can only account for the contrast, which was then unquestionably presented, by attributing the prudence of the Navy afloat to the crushing weight of the responsibility felt by those to whose charge a vast sum of national money and a serious fraction of the national strength were entrusted, as it were, in a single parcel. The views of our own Naval officers on this matter should prove interesting."—Pall Mall Gazette.

INVINCIBLE, Capt. the Hon. E. Fremantle, C.B., was to be ready for sea at Malta on the 18th inst., and sails for Gibraltar about the 27th inst.

IRON DUKE, Capt. Cleveland, flagship of Vice-Admiral Robert Coote, C.B., arrived at Hong Kong from Shanghai and Amoy on the 18th inst.

JUMNA, Capt. Church, left Portsmouth on Saturday morning for Bombay with Indian reliefs, comprising drafts from various corps, her military complement being 65 officers, 17 ladies, 10 children, 1,061 rank and file, 82 women, and 105 children.

MINOTAUR, Capt. Rawson, bearing the flag of Vice-Admiral Hood, with the Agincourt, Capt. Murray, flagship of Rear-Admiral Somerset, second-in-command; the Northumberland, Capt. Wratislaw; and the Achilles, Capt. Kelly, have arrived at Lisbon to spend Christmas. "While at Vigo," a correspondent writes, "we have enjoyed the most perfect weather, which has been doubly pleasant after the buffeting we experienced on our way from Queenstown. It has not been altogether peace and quietness though, as all the ships have had to complete with coal, steam colliers having been ordered to meet us here for that purpose, and we have had to make up for an enforced abstention from drill, owing to the bad weather, while at drill; so that, in addition to the usual morning and evening evolutions, we have manned and armed boats, got out stream anchors and cables, and prepared for action. A fatal accident occurred on board the Northumberland during the execution of this last evolution, the foretop-gallant yard striking an unfortunate seaman, who was killed instantaneously. The Spanish papers seemed rather perplexed at a seaman being buried with a ceremony which in their service, they stated, was reserved for officers of superior rank only. Other things also seem by the Vigo papers to have been exercising the Spanish mind, notably our fondness for long walks and playing lawn-tennis, and our habit of carrying a gun on every possible opportunity, and very seldom shooting anything. The climate here at this time of the year is perfect, the roads good, and the country very pretty and fertile. At a court-martial on board the Agincourt, an able seaman of the Achilles has been sentenced for a gross act of insubordination in striking a petty officer, who discovered him smuggling spirits on board, to five years' penal servitude. During our stay at Vigo the officers have been made honorary members of the Casino de Vigo, the committee of which gave a very pleasant dance, to which we were all invited. The rooms were very prettily decorated, and the affair was a great success, albeit English and Spanish ideas about dancing seemed somewhat to differ—especially in the waltzes."

MONARCH, Capt. Geo. Tryon, C.B., will be ready for sea at Malta on the 27th inst., and proceeds to Cyprus.

ORONTES, Capt. Kinahan, arrived at Queenstown from Devonport on the 17th inst., and left same day for Gibraltar.

RALEIGH, Capt. Jago, recently arrived home from Australia, is to be paid off on Jan. 8, instead of 14th, as proposed.

SEAGULL. A correspondent, writing to the Western Daily Mercury on Nov. 21, says:—"We left Aden on the 2nd inst., and arrived here to-day, calling at Mokha, Hodeidah, and Massowah en route on the look-out for the slave-traders, many of which are known to be driving a brisk trade between here and Arabia, but, as yet, we have not been successful in capturing, although we have had several smart chases. Much sickness has prevailed among our small crew of ninety—not more than half remaining of those who left England in the vessel less than two years ago. Of our ten officers, three only are left, the rest having been invalided. Several have suffered, and are still suffering, severely from prickly heat and fever, the natural corollary of young inexperienced hands being sent for a first voyage on the most sickly and trying station known."

SUPERB, Capt. Le Hunte Ward, arrived at Malta from Gibraltar on the 13th inst., and will cruise off Sicily visiting Syracuse.

TAMAR, Capt. Royse, left Plymouth Sound on Friday evening for Gibraltar, to embark the 97th Regt.

TÉMÉRAIRE, Capt. the Hon. W. Carpenter, will be paid off at Malta on the 31st inst., and recommissioned on the 1st prox.

THUNDERER, Capt. P. Columb, was, on the 13th inst., at Malta, under examination.

VALOROUS, Capt. Morant, arrived at Queenstown Dec. 8, and left again on Dec. 11 for Glengariff, where she arrived on the 12th; left Glengariff on the 14th, and arrived at Galway on the 15th, where she remains as senior officer's ship.

The under-mentioned men have been awarded the medal for long service and good conduct:—William Newell, serjeant of the Royal Marines, and Joseph Viggers, leading stoker, of the Valorous; Michael Murphy, chief boatman-in-charge, and John Howell, commissioned boatman, of the Coastguard; George Thomas, skilled carpenter, mate of the Minotaur; Thomas Neill, captain of the hold, of the Himalaya; George R. Pitcher, plumber, Robert Evans, leading seaman, and Charles Emery, first-class domestic, of the Tamar.

Malta is quite alive again now. With so large a muster of ships-of-war in harbour, trade, &c., on shore has become very brisk, and promises fair to continue so for some time to come. There are now 17 ships there, with a complement of over 4,000 men, and the health of the squadron is excellent, the total number in hospital being only 42. Of this number, 17 are from the Cruiser. In consequence of some slight fever cases breaking out on board, she is ordered to keep cruising at sea, to recruit in health.—Western Daily Mercury.

The promotion of Staff Surg. G. Harrison to the rank of fleet-surgeon affords a striking instance of the different rates of promotion existing in different branches of the Service. In the same ship as that in which Fleet-Surg. Harrison is serving, the Modeste, his brother is paymaster. The doctor is but a very few years older than the Paymaster, but the difference in their position is very great. As a fact, the Paymaster was in the Navy before his brother, and while one is a fleet-surgeon of 1880, the other remains a paymaster of 1875, and a paymaster, without any additional handles of "Staff" or "Fleet," will he remain until retired on account of age. One would scarcely imagine that such a difference could exist in the careers of two brothers in the same Service, under regulations prepared by the same department. But this shows the result of the piecemeal legislation meted out to the Navy under existing arrangements.—Hampshire Telegraph.

ROWLAND'S ODONTO is the purest and most fragrant Tooth Powder ever used, and contains no acid or mineral ingredients, which are so detrimental to the teeth and gums. All who have a good set of teeth, and wish to keep them, should use it; and they who, by early neglect or ill-health, suffer from discoloured or imperfect teeth, which are the forerunners of dyspepsia and indigestion, will find that ROWLAND'S ODONTO will keep them sound and white, and prevent and arrest decay. Its purity especially adapts it for the teeth of young children. Ask any chemist for Rowland's Odonto.

THE INFLEXIBLE TRIALS.

The results of the trials of the 80-ton guns of the Inflexible, which were anticipated with anxiety, were deemed highly satisfactory. Her behaviour when sustaining the effects of a discharge of a projectile of 1,700 lb., with a charge of 450 lb. of powder, was satisfactory, for while the ship seemed to be lifted, articles of furniture in the cabins were not displaced. The steam trial which took place on Saturday morning, on the measured mile in Stokes Bay, proved that the machinery of the ship is equal to the requirements, although the horse-power and speed were not quite equal to that obtained on the sea trial made some time ago. On Saturday she entered upon the trial under the disadvantage of having been under steam during the three previous days, so that her boilers were not in so favourable a condition for obtaining the maximum results as in the previous trial. The day was favourable for the trial, the force of the wind being about 4, with a smooth sea. The Inflexible is fitted with vertical compound engines, with three cylinders, one high pressure, 70 inches, and the other two low pressure, 90 inches; the length of the stroke being 4 ft. There are four distinct stokeholes or boiler-rooms, each containing three boilers, with groups of two, three, and four furnaces to each set. The draught of water forward was 21 ft. 2 in., and aft 23 ft. 2 in. The engines were in charge of Mr. J. C. Hefferman, the chief engineer of the ship. The results of four runs at full-boiler power were as under:—Steam in boilers, 57·37; vacuum—starboard, 27; aft, 26·75; port, 26; aft, 26·75; revolutions per minute—starboard, 77·45; port, 76·50; mean pressure—high-pressure cylinder starboard, 26·50; port, 27·0; low-pressure ditto—starboard, 8·575; port, 8·35; indicated horse-power—starboard engine, high, 1,914·49, low, 2,048·24; port, high, 1,927·38, low, 1,970·67; total indicated horse-power—starboard, 3,962·73; port, 3,898·05; collective indicated horse-power, 7,860·78. The speed realised from the four runs was 14·286 knots. On the first trial, when the ship made 14¾ knots, and the engines developed 8,487, instead of the guaranteed 8,000 horse-power, she was fitted with two-bladed propellers, but in consequence of the great amount of vibration produced these were removed and four-bladed ones, having a less pitch than the others, substituted, and since the change, although on Saturday the engines made something like three revolutions per minute more than on the former trial, there was a falling-off in the rate of speed and in the indicated horse-power. It is supposed by some that the pitch of the screw is rather too small. The engines worked without a hitch, and the ventilation in the stokeholes was satisfactory. On Saturday afternoon the Inflexible returned into Portsmouth Harbour, and was placed in one of the large basins of the dockyard, preparatory to being completed for commission, she having also to receive the fourth of her 80-ton guns.

ROYAL NAVAL COLLEGE PRIZES.

With a view to the encouragement of scientific study at the Royal Naval College, the Admiralty has issued the following regulations by Fleet Circular 48 N:—1. The arrangement under Circular No. 8 C, of Jan. 30, 1873, by which prizes of £100, £80, and £50, are paid for three years, is cancelled, except as regards the present holders. 2. Prizes of the same total value will be awarded as stated below, so soon as the new arrangements come fully into operation, and the entire amount of each prize will, in future, be paid in one sum. (Class a.)—Three prizes of £100, £80, and £50 respectively; in order of merit for general proficiency. (Class b.)—Two prizes of £80 each; for the gunnery and torpedo lieutenant gaining the highest marks in their respective courses. (Class c.)—Six prizes of £50 each for the officers gaining the highest marks in the following subjects, viz.:—I. Pure and applied mathematics. II. Physics and chemistry. III. Navigation and nautical astronomy, including marine surveying. IV. Marine engineering and naval architecture. V. Fortification and other military subjects. VI. Foreign languages. 3. The prizes specified above will be open to executive and navigating officers above the rank of sub-lieutenant, and to marine officers either above the rank of subaltern, or of eight years' standing in that rank who have served three years at sea, subject to the following provisions:—I. Officers undergoing the gunnery and torpedo courses will only be allowed to compete for the prizes specially appropriated to them (Class b in Art. 2). II. An officer will not be allowed to take more than one prize at the conclusion of any one session, and will not be eligible for a prize identical in description with one which he may have already received. III. The award of prizes will be dependent on the attainment of a certain standard of proficiency, to be hereafter determined. IV. Officers will not be eligible to compete for the prizes of Class c, Art. 2, unless they have attended the College lectures on the particular subject in which they compete.

TEMPORARY ARRANGEMENTS.—4. As, owing to the three years' duration of prizes already granted, a part only of the amount annually provided for the purpose will be available for new prizes until June, 1883, their Lordships have been pleased to sanction the grant of the following prizes at the close of the sessions 1880-81 and 1881-82, viz.:—1880-81—One prize of £80 for the gunnery or torpedo lieutenant gaining the highest number of marks in their special courses (Class b in Art. 2); three prizes of £50 each for proficiency in subjects I. to III. (Class c in Art. 2). 1881-82—Two prizes of £80 each for the gunnery and torpedo lieutenant gaining the highest number of marks in their special courses (Class b in Art. 2); six prizes of £50 each for proficiency in subjects I. to VI. (Class c in Art. 2).

On Monday a considerable party of Blue-jackets left the Royal Naval Barracks at Sheerness for Portsmouth to join the Duke of Wellington, whence they will be drafted into other ships, there being but few men available at Portsmouth for that purpose.

ANSWERS TO CORRESPONDENTS.

AN OLD SOLDIER.—We have had the subject of your letter as to the way in which Quartermasters of the C.O.S.S. and others will be affected by the new badges under careful consideration, and think nothing would be gained by publishing the complaint. White hair is not a qualification for promotion, and it is useless to say that a class of officers shall be eligible for what they have not the least chance of obtaining, under present circumstances. An immediate change of system is not likely.

A SENIOR SUB.—Your letter is not written in a proper spirit, and therefore we consider it right to suppress it.

COMPLEX.—The publication of your letter would perhaps do you serious injury.

LIEUTENANT-COLONEL OF MIDDLESEX R.V. has not sent us his name.

C. E. T.—We do not think it advisable to give insertion to the remarks you send us, which would only be taken advantage of by those agitators who are so ready at all times to traduce the British soldier.

"OUT OF IT."—1. "Bogie" can ride—not well, perhaps, but sedulously. 2. We never heard any statement to the effect you mention. 3. As to making "wry faces," no wonder! Just think of the Christmas they are spending.

R.N.A.V. (Liverpool).—Want of space alone prevented the insertion of the Report.

HALF-PAY.—The Navy has a good friend in you, but we cannot find room for verses.

A NAVAL VICTIM.—The length of your letter caused it to be crowded out. We hope that officers who have commuted are now more fully alive to the danger of "going into the City" than they were. There have been so many victims.

Notice has been given that preparations are being made for the distribution of the amount awarded for salvage services rendered to the steamer Vortigern, between Feb. 2 and 12, 1879, by the Daphne. Due notice will be given of the date proposed for the commencement of distribution; and, at the same time, the amount of an individual's share in the respective classes will be announced.

HENGLER'S GRAND CIRQUE.—One of the best exponents of the haute école that we have seen for many years in this country (Mdme. Oceana) is now performing at Hengler's Cirque. Having perfect control of her steed, "Seerauber," and evincing that amount of nerve seldom found out of the hunting-field, we can conscientiously recommend all who desire to see a perfect horsewoman to pay a visit to Hengler's, where the whole entertainment is replete with interest and amusement.

DR. DE JONGH'S LIGHT-BROWN COD LIVER OIL.—SURPASSINGLY EFFICACIOUS AS A RESTORATIVE MEDICINE AND FOOD.—Dr. Whitmore, Medical Officer of Health, St. Marylebone, writes:—"My own somewhat lengthened experience as a Medical Practitioner enables me with confidence to recommend Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, as being more uniform in quality, more certain in its effects, more palatable, and infinitely less likely to disagree with the stomach than the Pale Oil. The practice which often prevails of mixing certain ingredients with Cod Liver Oil, to render it agreeable to the taste, is highly objectionable, for we have it on the authority of Dr. de Jongh himself, that anything which sophisticates it, takes largely from its therapeutic value. If I were asked for an explanation of the marked success which for so many years has attended the administration of Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil, I should say that it is owing to its extraordinary medicinal, dietetic, and regiminal properties, and which are found to exist in no other medicine that I am acquainted with, in such uniform combination." Dr. de Jongh's Light-Brown Cod Liver Oil is sold only in capsuled imperial half-pints, 2s 6d; pints, 4s 9d; quarts, 9s; with his stamp and signature, and the signature of his sole consignees on the capsule and the label under wrapper, by all Chemists. Sole Consignees, Ansar, Harford, and Co., 77 Strand, London.

COOPER COOPER and CO. undertake to answer the oft-heard question,—Why is Tea so dear? and they say that it is simply because the public in this, as in other matters, are powerless to insist on having their share of the advantages which result from falling markets. Tea, in fact, was never so cheap to buy since it was first imported into England, as may be easily ascertained by a reference to the current market reports, and yet relatively the retail price was never so exorbitant. Now Cooper Cooper and Co. have resolved to rectify this discrepancy, and to this end they undertake to SELL the BEST TEAS that can be purchased at their respective prices at a small commission only on the actual prices paid to the importers. This system of business is specially intended to bring the public into partnership, as it were, or at all events to enable them to become participators in the great margin of profit which lies between the wholesale and retail price of tea. COOPER COOPER and CO.'S prices will be found to be ninepence per pound less money than those usually charged for identical qualities.

COOPER COOPER and CO. sell any quantity, from a quarter of a pound upwards. They have original packages of all these TEAS—the Black in chests holding about 95 pounds, in half-chests about 50 pounds, and catty boxes about 20 pounds each. These are lined with lead, and will keep the Tea good and fresh for a very long period.

COOPER COOPER and CO. will charge three-pence a package (of any size) for delivering their TEAS at any of the railway stations in London, or any place within the limits of the London Parcels Delivery Company, thus putting all on an equality; those who send for their Tea, and those who require it sent.

AS COOPER COOPER and CO.'S prices are net at their warehouses, this system of charging for delivery cannot fail to approve itself to the public. If Teas in small parcels can be delivered free at any distance, there must be a proportionate profit charged for it, and this is charged on all the Tea sold. COOPER COOPER and CO. make a uniform charge for delivery, as the expense to them is the same in delivering a small parcel of Tea as a large one.

COOPER COOPER and CO. forward their TEAS to all parts of the world on receipt of post-office orders or bankers' drafts for the amount, including 3d for delivery at the railway station; but Cooper Cooper and Co. do not pay railway carriage. As their prices are fully 9d a pound under the prices usually charged for Teas of a lower character, the item of railway carriage cannot be of importance to those living in the country.

FAMILIES residing in the country can, by joining together to divide the expense of railway carriage, save 9d a pound in the price of their TEA, by sending to COOPER COOPER and CO.; or Cooper Cooper and Co. will pay railway carriage on parcels of the value of £2 and upwards to any station in England, on receipt of 9d in addition to the cost of the tea.

COOPER COOPER and CO.'S prices are for net cash only, without discount.

WATCHES.—JEWELLERY.—WATCHES.

The Rev. Robt. Cass, Settle, Yorkshire, writes February 19, 1880:—"The Ladies' Gold Lever Watch received from you for 70s in size, workmanship, and beautiful appearance, resembles a watch usually sold at £10. It gives entire satisfaction."

The Rev. James Arthur Kemp, Lew Down, North Devon, also writes, March 8, 1880:—"The watch I ordered of you at 25s, for my servant, arrived quite safely, and I am exceedingly well pleased with it in every way. It is an excellent timekeeper, very neat and handsome in appearance, and in my opinion worth far more than those that cost treble the money. I do not think anybody should be without a watch, when they can obtain from you such an excellent article at so reasonable a price."

From Mr. J. J. HARRIS, Schoolmaster, 2nd-18th the Royal Irish Regiment, Aldershot, Sept. 22, 1880.

"I am very much pleased with everything I have had from your Company. The watch (25s) has proved to be an excellent one, and is a marvel of cheapness. It is fully equal to, or indeed superior to, many I have seen purchased by regimental clubs for treble the money. I am positive your Company will prove itself a boon to Army men at home and abroad, particularly the latter, who are often compelled to pay enormous prices for very inferior articles indeed. Your Company is deserving of every success, and I deem it a duty, to you and the Army, to become an amateur agent, unpaid."

THE MIDLAND COUNTIES WATCH COMPANY supply their celebrated Watches direct to wearers, at very lowest wholesale cash prices. They guarantee watches supplied by them to be most perfect timekeepers, and honestly assert their price to be under one-half those charged by watchmakers; and as a guarantee of good-faith they undertake to return the full amount paid for any Watch if not to the satisfaction of the purchaser.

The Company's chief manufacture are their celebrated Crystal Glasses, which dispense with all risk of breakage. Their LADIES' and GENTLEMEN'S SILVER WATCHES, at 25s, and their LADIES' GOLD LEVERS, at 70s, are acknowledged to be the cheapest Watches in the world.

Catalogues, containing list of testimonials, and beautifully illustrated descriptions of more expensive watches, gold and silver jewellery, electroplate, &c., are sent gratis on application. We may safely assert that the prices in same will be a surprise to all who see them.

GENTLEMEN'S FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, heavy cased, superior movement, 25s.

LADIES' FINE SILVER, handsomely engraved, flat crystal glass, highly-finished movements, 25s.

YOUTHS' FINE SILVER, flat crystal glass, highly-finished movements, 25s.

LADIES' very heavy cased GOLD LEVERS, in exquisitely chased cases, with highly-finished extra-jewelled movements, 70s.

These watches are frequently sold for treble the money.

Cheques or Post-Office Orders must be made payable to the Company's Manager,

Mr. S. HISSEY, Vyse Street, Birmingham.

On receipt of which any watch will be registered post free to any part of the United Kingdom, and for 2s 6d per watch extra to any part of the postal world.

PERFECTLY PAINLESS DENTISTRY.—NITROUS OXIDE GAS.—
By the use of this, the most simple, speedy, and successful agent, after an experience of 45,000 cases, Mr. B. L. MOSELY, the Dentist, Member of the College of Dentists, England, and original intro-ducer of this Gas, guarantees entire immunity from pain in every operation pertaining to Dental Surgery, and successful painless adaptation of artificial teeth. The daily experience of Hospital and extensive private practice demonstrates that, unlike every other anæsthetic, the Nitrous Oxide Gas is innocuous and even pleasant, while want of success or the least pain is simply impossible. For confirmation of this, vide
Lancet, British Medical Journal, of 15th January, 1870, and opinions of leading members of the faculty.
In the use of Mr. B. L. Mosely's Painless Artificial Teeth, the following results may be confidently relied on. All loose Teeth are permanently fastened, and the Artificial Teeth as firm in the mouth as the natural.
Such entire comfort, combined with a fit so perfect is secured by this spécialité that the wearer, so far from being inconvenienced by his Artificial Teeth, is actually uncomfortable without them. In appearance and in use, both for eating and speaking, they are precisely the same as natural teeth—there is no difference whatever.

"Ease and comfort most apparent, while mastication appears completely provided for."—Advertiser.

From the Lancet, April 2nd, 1870 (p. 480).—"The reasons why we advocate the use of Nitrous Oxide Gas are 'Its safety;' 'The rapidity with which anæsthesia can be induced, viz., from 50 to 100 seconds;' 'Because it is actually pleasant to inhale, and therefore fright and mental distress are avoided;' 'Because recovery is usually bright, pleasant, and complete, after-discomfort being extremely rare.'

MOORGATE STATION BUILDINGS, LONDON, E.C.

THIS Company has been formed for the further development of the very profitable and rapidly increasing business of Assurance against Accidents, including allowances for partial or total disablement.

Although in proportion to the number of persons daily meeting with slight or serious accidents only a very small number is Assured, the Companies already engaged in transacting this class of business are rapidly progressing, one Company having now a premium income of over £214,000 per annum.

Accident Assurance is daily becoming more and more popular, and only requires greater facilities to make it as universal as Fire and Life Assurance.

With the view of securing a large field for fresh enterprise, and to extend its benefits to the working-classes, a new and important feature in this Company will be the Industrial Department, to be worked on similar principles, as far as practicable, to the Prudential Assurance Company's Industrial Branch, which, during the year 1879, received in premiums the enormous sum of £1,407,143 10s 6d, collected in pence from the working-classes, and has conferred such great benefits on thousands of families, and at the same time been so remunerative to the Shareholders.

"In all human probability, Industrial Insurance will become one of the grand Institutions of future generations. If this country is to be prosperous, a system of thrift must be built up from the very lowest—the foundations of our population. The poor and helpless must be rescued from their poverty and helplessness, and placed on a footing that will give them that self-help which frugality and industry alone can supply."—Insurance Journal.

In addition to Individual Insurances, the Company will issue Floating Policies to Employers of Labour, which will cover the risk of accident to any of their Employés.

The Employers' Liability Bill, having passed, will come into operation on the 1st January, 1881, and will open up a large area for this class of Insurance. In the House of Commons, on the 23rd August, in reply to Mr. Thompson, the Attorney-General said:—"It would be perfectly legal to employers of labour to insure themselves against liability for injuries arising from the negligence of their agents. That was a form of Insurance which constantly occurred in Marine Insurances, in which shipowners insured themselves against the consequences of negligence on the part of the captains of their ships. In the same way, mine-owners or any other employers of labour could insure themselves against the negligence of their agents. The form of Insurance would not be on the life of the workman, because the employer would have no interest in that life; but the employer could insure himself against risk of liability."

The Company will also insure Mariners and Passengers against loss of Baggage and Personal Effects, and against Loss of Life by Accidents at Sea. As the Maritime population of the United Kingdom and the number of persons constantly travelling all over the world on business or pleasure is so vast, there is no doubt that, under judicious management, this branch will prove very profitable.

The Company will undertake to guarantee the fidelity of persons in situations of trust, and officials appointed by the High Court of Justice, Local Government Boards, Municipal Corporations, &c. The facilities afforded by Guarantee Societies for dispensing with private sureties present a threefold benefit—self-dependence on the part of the employé, security on the part of the employer, and removal of risk and responsibility from individual suretiship.

The very profitable nature of Accident Assurance business, when properly managed, is evidenced by the fact that one Company has for years paid Dividends and Bonuses amounting to nearly 200 per cent. per annum on the original price of the Shares, while another Company's Shares have increased in value over 3,300 per cent.

The present issue of one-half the Capital is made at par, in order to comply with the Rules of the London Stock Exchange.

The Shares will be allotted in the order of priority of application, and in the event of no Allotment being made, the deposit will be returned immediately, without deduction; and should a less number of Shares be allotted than applied for, the balance of deposit will be credited towards the payment on Allotment.

No promotion money in any shape will be paid, and the preliminary expenses will be limited to the necessary Costs of Registration, Legal and Incidental Expenses, &c., incurred in establishing the Company.

The Memorandum and Articles of Association can be inspected at the Company's Offices, where every information may be obtained.

Prospectuses and Forms of Application for Shares can be obtained from the Bankers, Brokers, or Solicitors, and at the Offices of the Company.

The List of Applications for London will be closed January 4, and for the Country January 5, 1881.

Printed and Published for the Proprietors, at the Office, No. 16 Wellington Street, Strand, London.—SATURDAY, Dec. 25, 1880. Letters on Business and Remittances should be made to Mr. RICHARD JAMES WOOD.
